THE CHOICE OF THE MULTITUDE

JAPAN WILL FIGHT ANYONE FOR INDIES, SAYS WRITER

Three Significant Points in Status Quo Statements Reveal Nippon Stand

Editor's Note: There are three significant points in the Japanese Government's declarations concerning maintenance of the status quo of the Netherlands East Indies, on April 15 and May 11, says Kohsaku Tamura in a recent issue of the Chugai Shogyo. The article is translated as follows:

As to the significance and range of the Tokyo Government's proclamation expressing her deep concern about the status quo of the Dutch East Indies, varied comments are being heard from abroad. In view of the declaration being of an important nature for the Japanese Government, there must be no misleading interpretation of the purport of the statement. It would not be much out of place, therefore, to try to survey here the true meaning of the declaration, especially at this juncture when a substantial part of the Netherlands Lowlands reportedly have fallen into hands of the Nazi forces.

THREE IMPLICATIONS

In my (Mr. Tamura's) view, there are three implications contained in the said statement of the Japanese Government. Firstly, it was through the same proclamation that Japan could announce to the world that she has no territorial ambitions on the Pacific Islands; what she really wants is simply an amicable economic alliance with these islands.

Japan will be quite satisfied if she can obtain what she needs freely from the East Indies for moderate prices, if Japanese goods are exported to the islands without a hitch and if the Japanese residents there can safely engage in their daily occupations. As long as Japan's investments in and skill directed to the islands are not rejected, there is nothing to complain of on our side. It is so far from Japan to have any sinister design on the islands themselves. These have been explicitly announced by the recent statement.

If, however, any portion of the islands' natives have been misled to believe that the Japanese have some secret designs on the Indies' territory the situation would be highly to our regret. And, in fact, there is an ample proof of this deporable state existing in the islands, and that of very long standing.

JAPANESE SURPRISED

Twenty-six years ago, on August 15, 1914 to be exact, Japan first decided on participating in the Great War, when, it is recorded as one of the episodes of these turbulent times, the then Foreign Minister of Japan Takaakira Kato, had a call from the Dutch Minister to Japan, who surprisedly remarked: "Well then, was it really the case of Japan from the first that she had no territorial ambition on the East Indies?"

Then, it was not limited to the Dutch Government that had such a mistaken concept of the Japanese ambition. Even the late Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary at that time, betrayed a similar misunderstanding in his memoirs of the first European War. The recent announcement by our Government, expressing in black and white that we possess no suspected ambition whatever, should be regarded very timely and to the point.

Much to our regret, in this connection, some of our fellow countrymen are reported not fully satisfied with their Government's statement. They say that the Government more was, as it were, like setting a trap for itself. They think our southward moves will be greatly hampered by the declaration. Truly, they did not mean to manifest their own territorial ambition with these words, which I assure, they did not even dream of. But nothing could be deduced from such a complaint except that it shows their near-sightedness. On the other hand, what they seemingly wanted to push at with this complaint will be resulted from faithfully abiding the contents of the Government's statement, as I may have a chance to refer to it later on.

WILL INTERVENE

The second significance of the declaration is that the Japanese Government proclaims to the world through the declaration that she reserves the right of freely exercising a due amount of intervention should any other country, belligerent, neutral or otherwise, launch upon concontrolling the Dutch East Indies by armed force. Japan expects that the islands will remain in the possession of the Netherlands forever. If any other country dare to interfere with this state of ownership, Japan will not hestitate to assume a a positive attitude with utter disregard to the variety of the intruder country, whether it may be Great Britain, France, Germany or the United States of America. This attitude has been communicated to the rest of the world through the well-timed statement.

There is in this connection no need of covering a suspected fact that the "positive attitude" mentioned above apparently comprises the use of arms. To be more exact, though Japan has not the slightest intention of invading the islands for her own reasons, she will be forced to resort to arms if the same islands suffer invasion from some other country. This is to say, naturally enough, that if any one of the belligerents of the current European War should extend encroaching hand over the islands, the fact will be taken as an approved time for Japan to fight with the invading country, with the result that Japan's principle of non-involvement in the European War will be altered. This is a situation Japan is most disinclined to usher in, but unavoidable if things should turn that way.

UNDERSTANDING NEEDED

Considering Germany having not enough naval forces to attend to the control of the Netherands East Indies, I dare say, chances are rather for our falling out with Great Britain or France than with the Nazis. It is my urgent wish therefore that both Great Britain and France will fully understand what Japan is intending to do. Not only the people in the allied sector of the European War but Japanese themselves should know that the most possible chance for Japan to be involved in the present European hostilities will come from the future progress of the East Indies question, though there may be cited, of course, some other circumstances for bringing Japan to the European hostilities, such as the forced protection of our neutral rights.

There is the third significance attachable to the recent statement of the Tokyo Government. That is a firm resolution of our Government that she must secure the non-occupation of the Dutch islands at all costs and that she further must keep the islands safe from any intruder's hands.

WILL FIGHT FOR ISLES

It should be clearly understood that Japan will not shrink from driving out any third country's encroach upon the soil of the islands, whether the action on the side of the third country is motivated on her own univited initiative or brought about peacefully at request of the Netherlands Government itself. Further, this should be borne in mind that Japan's action under such circumstances will not be alleviated any way by the third country's occupation not involving the transfer of sovereign power or being limited to the duration of the present hostilities in Europe. From this angle, the recent proclamation, though couched in apparently soft terms, is in reality exceedingly weighty in its significance and backed by strong power coming from between the lines. Even if the intruding third party should be the United States, Japan cannot afford to refrain from fighting with her; an unpleasant fact to be well remembered by our friendly Americans.

PROCLAMATION GUARDED

When the second European War broke out last September, our Abe Cabinet, then in power, proclaimed its policy of "non-intervention" with the hostilities; it did not say "neutral." The wording sounds a little funny, but is practically of the same import as the "non-belligerent" which Italy used as referring to herself, in place of "neutral." My suspicion here, is that the Japanese Government might have been afraid of her possibly being regarded as more friendly toward the Allies than the Reich if she had described herself as a "neutral." She could not bear, I strongly suspect, the thought of her neutral proclamation being interpreted as partial to the Allies. To all intents and purposes, in the eyes of international law, the word "non-intervention" makes no difference with "non-belligerent." Both are legally interpreted as "neutral," and nothing else, in the law.

The word "non-intervention" has no charm of itself, with which, for instance, any country "non-intervening" in a war can claim more rights than dully allowed to ordinary neutral countries, or is exempt from fulfilling duties to be imposed on neutrals. Our Government's "non-intervention," after all, is a pure expression of the country's sentiment toward the European hostilities; it has no special legal significance as a matter of fact.

MOOT POINTS EXIST

One thing to be lastly noted is that there still exist many moot points in the provisions of international law, especially regarding to the rights and duties of neutral countries. The late Asama Maru incident is a good example to betray the defects of the law. I personally cannot refrain from thinking that any neutral can fling aside her neutral duties without shame when she is faced with the circumstances under which Japan was placed at that time.

This again naturally leads us to think that if an occasion happens, except on account of the Duch East Indies problem, which drives Japan off her neutral position, it will be no other than her being required to protect her neutral rights. Also it may be noted here that such a regrettable situation will probably result from the Allies being too much absorbed in effecting their economical blockade of the Reich, which gradually blinds them to their foiling neutrals' foreign trade.

Factory Hands Will Help With Farming, Ministry Decides

Following the example of the Army which permits enlisted men and workers at arsenals and other military institutions to return home during harvest time, the Welfare Ministry will shortly urge factory owners in general to sponsor labor service of their employes on farms near their factories.

Under the plan, factory workers will be urged to participate in farming on holidays and New Asia Days in the farms, irrespective of whether the days coincide with harvest time or not. This will relieve the shortage of farm hands as well as promote the health of factory workers who daily work in foul air and other unhealthy conditions, it is expected.

270,000 Bags of Flour Arrive in Peiping

Reuter

PEKING, May 21—As a result of efforts made by the Foodstuffs Importation Office of the Resources Readjustment Committee 270,000 bags of flour from abroad have arrived in Peking, according to Chinese press reports.

Apart from 50,000 bags of flour which will be distributed among the foodstuff dealers to be sold to the public, the rest will be distributed among Government organizations, schools and other organs.

The Foodstuffs Importation Office has also arranged for 3,300 tons of rice to be transported to Peking from Tientsin on May 25.

U.S. Problems Not Solved By Armaments, Says John Lewis

Transocean

NEW YORK, May 18—John Lewis, prominent labor union leader and chief of the C.I.O., demanded in a speech on the occasion of the textile labor union support for the national defense program.

After sharply criticizing all attempts at participation in the European war, Lewis asked whether union rights of workers would be recognized also in the enormously expanded armament and airplane industry. He said: "If this industry is to be expanded to proportions entirely beyond those now exis ing in the country what assurances are to be given to labor that workers of one of the greatest industrial units will have the right of any freeborn American citizen to join a union of his fellows if he so chooses? Beating ploughshares into swords is not an answer to those problems that affect special, economic and political America."

He emphasized in conclusion that urgent social and unemployment problems were still unsolved as far as the armament industry was concerned.

Allies Trying Hard To Get Good Planes

Transocean

NEW YORK, May 18—Redoubled efforts of the Allied airplane purchasing commission in the United States to obtain immediately about 700 planes destined for the U.S. Army is regarded here as a clear admission of the inferiority of British and French air forces compared to German ones, as well as of the heavy losses suffered by the Allies since the war started.

The New York Times published an inconspicuous report on this subject today but informed quarters are of the opinion that the requirements of the Allied air forces are so urgent that they cannot wait for a supply within the contracted time limit but must endeavor to acquire all machines which can be shipped at once. It is not yet known whether the U.S. Government is prepared to accede to the request of the Allied purchasing commission.

400 Burma Houses Destroyed

Reuter

RANGOON, May 21—Four hundred houses, representing practically the entire township of Nyaungbintha, 12 miles from Shwobo, in Lower Burma, are reported to have been destroyed by fire.

At the time of the outbreak there were only a few people in the town, as most of the inhabitants had left owing to plague.

COMMERCE MINISTRY DRAFTS PLAN TO LICENSE EXPORT FACTORIES

A license system will soon be adopted for all factories engaged in making goods for export to countries other than those within the "Yen Bloc." A detailed plan is now being drafted by authorities of the Commerce and Industry Ministry.

As pointed out Wednesday, the balance of Japan's foreign trade, especially with South American countries, has recently showed a very unfavorable trend. A large quantity of raw materials has been importing from them, but Japan cannot send out any tangible amount of exports, largely due to the lack of raw materials, labor, mechanical power, fuels and transportation facilities. On the other hand, even if a fair amount of exportable goods has been manufactured, a substantial part of them has gone to military needs, to domestic consumption or to the "Yen Bloc" countries.

The situation has been a serious concern for all State Ministers. According to the expected plan now being formed through the cooperation of the Planning Board and the Commerce and Industry Ministry, all factories making cotton goods, rayon textiles, staple fiber goods, glass wares, iron goods and toys will be placed under a license system which will be based on the Law for Temporal Adjustment of Imports and Exports. The factories to be licensed are limited to those supposed to turn out goods for export outside the "Yen Bloc," and they are to be specially helped in obtaining raw materials, labor, fuels and transport means.

As the plan is now being hurried in its preparation by authorities of the Commerce and Industry Ministry, it is expected some concrete details will be ready by next Tuesday when it will be placed before a meeting of the Cabinet Ministers concerned with the growth of foreign trade, which is scheduled to open that day for the third time.

DOMEI REPORTER FINDS NO PLACE TO SLEEP AS REFUGEES FILL TOURS

By ISAMU INOUYE

Domei Tsushin

TOURS, May 24—In a train packed like sardines with refugees, I arrived here this evening from Paris.

I found that taxis here have nothing to do with fares within the city. There are too many wanting to drive out to the neighboring villages, handing out 100 franc bills. The taxi-drivers are consequently doing a roaring business.

Hotel accommodations are taxed to the utmost. Every room and even the lobbys are filled with refugees. I found one chamber for two but the innkeeper refused me, saying there are many passing the night in the streets and that he could not rent the room for a single occupant, even if I paid double.

I slept until after midnight on a waiting room bench at the railway station, when another innkepper introduced me to his friend, who let me have a small room.

The streets were crowded as on a festival day. Tents were mushrooming up everywhere. The town offered a strangely gay appearance as latest Parisian modes mingled with soiled, dirt-caked travelers from distant regions.

ARRIVING IN PARIS

Domei Tsushin

PARIS, May 23—In the dusty courtyard of a barracks in the outskirts of Paris yesterday, I watched an endless stream of human derelicts who have been driven from their homes in Belgium and northern France by the advancing German armies, as they paused for a few hours rest and a bite of food before continuing to a temporary haven "somewhere in France."

In all this crowd of 5,000 or 6,000 persons—husbands who lost wives along the way and mothers who left the bodies of their children lying on the road after the passage of enemy bombers—I saw not a single tear or a gesture of desperation. They were too tired to feel anything yet.

I talked with 30-year-old Jean Seghers, who had cultivated a farm west of Brussels. He told me, "I am all alone now. My wife and two children—we were expecting a third—were unable to move, and somebody had to look after grandmother and grandfather, who are over 80 years old.

"What has happened to my family now I cannot tell. I and a group of friends have been bicycling since Friday. We did 150 kilometers a day, making wide detours to avoid the main roads which were being combed by German bombers.

"Several times we were machine-gunned and one or two of us were wounded. While we were still in Belgium we spent the nights in cellars of village houses, which the Germans were continually strafing.

"Tonight I hope to be able to get a few unbroken hours of sleep. . . then I shall think of what I have to do."

One little 10-year old girl, who came from the Maubeuge region, told me how she had "hitch-hiked" with her mother to Paris. She said she had been continually machine-gunned from the air and, with the matter-of-fact detached manner of children, added, "The worst part was stepping over bodies in the woods."

Lieutenant L—, who organized the refugee service in this barracks, told me, "We have a woman here—sorry you can't talk with her, but she is in the infirmary—who left her home in northern France a few days ago with her five children. She arrived here with one, the youngest child. . . the others were killed by German machine-gunners while en route to Paris."

TIME EDITOR WARNS U.S.

Nation Must Be United More Strongly Than Ever, Says Luce in Paris

United Press

PARIS, May 20—Henry Luce editor of "Time" and "Fortune" magazines, said in strong terms here last night that if America is to escape the "tragic fate" facing hundreds of thousands of Europeans today, it must be "united and more strongly armed than ever before."

In an exclusive interview with the United Press before leaving Paris for the United States, Mr. Luce said that "only a strong nation can take the decision between war and peace."

Having just returned from Brussels, where he narrowly escaped death in a shower of German bombs, Mr. Luce pointed out that Belgium and the Netherlands had no choice between peace and war.

"Before the bombs began falling around me in Brussels," he said, "I found out that from across the Rhine the War God was advancing with a far more terrible kind of war than the world had ever known.

"Perhaps Americans cannot realize that the ghastly, horrible battle being fought today is far more hideous than the most hideous days of the last war.

"There are millions of Americans who would give up their lives in battle for America. I hope they will never be put to that awful test of ultimate devotion, but it is to them and only to them that I have desire to speak.

"We Americans in Europe know, and we can see quite clearly that America is facing a frightful threat to her very existence as a nation—by far the greatest threat in eighty years.

"I have been in Europe for almost a month, in Italy, France, Holland and Belgium, and I have seen all the leading statesmen.

"Hitler's Germany is waging a war of national determination to rule the world. If Hitler cannot rule he firmly intends to ruin the world utterly. Germany's warfare is and will be the cruellest war in centuries."

Geisha 'Invited' By Police To Be Less Frolicsome

The Metropolitan Police Board will "invite" representatives of geisha houses, cafes and bar associations today to instruct them to strictly control the conduct of women working in these establishments on New Asia Service Days on which thrift and modesty should be observed in all phases of life.

The authorities are going to take the measure in view of frequent criticisms that these women often are seen on excursions with customers at fashionable hotspring resorts near Tokyo on New Asia Service Days when all machiai, cafes and bars close business.

Although warnings were served on several occasions by the authorities, the situation has not improved appreciably, and this time they will instruct the leaders of the geisha, cafe and bar business associations strictly to observe self-admonition. They will also urge the leaders to employ women working at these establishments in wholesome pursuits such as picnics, flower arrangement and sewing.

JAPAN PAVILION PRESENTS NEW EXHIBIT

To Stress 2600th Anniversary Of Founding of Empire; To Also Show Paintings

NEW YORK—In commemoration of the 2600th anniversary of the founding of the Japanese Empire, the Japanese Pavilion this year presents to World's Fair visitors not only a completely new exhibit, but has transformed the shrine-like structure and surrounding garden into an almost daily scene of oriental pageantry and festival.

Promising a larger display of Japanese art and industrial products, the pavilion, according to an announcement by Kaname Wakasugi, Japanese Commissioner General, to the New York World's Fair, will stage many picturesque ceremonies on historically significant Japanese holidays. Peak of these festivities is expected to be reached in the late summer months when dramatic ceremonies will be staged simultaneously with celebrations held in Japan.

TO STRESS EMPIRE

Japan Hall, in the Hall of Nations, which last year served chiefly as a showplace of modern industrial Japan, also will design its program around the theme of Japan's founding. Among the many activities planned for this building are a series of lectures, in which master craftsmen of Japan will demonstrate doll-making, lantern-making and many forms of Japanese painting. As last year, the Japan Tourist Bureau will have a booth in this building with booklet and other travel literature available to the public.

Although no major structural changes will be made in the pavilion, the interior will be redecorated and a new Japanese teahouse will be added to the building. This addition, modeled after a typical Japanese teahouse, will be erected at one end of the classic Japanese garden and will be used to acquaint Fair visitors with the beauties of the tea ceremony and a variety of tasty food and delicacies.

Fair visitors familiar with the 1939 exhibits of the Japanese Pavilion will find an entirely new collection of products and art objects when they enter the Grand Hall through the elaborately studded doors of the main entrance. Placed about the hall will be scores of creations of the outstanding lacquer masters of Japan and on the walls will be many paintings, which experts describe as among the best modern expressions of Japanese art. Among these will be paintings representing 17 of Japan's leading artists, all of them created especially for the 1940 showing at the Fair.

Dominating exhibits in this room will be two classic examples of Japanese wood-carving. Life-sized and revealing an incredible skill in breathing motion into wood, these two art works demonstrate the Japanese mastery in this neglected field of art. Many other wood-carvings, smaller in size and all done in traditional Japanese style also will be on view.

INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTS

Also on display in the main hall will be more than 40 art and industrial products which won acclaim at the Japanese Pavilion, San Francisco Exposition. Many other exhibits for this room are now on their way from Japan.

A hold-over from the 1939 show of the pavilion is the silk-making demonstration, which will be shown a number of times daily in a wing of the building. In this room, two Japanese girls, working at silk-reeling machines, will convert the filaments of cocoons into raw silk. In other processes, added to the exhibit because of its popularity last year, the silk will be woven into shimmering fabrics. Photographic murals and a variety of western and Japanese silken garments also are included in this exhibit.

A second wing of the pavilion will house an exhibit dedicated exclusively to the history of Japan. This exhibit, according to Mr. Wakasugi, will trace the founding of Japan from Jimmu Tenno, the first Emperor, to the present day. Ancient art works, antique documents and other rare exhibits will illustrate the most important periods of Japan's growth. Photographs, paintings and documents covering the arrival of Commodore Perry in Japan and America's part in the subsequent industrialization of the nation also will be displayed in this room.

The Japanese Garden, which surrounds the red and gold pavilion, also will be retained. A classic example of Japanese landscaping, the garden, which is to be donated to the city along with the pavilion at the end of the Fair, is a symbolic representation of the countryside in the vicinity of the Grand Shrine of Ise.

French Seize Goebbel's Suez Canal Shares

United Press

PARIS, May 19—The Civil Tribunal here yesterday sequestered 100 Suez Canal shares valued at 2,000,000 francs and belonging to the German Minister of Propaganda, Dr. Joseph Goebbels.

Hitherto dividend coupons had been cashed by the Luxembourg Bank without disclosing the name of the owner. Dr. Goebbels collected his latest dividend last January—four months after France had declared war against Germany.

ITALIANS MAKE VOLCANO WORK FOR NATION

Laboratories Established Throughout Country to Experiment on Self-Sufficiency

Christian Science Monitor

Trying to harness a volcano and make it go to work for you is rather like setting sails in a hurricane. It's dangerous. Yet there's a tremendous amount of power going to waste that could do somebody good—if.

But there's a valley in the Tuscany section of northern Italy where engineers have actually succeeded in using volcanoes to drive electric turbines. It's not a small project by any means. More than 1,200,000 kilowatt hours of electricity are generated every 24 hours. In New England this would be labeled "Yankee ingenuity." But in Italy it's just part of the program for national self-sufficiency, an attempt to offset a nation's lack of coal deposits.

Furnishing power for most of northern Italy, the "Valley of northern Italy, the "Valley of Hell," as it is called, is an amazing 20-mile area where the earth's crust is relatively thin and where a plentiful supply of water feeds into molten areas beneath the surface. There are some 300 natural and man-made "wells" there from which steam shoots skyward with a deafening roar.

Complete exploitation has by no means been reached. It has only been within the past 10 years really that Italian engineers have turned these wild roaring vents into controlled power. They supply enough electricity already to accommodate homes and industry throughout Tuscany, and to operate a railroad between Pisa and Rome.

At many other places in the world, volcanology laboratories have been established and serious studies carried on, but Italy is in some respects a few jumps ahead. In the western world is evidence that an Aztec Prince once enjoyed the luxury of a bath heated by a volcano. Explorers working not far from Mexico City found a stone bath in the crater of a now quiet volcano with a stone stairway leading down from the rim. There may be other power services rendered, but they are not well known.

In the United States are many extinct craters and cinder cones in the west, but outside of Mount Lassen, Mount Rainier, and Mount Shasta which emit heated vapors and give other evidences of their interiors still being hot, there are no active volcanoes, unless someone wants to quibble over the status of geysers and hot springs. But as if to make amends for this, there are about 100 in Alaska, Hawaii and the Philippines, rather more than our share, since there are only around 400 in the whole world.

Carrying on extensive surveys and studies of volcanic phenomena is the Hawaiian Volcano Observatory on the brink of Kilauea in the Islands. It owes its origin and continued standing to Dr. Thomas A. Jaggar who has been conducting researches there with his staff for many years.

Interest in volcanology is by no means confined to the United States and Italy. New Zealand about 10 years ago established an observatory in the Taupo district of North Island. Japan conducts elaborate researches on volcanoes, particularly in connection with earthquake disturbances. The Dutch East Indies has a government "volcano bureau." At Berlin was published the Zeitschrift fur Vulkanologie, a commendable technical journal.

However, in Europe much of the work done on volcanoes has centered for a number of years around Vesuvius, historic "cabinet volcano," with the well-known Royal Vesuvian Observatory close by. At Naples is also located the headquarters of the Volcanology Section of the International Geodetic and Geophysical Union. So far the chief utilitarian objective of all this research has been to protect lives and property in the vicinity of active craters. Many timely warnings have been given and much grief saved, though heed is not always paid to such advice.

A generation ago it would have been termed madness for any engineer to talk about harnessing volcanoes, yet Italy today has eight huge turbine plants turning out some 32,800,000 kilowatt hours of electricity monthly—controlled energy which would ordinarily require some 500 tons of coal to produce.

Two thousand men are employed on the project, living in the most dangerous region known on earth. On February 1 of this year the newest plant was opened, now going full blast. It contains four turbines each capable of 12,500 kilowatts daily.

Such steam wells as these are sometimes 1,000 feet deep and they seldom run dry. It takes about 12 months steady drilling to produce one of them and about eight days for capping. Just before the drill crew strikes steam the entire gang dashes for cover. The explosion that announces holing through devastates all drilling machinery, the escaping steam and debris twisting steel beams like cotton threads.

Rocks, mud, volcanic lava and steam gush out to a height of nearly 1,000 feet and the noise of the blast can be heard a dozen miles away. For two weeks the well is allowed to "clean out," after which it is capped and controlled, the steam being drawn off into condensing tanks and eventually converted into electricity through the turbines.

Steam power is not the only output of the valley. More than 8,000,000 tons of chemicals including pure borax, carbonic acid, ammonia, boric acid and a host of other things are produced as bi-products. Nearly half is exported.

ANTI-JAPANESE SENTIMENT HIGH IN PHILIPPINES

Small Chance for Feeling To Subside in Future With New Bill Proposed

By SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

KOBE, May 25—Anti-Japanese sentiment runs high in the Philippines and there appears little chance of its abatement for the near future, in the opinion of Rinji Kudo of the Yoshikawa Takushoku Company who returned to Kobe Thursday after a six years' stay in various parts of the Islands.

"It is expected that the new Immigration Bill will be passed by the Government shortly; subsequently cutting down the number of immigrants to the Philippines to a mere 500 per annum," he said. He continued to say that it was also obvious that the bill was aimed essentially at the Japanese for it is they who form the most active group of foreigners and it is they who will suffer most.

MARRIAGE DENIED JAPANESE

Mr. Kudo pointed out that there are approximately 7,000 young Japanese immigrants of marriageable age on the Islands today who would be technically deprived of their right to marriage, if and when, the bill is passed. "That the bill is an indiscretion on the part of the Philippine authorities, there is little room for doubt but it is also obvious that the Japanese Government must take effective diplomatic measures to avoid any future trouble over the issue.

Mr. Kudo gave as another evidence of anti-Japanese sentiment, the growing pressure exerted on Japanese enterprisers on the Islands. "An enterpriser who would start a new business on the Islands must, by law, compose his office staff of 61 per cent, native and 39 per cent foreign. The proportion of the latter can, of course, be reduced but not the reverse," he said. He explained that, since only 3 per cent foreign laborers were permitted in the total of 39 per cent the Japanese enterprisers there are very hard hit for their number is large. "They are confronted with one of the most serious business barriers since the history of Japanese immigration to the Islands began," he said.

U.S. SUBMARINES IN ISLANDS

The United States Government is strengthening the national defense mechanism of the Islands tremendously, Mr. Kudo concluded his interview, saying that he saw at least six submarines of the United States Navy in Davao when he left there.

Kumaichi Kawakubo, noted Japanese mining engineer in the Philippines who returned to Kobe for the first time in 30 years, in company with Mr. Kudo said that there were formely ten Japanese employed by the Mogpug Gold Star Mining Company including himself. "Today there are only three of us left, the other seven were dismissed recently for some reason or other," he said. Mr. Kawakubo remarked that he was still in the employment of the company because he happened to be in good standing with the 300 odd miners working under him.

"There is much talk to the effect that the new Immigration Bill will be assed to curtail the growing number of Jewish immigrants to the Islands, but the rumors sound rather flimsy, he said.

Mr. Kawakubo said that the anti-Japanese sentiment is growing daily. Merchants' rights held by Japanese in public markets have been confiscated. Japanese carpenters formerly employed in such large numbers by Philippine companies, are being dismissed in rapid succession. "The future looks dark indeed for Japanese residing there," he concluded.

Malta Orders Curfew

Domei Tsushin

MALTA, May 27—The Governor of Malta imposed a strict curfew between the hours of 11 p.m. and 5 a.m., beginning tonight, as a precaution against possible parachutist raids. All persons have been warned to abide by the curfew at the risk of being shot.

Authorities at the same time declared that all traitors will be held liable for the death penalty on being caught.

Chinese Athletes Leave

Domei Tsushin

NANKING, May 26—Eighty outstanding athletes of China this morning left here by train in order to leave for Japan to participate in the forthcoming Asia Athletic Meet to be held in Tokyo for five days beginning June 5 in connection with the 2600th anniversary of the founding of the Japanese Empire.

Women's Department To Be Established In Spirit Drive

In view of the importance of the women's mission in overcoming economic difficulties, a Women's Department is shortly to be established in the National Spiritual Mobilization Headquarters, of which officers will be women only.

Although the Spiritual Group has appealed to women through the Patriotic Women's Association, the Japan Women's Association, the National Defense Women's Association, and the Japan Young Women's Association, actual business hitherto has been handled by male officers.

Conscious of the defect, Zenjiro Horikiri, Executive Director of the Headquarters, is to invite eight women councilors of the group, including Masuko Mizuno, wife of Rentaro Mizuno, former Education Minister, Dr. Yayoi Yoshioka, Dr. Shigeyo Takeuchi, Fusae Ichikawa, wife of Dr. Sanki Ichikawa, and others to the Chuo-tei, Marunouchi, Thursday evening to talk over the concrete measures for the projected Women's Department.

It also is reported that the female members of the group will be increased, and the propaganda institute for women expanded.

LINK TO SOUTH SEAS PROPOSED

Nishinomiya May Be Site For Large Hydro-Airport To Replace Yokohama One

By Special Correspondent

KOBE, May 27—The port of Nishinomiya is likely to become the site of one of Japan's principal hydro-airports in the very near future, linking her with the South Sea Isles, according to opinion in learned circles here. The Ministry of Communications has been surveying certain localities in the lake Biwa and Tannowa districts and also several spots in Formosa in question of a suitable site. The proposed airport, upon completion, will replace the present hydro-airport in Yokohama

It is pointed out in substantiation of the opinion that, whereas in the Nishinomiya district, the greatest drawback is merely the constant strong westerly winds, air currents in the Lake Biwa district are unusually irregular and "bumpy." Transportation facilities for passengers and freight are lacking in the Tannowa district, and such an airport in Formosa would require another line, a land one, to link it with Japan proper.

The Aeronautical Bureau of the Ministry of Communications has been surveying the Nishinomiya district extensively during the past two months and it is reported that results so far are "highly satisfactory." It is learned that should final decision fall upon Nishinomiya approximately 100,000 tsubo of area along the shoreline will be filled in and reclaimed to accommodate hanger offices, and other administrative buildings. A huge breakwater will be also constructed to smooth out the otherwise choppy sea.

It will be recalled that several years ago there was much talk of laying a civilian airport in Nishinomiya when the Northern Japan Air Transport Company proposed to lay a hydro-airport on a 50,000 tsubo site reclaimed from the sea at the time the present break-water was constructed. The idea, however, was given up for undisclosed reasons. In 1937, when work on Osaka's second airport at Itami was begun, the same project was once again proposed but again nipped in the bud when the Ministry of Commerce and Industry announced that the land in question would be used to accommodate a large chemical industrial plant and factory. The Municipality of Nishinomiya was to have constructed hangers and other necessary buildings for the project at the total expenditure of ¥110,000.

According to Mr. Matsuo, Mayor of Nishinomiya, no official approach has been made by the Government authorities to the municinality so far. Filling in the 100,000 tsubo site will change the shape of the port considerably and it is essential that the project be undertaken only after careful study of the present system or network of marine transportation along the Hanshin coast he said.

Mr Matsuo pointed out that the construction of such an airport in Nishinomiya would not only prove a boon to the city and near vicinity from the standpoint of speedy freighting, sight seeing and other diversion, but would mean a huge step toward completion of a rigid and impregnable national defense system.

ALLIED AND GERMAN FORCES ENGAGE IN BLOODY ENCOUNTERS AT CALAIS

Domei Tsushin

ROME, May 25—A gruesome tale of how German and Allied forces for the third consecutive day yesterday fought in a fierce engagement, attacking and counter-attacking, in a driving rainstorm for the supremacy of the Calais sector, which commands the Straits of Dover at its narrowest point, is reported here today by a war correspondent of the Giornale d'Italia.

"Utter confusion reigned in Calais yesterday," the correspondent says, as German bombers flew over the city dropping tons of bombs on military objectives, setting huge fires, while the British increased horrors of war by ordering the destruction of establishments whose capture would give a military advantage to the enemy. Thousands of gallons of gasoline were reported to be in flames.

Reliable sources are said to have indicated that already 100,000 soldiers have been made prisoners, while another 100,000 are matching their strength in a furious combat which is dragging on into its fourth day. General Weygand, Commander-in-Chief of the Allied forces, is considered to have failed in a desperate attempt to crack the Nazi's encircling movement.

The correspondent says, the Germans are pressing upon Calais from the north and from the south and within this enclosure of steel, three armies are locked in mortal combat.

"Belgian tenacity, French heroism and British desperation is being played to the fullest in the fields of Flanders and Artoies, because their entire future may depend on the outcome of this war," the correspondent concludes.

Trotsky Charges Stalin Instigated Assassination Try

Domei Tsushin

MEXICO CITY, May 25—Terming the attempt upon his life as his gravest experience, Leon Trotsky, exiled Communist refugee, today charged that Dictator Josef Stalin with having given direct orders to the group of 20 to 30 gunmen who early yesterday morning forced their way into his villa at Coyoacan in an attempted assassination plot.

The ex-Communist leader asserted that the OGPU would not have dared to attempt such a drastic measure unless the orders were from Stalin himself, adding, that Mexican politics were not involved in the assault. He further disclosed his American bodyguard had been kidnapped by the raiders.

The newspaper El Popular alleged today that Mr. Trotsky himself had staged the raid possibly with the aid of agents of the Died Committee to provide an excuse for United States intervention in Mexico.

Air Defense Drills Slated June 7-13 For Tokyo Citizens

The first air defense drill this year in Tokyo and vicinity will be held from June 7 to 13, chiefly for "watchkeepers' groups," which are charged with the duty of discovering enemy raiding planes.

During the period, aircraft of the Army and Navy will appear unexpectedly over air raid watchkeepers to train them in communicating alarms.

The "basic" air defense maneuvers, participated in by air defense and firefighting squads, will be staged for several days in each of the 10 air defense areas into which the capital and vicinity will be divided. It will involve training in firefighting, decontamination, guard duty, refuge and ambulance service.

The whole nation will be trained in blackouts for 10 days early in September, more intensively than in former days. Emphasis will be placed on quick obedience to blackout alarms.

NOTED BRAZILIAN WRITER SAYS JAPAN INCOMPARABLE IN WARM HOSPITALITY

By Special Correspondent

OSAKA, May 25—"Japan is a land of warm smiles and most profound courtesies to foreigners. The average man on the street, the scholarly professor and man of letters, the sedate and charming womenfolk, they all show the most sincere welcome to foreigners." That is what Claudio de Souza, president of the Brazilian Pen Club and member of the Intellectual Cooperation of the League of Nations thinks of the Japanese, as he gave his opinion of Japan in an interview at the New Osaka Hotel today.

"I have traveled the world's beaten tourist lanes for years and I am in a position to compare. I have come to realize, probably for the first time, the depth of Japan's courtesy and kindness to foreigners. I realize too that entirely too many foreigners, seeing Japan for the first time, misinterpret those warm smiles and courtesies for something coming from a business sense. I am more impressed than ever before that my opinion of Japan is correct, Mr. Souza continued.

Mr. Souza said that it is the unlimited faith and belief in the Emperor, the willingness to make drastic personal sacrifices for one's country, and the strong conviction the Japanese has in himself that has made it possible to withstand the storms of elements and to establish for himself a country with a history of 2,600 brilliant years, occupying the predominent position that it does today.

"To Japan's lot fell a small volcanic island, vulnerable to the merciless onslaught of nature's most furious elements. But Japan fought, created and finally wrought for herself this island empire which today stands as a hoary symbol of patience and determination which characterize the Orient," he said.

Mr. de Souza declared that it was his staunch opinion that the womenfolk of Japan should not sacrifice their native costume for those of other countries. "They are too beautiful and expressive of Japan's artistic side to let go so ruthlessly," he said. He suggested that if the native dress be too impractical for modern requirements, they at least be worn on ceremonial occasions and other occasions typical of ancient Japan.

Japan's untold strength lies in the remarkable manner in which she has succeeded so thoroughly in mixing the modern with the ancient. Take your "sennin-bari" for example, he said. "I do not know of their scientific properties, but I do know of their spiritual worth. I regard with deepest admiration and respect those many women standing on the corner of some busy thoroughfare with cloth and needle in hand to obtain the thousand required knots, that the omen of good fortune may be sent to some loved one on the front," he said.

Mr. Souza concluded his interview by saying that he had had a "sennin bari" made for him in Kyoto by a native woman. "I shall take that back with me as a souvenir of Japan," he concluded.

Mr. de Souza is a noted writer, having written and published more than 17 books, the most famous of which, a novel, "The Flower in the Shade" has been dramatized and presented more than 500 times in France, Spain Italy and other countries. The noted writer will tour Manchoukuo, China and Korea and then leave on June 6 for Bombay to attend the meeting of the Bombay Pen Club. He, in company with Mrs. Souza, will leave from Kobe on the Suwa Maru. They are to return to Brazil and home via South Africa.

INDUSTRIALISTS EXCHANGE IDEAS AT KANSAI MEET

Foreign Trade Perplexing Problem to Government, Declares Vice-Minister

By Special Correspondent

KOBE May 26—Mr. Kishi, Vice-Minister of Commerce and Industry, attended a general discussion o current commercial and industrial topics Wednesday at the loca Chamber of Commerce and Industry building. Some 75 merchants and industrialists, leaders in their respective fields, attended the discussion. A similar discussion was held in Osaka a few days previously.

Following a brief opening address by Mayor Sake of Kobe, Mr. Kishi declared emphatically in a brief but convincing address to the gathering that complete and wholehearted cooperation between government officials and businessmen was of signal importance to the smooth and unhampered operation of Japan's wartime economic policy. "We are about to embark on a new stage of economic control, one in which previous economic experience is of little significance to the Government, and it is necessary that the Government has full and unlimited support of the people in execution of its future plans," he said.

TRADE FORECAST DEPRESSING

Mr. Kishi continued: "Foreign trade today is indeed the life blood of Japan's economic structure and on it depend the stability of our daily livelihood," He added that it may well be considered the key to the unruffled progress of the Materials Mobilization Policy. "And still, he said, important as it is to us today it remains one of the most perplexing problems of the Government. Candidly, the future of foreign trade is depressing and there is little room for complacency in any form or nature on the part of officials or businessmen. The two must act as a single unit," he concluded.

Mr. Jiro Kiyose, manager of the Kobe branch of the Yokohama Specie Bank, pointed out that present economic control measures were all formed in or about Tokyo—that discussions leading to their eventual adoption were centered in Tokyo. "Could not the discussions be held in a wider sphere to include the opinion of the entire country?" Mr. Kiyose asked. He also stressed the "advisability" of curtailing exports for the time being due to the danger of cargoes in shipment being held up and consequently "freezing" a considerable sum of capital. Mr. Kiyose concluded by pointing out that applications made to authorities for permission to export to Hongkong and other near-by ports are in most cases rejected. "Ninety per cent of the total of applications are rejected despite the fact that the letters of credit and other documents are attached," he said.

Mr. Kishi replied that control measures will be mapped out in Tokyo and district offices commissioned with their execution. Regarding export sanctions, Mr. Kishi said that it is the intention of the Government to announce a definite standard in the near future.

Gota Miyake, managing director of the Kanagafuchi Spinning Mills, opined that Japanese products were no longer of the low prices which had featured them in the time past. "Raw materials must be made available domestically; quality must be elevated; and new products must be manufactured," he said.

CONTROL YEN BLOC EXPORTS

Mr. Sotaro Hiyashi, managing director of the Kanematsu Shoten asked whether or not there were chances of the newly proposed control company for controlling exports to the Yen Bloc to interfere with the function of the Manchoukuo Staple Commodities Company. He also stressed the desirability of having unitary control over exports to the Yen Bloc. "The present system of control embodies both the Ministry of Commerce and Industry and the Kowa-in," he said.

Mr. Kishi said that the Manchoukuo Staple Commodities Company had been organized more or less with the control of domestic economic matters rather than trade and consequently there appears little basis for Mr. Hayashi's apprehensions.

He also explained that it is a recognized fact that a pool export and import company for control of trade with the Yen Bloc is necessary, but so far no plans have been made to organize one definitely. "Personally, the existant organizations should be utilized to the maximum rather than new ones organize," Mr. Kishi said.

Keiju Aoki of the Aoki Shoten pointed out the desirability of having regulated, still further, existant connections between the export and commercial associations; simplification of steps required to be taken for exports as required by the link system; and the desirability of having standardized prices of rayon yarn for weaving into export textiles.

There were numerous other suggestions and requests for further study and consideration of their respective positions to which Mr. Kishi replied that the Government would make every effort to rationalize the present system of economic control.

Royal Princesses Heavily Guarded

United Press

LONDON, May 22—Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret of England were guarded by police yesterday in view of the danger of a German invasion of England by parachute troops.

Three fully armed plain clothes detectives prowl the grounds of the Royal lodge at Windsor, where the Princesses are staying, day and night. When the Princesses go out, a plain clothes policeman rides next to the chauffeur. Even when they go horseback riding at Windsor they are accompanied by armed grooms.

The first time a detective accompanied the Princesses on an outing—exciting them greatly—was when they visited Buckingham Palace recently to see their parents. This was the first time the girls were under a police guard, although two guards always accompany the King and Queen.

RICE, WHEAT BUYING SET

Government Formally Decides To Make Fourth Rice, Second Wheat Purchases of Season

The Government formally has decided to make its fourth period rice purchase and second period wheat purchase, vernacular papers report. Decisions were made at a meeting of the Rice Control Commission in the Agriculture and Forestry Minister's official residence Monday afternoon.

The conference was attended by Agriculture Minister Toshio Shimada, two Agriculture Vice-Ministers and a few other high officials of the Agriculture and Forestry Ministry, all as representatives of the Government, while the civil side was represented by Shinkuro Murayasu, Juichi Tsushima, Minoru Togo and others.

AGREEMENT UNANIMOUS

From the Government side, the items for deliberation based on the agreements reached at the March meeting of the Control Commission were submitted for consideration of the meeting. All present unanimously agreed to accept the Government's plan and expressed their desire that details about exact dates for the rice and wheat purchases as well as the respective amounts should be left to the Government's discretion.

According to vernaculars, the present rice situation in the country was minutely revealed at the meeting by Rice Bureau Director Takanori Yokoyama, who said:

(1) From November, 1939, to the beginning of May this year Korea exported to Japan 161,260 koku of German millet (one koku is about five bushels), 214,981 koku of kaoliang and 131,071 koku of millet.

DECISION OFFERED

(2). From November, 1939, to March this year, Korea imported 9,514 koku of German millet.

(3) The tillage area in Formosa for the first rice crop this year covers 287,452 units, an increase of 11,963 units compared with the corresponding period last year.

The Nakajima faction of the Seiyukai, in this connection, held a special committee meeting of its political affairs investigation department to reach a final decision on the faction's pending policy of rice supply and distribution, with the attendance of the faction's chief secretary Minoru Togo, and other leading members of the department. With the decision formed, three of leading M.P.'s belonging to the faction called on Agriculture Minister Toshio Shimada at 1 p.m. Monday at his official residence and offered the decision for Government's consideration.

BIRTH RATE BOOST MEASURES NEEDED IF JAPAN'S POPULATION IS TO RISE

Experts of the Population Problem Research Institute estimate that Japan's population will reach 122,000,000 between 1985 and 1995, judging from data furnished by the census of 1935.

In 2040, the population will decrease by about 10,000,000 if the present decrease in birth rate continues. To preclude this eventuality, the Population Problem Research Institute will work out measures to increase the birth rate.

According to figures published by the institution recently, the mother's age at which the birth rate is highest is 21.

The average age of marriage was 28.389 for men and 24.414 for women in 1938. The oldest average marriage age in the country was in Osaka with 30.039 for men and 25.905 for women, followed by those of Tokyo, Yokohama and Kyoto in that order.

The earliest average was reported by Toyama, in North Japan, with 27.105 for men and 22.568 women. Generally, marriage is earlier in agrarian districts than in cities.

Divorce is most frequent in the age group 25-29 for women and 30-34 for men.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT" - by Ripley

DIFFICULT PROBLEM RAISED BY KOREANS

Laborers Brought Here Must Be Assimilated, But How!

"Subsequent to putting the labor mobilization plan into effect there was a large influx of native Korean laborers into Japan. This inflow is presenting a serious question of how to assimilate these Korean natives, quite different in their ways and customs, into the time old customs of Japan. Their average standard of living is much inferior to ours and their education is generally low. They should be elevated to our own standard both in education and living, otherwise the question will increase in its seriousness and will become, I am afraid, a great obstacle in bringing harmony between the two peoples."

So said Welfare Minister Shigeru Yoshida at Monday's session of the prefectural educational chiefs' conference in the conference room of the Welfare Ministry. After the Welfare Minister's address, delegates listened to a series of instructions by officials of the Social Affairs Bureau of the Ministry.

The session adjourned at 6 p.m. and resumed Tuesday for discussions on insurance, disease prevention, military relief work and national physical strength.

Welfare Minister Yoshida referred, in the course of his address, to the need of satisfactorily meeting wartime demands at all costs by the home front, the importance of the increase in the nation's physical strength and the local officials' efforts to be made in line of keeping up the public's general enthusiasm for bringing the China incident to a successful ending.

PRICE CONTROL DRAFT DEBATED AT MEETING

Will Be Submitted to Commission After Government Approval

The Government should proceed on the principle of enforcing a wartime economy system at home, firmly establishing economic morals and expanding economy in the use of commodities, it was stressed in the No. 1 draft of the Price Control Investigation Commission's report to the Government. A round-table conversation is reported to have been held at 3 p.m. Wednesday in the Premier's official residence on the report.

After an approval is obtained on the outline of the draft, the Government will convene the plenary meeting of the Price Control Investigation Commission and refer the draft in question to the meeting for their deliberation on the items mentioned in the draft. The Yomiuri says that the plenary session will be opened at the beginning of next month.

According to the Yomiuri, the Commission's report is made up of the following lines:

(1) Of the enforcement of the wartime economy system at home:

A. Those industries most needed for the wartime should be preferentially supported by the Government, and adjustment control be exercised, on the other hand, among the important industries.

B. The control on distribution of commodities should be quickly systematized through coordination among various distribution organs existing.

C. As to the adjustment of consumption, it should be done with the primary aim of securing the supply of daily necessities.

(2) Of the firm establishment of economy morals, the whole nation should be guided to thoroughly understand that the interest of the country as a whole ought to be the first consideration of every national, especially when the country is engaged in such a large-scale warfare as the present China incident.

(3) A more thorough and effective means should be resorted to for enforcing economy in the use of various articles. Means should be differed in accordance with the variety of articles on which economy is to be practiced. The system of ration tickets should be realized as early as possible on certain kinds of commodities.

Miliakovitch and five other Soviet regulars in cavalry uniform, deserted their camp with complete outfits and crossed the frontier and found hiding in a Manchoukuoan shack in Tayang village on May 20.

Miliakovitch is also said to have stated that he had been sent to the Maritime Province as a forced laborer together with his friends, where they were whipped to work day and night with scanty food. The deserters were sent to the Hara border patrol unit for further investigations.

Cripps Rejected

MOSCOW, May 29—The Soviet Government informed the British Cabinet through its Ambassador in London that the planned dispatch of the British Labor Deputy, Sir Stafford Cripps, as special envoy for commercial negotiations to Moscow was not acceptable, it was announced here. This rejection of a trade envoy does not refer to Sir Stafford alone but also to every other personage or mission.

RUTHLESS BOMBING

ROME, May 29—The Italian Ambassador in Belgium has been given documentary proof of the systematic destruction by bombs of non-military objects in Belgium by fliers of the Western Powers. Several Belgian public administration bureaux had handed the Italian Ambassador written statements, Lavoro Fascista reports from Brussels, in which the sad plight of the towns of Belgium owing to the systematic bombing by the air force of the Western Powers is related.

NO INTERVIEW GIVEN

BERLIN, May 29—Competent quarters of the Reich capital today commented today on "still another invention by the Allies". Several days ago, the French paper Paris Soir published an alleged interview with the President of the Turkish Republic, Ismet Inonu. In this French report the Turkish President was said to have stated that the interests of the Western Powers and Turkey were so closely connected that the defeat of the Allies would mean defeat also for Turkey.

The official Turkish news agency "Agence d'Anatolia" now says that President Inonu has not given an interview to any foreign newspaper.

'Poor Belgians'

ROME, May 29—The only consolation which the Western Powers enjoy as a result of the occupation of Belgium by the German troops is the fact that the Belgian gold and foreign currency reserves are now in London, according to the London Daily Express.

Italian newspapers, reprinting this story, declare that the British in view of the great joy over this "capital conquest" have suddenly forgot to mention the fate of the "poor Belgians."

CIVILIANS EVACUATED

COPENHAGEN, May 29—Reports from London state that the civilian population is being evacuated in feverish haste from the whole of South England following the capitulation of the Belgian Army. The reports add that all conceivable precautionary measures have been taken in view of the possible landing of German troops.

FRENCH LEAVE ITALY

GENEVA, May 29—French and English citizens have left Italy as war fever is spreading in the streets of Rome and the language of the Italian press can no longer be beaten, says the Paris Soir. The paper tells its readers that Italy's entry into the war could no longer be doubted. The Italians were now at the last stage of their war preparations.

R.A.F. BOMBING FIERCE

LONDON, May 29—The Air Ministry communique this morning states that extensive bombing of troop concentrations, columns of infantry and enemy tanks in northeastern France has been carried on by the Royal Air Force during the past 24 hours. This ceaseless bombing of German troop concentrations has been intensified beyond anything imagined at the outset. Terrible casualties are being inflicted on the Germans, even the German press dispatches admitting a heavy German toll.

An Admiralty communique today reports that information has been received that Narvik was captured last night by the Allied forces, and two villages on the fjord east of Narvik are also in Allied hands.

French Holding Out

PARIS, May 29—The situation in the north is described as a melee, but not the kind of melee that occurred in the breach between the Somme and Arras in early stages. In the present action, the authorities said, British and French forces are holding out in a steady continuous line and fighting on a basis quite different from the former action. A military spokesman here said that the situation of the northern Allied forces exposed by the Belgian army's surrender is most critical.

He added that all sources unanimously confirm that the Allied forces are battling with extreme heroism and their morale is not affected by the Belgian surrender. The exact position of the Allied troops was not revealed, but the spokesman stated that the heaviest losses were inflicted on the Germans in the region of the Lys River in Belgium.

RAGE AGAINST GERMANS

LONDON, May 29—Military circles here in touch with the British forces say that the main thing felt by the troops is rage against the Germans, not so much because of the continuous bombing they have undergone, but because of the merciless attacks they have seen German planes and tanks delivering against refugees. A spokesman said that the men have seen tanks charging down and crushing men, women and children. These things shall not be forgotten and with ensure that if the Germans attempt an invasion of Britain they will get the right reception.

The British Expeditionary Force in Belgium and northern France is still intact and has withdrawn some miles from the Channel coast, it was stated authoritatively here today. It is emphasized that the troops have not lost their cohesion and are being admirably supported by the French.

BELGIAN PARLIAMENT

PARIS, May 29—On Friday the Belgian Parliament will meet somewhere in France, it is announced here, and it is expected to endorse the decision of the Government to fight on.

Meanwhile a new army is being raised from exiles behind the Allied lines.

Domei Tsushin

ROME, May 28—The Japanese goodwill mission left here this morning for a tour of northern Italy after completing a busy week here which was highlighted by meetings with King Victor Emmanuel III, Premier Benito Mussolini and Pope Pius XII.

The mission was enthusiastically cheered by crowds which lined the streets to the station where Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano and other high dignitaries were waiting to see them off. A guard of honor and a military band was drawn up on the railway platform.

While the band played in their honor, Naotake Sato, leader of the mission, thanked Count Ciano for the warm welcome received in Rome.

The mission this afternoon visited an athletic academy for Fascist girls at Orvieto, in Tuscany, and the city of Florence. They were met everywhere with enthusiastic welcome by Fascist organizations.

Beer bottles for this purpose will have each a label with letters "For Household Use."

However, despite the new measure, the supply will not be so large as last summer since the total amount brewed itself has been reduced by 20 per cent.

Excess Profit Tax

LONDON, May 29—The Excess Profit Tax of 100 per cent is now to be applied to all undertakings, whether engaged in war production or not. The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Kingsley Wood, told the House of Commons that he would shortly introduce such a resolution to take effect from April 1 last, and said that nothing short of the maximum effort, financial and in the factories and workshops, would be able to sustain the fighting forces.

Taxation had been a heavy burden and a still further increase is likely, he said, although had risen from £765 million in 1936-37 to £1,200 million today. I know that our people will not flinch from further necessary taxation.

BRITISH PRESS CALM OVER LEOPOLD'S ACT

Labor Morale High Despite Capitulation, Says Daily Telegraph

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, May 29—There is no disposition either in the press or well informed quarters here to minimize the critical situation wherein England finds itself as a result of the unforseen defection of Belgian King Leopold who early yesterday ordered the surrender of his forces to the Germans.

The London Times, examining the new position created by King Leopold's capitulation, admitted editorially that "it is scarcely possible to over-estimate the gravity of the situation created by this unforseen defection from the Allied cause."

DISADVANTAGES POINTED OUT

The newspaper pointed out that the Allies campaign for the defense of the Low Countries has been fought under all possible disadvantages. While it is careful to make clear the unconstitutional nature of the Belgian King's decision the Times asserts, "there is, however, no reason to reject the pleas for a suspension of final judgment until the full facts are known."

After showing that the British Army is as yet undefeated while the navy and air force have shown ascendancy in their fields, the Times declares, "in order that these irrestible forces may be brought into play for the destruction of Nazism, it is essential that Great Britain and France endure to the end."

The journal asserts that the peril is imminent but that the nation is awake and that many times before when new dangers arose the British nation always rose and repelled the invader.

Commenting on the great response by the Empire to Britain's needs in the fight against Nazism, the Times states, "at every critical moment in this story of the Empire, the example set by the Government and people of the mother country has a great and immediate effect throughout the Dominions and dependencies," and concludes.

"The example set in this country on national unity and common efforts to meet an unprecedented danger has given an inspiring lead which is everywhere being followed."

The Daily Telegraph feels that discussion of King Leopold's decision at the present moment is not called for and adds, "in France, no less than in our own country, the effect of the disastrous breaking of the line is the hardening of resolution."

LABOR MORALE HIGH

The journal finishes its editorial on the note that while the morale of the British working classes is extremely high, "let the industrial effort of our people be worthy of the men fighting and dying for them and there is within our reach such a deliverance as shall never be forgotten by any revolution of time that the world has to furnish."

Other papers also discuss the extent of King Leopold's decision and its effects on the present campaign. The Daily Mail declares, "at this moment, let us not forget the heroic resistance of the Belgian army," while the Daily Express declares, "let us now leave it to the Belgians themselves to pass judgment on their ruler."

The News Chronicle asserts that "it is not the fact of surrender but the method that is deplorable."

War Tank Production Study Board Created

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, May 29—The formation of a special tank board, composed of technical experts, to supervise production and design war tanks, which play such a vital role in modern mechanized warfare, was announced to the House of Commons today by Herbert Morrison, Minister of Supply.

The board, he said, will be asked to conduct a careful research of all problems connected with tank construction and tank warfare, by taking into account all experiences and data gained during recent hostilities.

The decision to organize such a board was reached following consultations with the Secretary of State for War, Major Anthony Eden, he revealed.

BRITONS FACE MORE TAXES, WOOD WARNS

Exchequer Chancellor Says Heavier Levies Needed; War Loan Floating Debated

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, May 29—A warning that the British nation faces still heavier taxation because of the critical change in the war situation which had rendered all previous estimates on the rate of expenditure outdated was voiced by Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer, during a budget debate in the House of Commons this afternoon.

The Chancellor said that it was still impossible to give any real estimate, but expressed the conviction that whatever sacrifices are necessary would be willingly made by the public. The total revenue from taxation, he said, now amounts to £1,200,000,000 annually, adding that it has become necessary to augment this by new burdens in the near future.

MAXIMUM EFFORT NEEDED

With the enforcement of the Emergency Powers Act the Excess Profits Tax of 100 per cent is now to be applied to all undertakings, whether engaged in war production or not, he said, adding that he would shortly introduce such a resolution to take effect retroactive to April 1. He emphasized that nothing short of the maximum effort, financial and in the factories and workshops, would be able to sustain the fighting forces.

He said that there was an increased need for borrowing; however, as more people would be put into employment and consumption would be strictly controlled, the people should have more money available for lending to the Government.

WAR LOANS CONSIDERED

Asked to give more concrete plans, Sir Kingsley informed the House that the Government is now considering what will be the best form for launching future war loans. In one part of the debate, he denied that bank savings will in any way be endangered by the Government's new acquired powers over persons and property.

Meanwhile, Ernest Bevin, Minister of Labor and National Service, announced that workers and employers have been asked to cancel holidays as an aid to speed up production. The holidays to be cancelled are only those taken annually, not odd days, he said.

OFFICIALS QUIT HOMES, OFFICES IN CHUNGKING

Japanese Bombings Force Evacuation of Many Public, Private Buildings

Domei Tsushin

HONGKONG, May 30—Residential quarters of political and military circles have been abandoned due to consecutive large-scale bombings carried out by Japanese naval air forces, according to a report reaching here today from Chungking.

Chinese official circles, it is understood, are transferring their families to various cities along the Chengtu-Chungking highway from the new village on the bank of the Kialingking River.

SAFETY ZONES CHOSEN

Furthermore, it was learned that Chungking authorities are planning to establish offices of important party political organs at some chosen safety zones in the interior in order to avoid Japanese bombardments. And the removal of some organs had already been started.

Lin Sen, chairman of the National Government, Yu Yu-jen, Chu Cheng and other presidents of five Yuans as well as chiefs of ministries and commissions excepting those concerned with military affairs are likely to move shortly to Tzeilutsing or Omeishan.

Meanwhile the proposed transfer of the capital is again being discussed in some circles, but possibilities of the materialization are said to be scanty. The transfer of the Government organs, to the safety zone, however, is believed to be a temporary measure limited to the summer season, when threats of aerial bombardment are greatest.

HEADQUARTERS DAMAGED

Domei Tsushin

HONGKONG, May 30—According to a Chungking telegram, an unimpeachable informant states that as the result of recent large-scale bombing carried out by the Japanese naval air raiders Chungking's central quarters sustained one of the most serious damages.

About 800 public and private buildings have been either demolished as the result of the bombing or gone up in flames.

Various military institutions as well as important buildings, including Finance, Economic, Communications Ministries, Municipal Government, City Police Headquarters, Kuomintang Headquarters and many others, have been smashed.

BOMBING ANNOUNCED

Domei Tsushin

UNDISCLOSED BASE, May 30—Two Chinese fighting planes of seven which took to the air were shot down yesterday afternoon in a 30-minute fight with Japanese planes over western Chungking, it was announced here today by the naval press section of Central China waters.

Yesterday afternoon the Japanese naval air raiders carried out large-scale bombing on two separate occasions at 1:50 p.m. and 2:20 p.m. over Chinese military establishments at Chungking in spite of continuous anti-aircraft firing, it was disclosed.

During the raid seven Chinese planes flew against the Japanese aces and attempted to prevent the bombardments, however, the Chinese efforts proved fruitless and two were shot down.

It also was disclosed that three columns of fire were seen rising from the capital of Chiang Kai-shek. All the Japanese air raiders returned safely to their base.

GAMELIN SUICIDE RUMORED

ROME, May 30—Il Messagero publishes a report from Berne confirming on best authority the rumors about the suicide of General Gamelin which were current since several days. The report adds that General Gamelin committed suicide by request of the French high command. Messagero further reports that General Korap who commanded the French troops in the Ardennes was regarded as principally guilty for the Allies' defeat and that he has been shot.

Prioux Captured

BERLIN, May 30—The commander-in-chief of the French Army, General Prioux, and his entire staff were captured on May 29 near Steenvorde east of Cassel, it is officially announced.

REICH PROTESTS

BERLIN, May 30—Reich Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop by mediation of the Swedish Government notified the French Government that reports reaching the Reich Government are recently increasing "according to which members of the German air force and of parachute troops who have been made prisoners of war by the French are meeting with a treatment in utter contrast to the regulations of international law and the treaty regulations in force, as well as to the elementary rules of humaneness."

The Reich Foreign Minister relates several concrete and grave cases and declares "The Reich Government therefore informs the French Government here that it will henceforth treat the members of the French air force falling into German hands exactly according to the French example and that it will retaliate most sharply against any case which becomes known of firing at German fliers who are in distress and descending with their parachute, as well as against any case of murder of German fliers."

PARIS PAPER PESSIMISTIC

GENEVA, May 30—Growing pessimism is now noticeable also in the French press as the result of the collapse of the French northern army. This pessimism is expressed especially strikingly by the Petit Parisien which says: "The news is hard and cruel. It is terrible. We cannot understand this unparalleled disaster. Our reason is hurt as well as our patriotism. It is terrible, it is not imaginable."

Swedes Defend Leopold

STOCKHOLM, May 30—The Swedish public opinion almost unanimously defends the action of Leopold, says the "Stockholms Tidningen" today. It was sad to see people from their places of safety abroad arrogate to themselves the right to judge the army which had bravely done its duty but was finally compelled to surrender. The Allies themselves, concludes the paper, had certainly assumed a greater burden of guilt than anyone else when they recalled their troops without warning from Andalsnes and Namsos and left the Norwegians to their fate.

NAZI RESERVES SAFE

BERLIN, May 30—At the outbreak of the war, non-commissioned officers and men were called to active military service in the air force who were older than 45 years and thus beyond military age. These men as far as they are still on active service will now be gradually released. The air force is thus following the example of the army. At the time of the heaviest fighting in France, this measure must be regarded as a proof for the gigantic reserves of men in Germany.

BELGIAN ARMY DIFFICULT

GENEVA, May 30—Ex-Belgian Foreign Minister Spaak, according to the Paris Intransigeant, seems to have lost all hope that the Government's decision to raise Belgian troops in France will be successful. Mr. Spaak declares that naturally it would be extremely difficult to find "trained men," and this was the chief trouble confronting General Denis who has been entrusted with the task of creating a new Belgian army.

Battle Raging

PARIS, May 30—The Flanders battle is raging and the retirement of the British and French to the Belgian coast in the region of Dunkirk continues in good order. One factor officially emphasized today is that the main bases of the British Expeditionary Force were not in the area now occupied by the Germans. Therefore, though they have lost much material, the main depots are not in German hands.

The official communique this morning said that there is violent fighting on the Yser River and in the neighborhood of Cassel. The Yser runs parallel with the coast at a distance varying from 12 to 20 miles. Cassel is near the Yser and about 20 miles south of Dunkirk.

U.S. PAPERS HAIL HEROISM

NEW YORK, May 30—Many American papers speak of the heroism being displayed by the Allied troops in northeast France. For instance, the New York Times writes today: "The British and French are living up to their finest military tradition. Those who survive will bring back stories of heroism which will live as long as bravery is honored. Those who never return will leave a memory which will inspire the Allies' peoples for generations to come."

22 PLANES DOWNED

LONDON, May 30—The Royal Air Force brought down 22 German planes over Dunkirk yesterday, it was announced last night.

"Altogether no less than 52 of the enemy were shot down, including 25 bombers. Seventeen others were seriously damaged. Ten of our fighters are missing."

The most amazing air victory of the war was announced today. Out of the total of 69 German planes shot down or seriously damaged yesterday, 37 were destroyed by a single squadron of 12 new two-seater "Defiant" fighters, without the loss of one. One gunner who thought his plane vitally hit jumped by parachute over Belgium, but all the planes returned safely. Of these 37 enemy planes, 17 were fighters and the rest bombers.

NAVY SUPPORTS

LONDON, May 30—An Admiralty announcement tonight states: "The Royal Navy has been and is giving all possible help and support to the British and French forces operating in the vicinity of the French and Belgian coasts under heavy enemy pressure. Warships are giving support and covering fire to the troops, impeding the enemy's movements and inflicting considerable punishment upon the German advance forces.

"Operations of this nature, however, cannot be carried out without losses. The British destroyers Grafton 1,335 tons, Grenade, 1,335 tons, and Wakeful, 1,100 tons, and certain auxiliary craft have been lost. One small transport of 689 tons has been sunk. The spirit and conduct of all concerned are beyond all praise. Operations are proceeding."

Le Bruen's Message

PARIS, May 30—President Le Brun today addressed the following message to General Blanchard, Commander-in-Chief of the Allied troops in the north: "While the French troops under your orders, in full collaboration with the British Expeditionary Force and with the help of the Allied navies, are fighting a battle which will be placed in the foremost ranks of military history, I send them the grateful greetings of the country. All Frenchmen unite in expressing to you their warm admiration for the great courage and fierce energy of our soldiers and the new glory with which they are adorning our flags."

NARVIK FALL DESCRIBED

LONDON, May 30—Eye-witness accounts of the capture of Narvik, the Norwegian iron ore port, by the Allies say that the Germans suffered heavy losses. Allied troops closed in from the north, south and west. British troops attacked and bombarded in the morning, while French troops in military landing craft crossed the fjord under fire and made a successful landing on the headland near Narvik, attacking through the strongly defended wooded country.

Polish troops crossed the hills to the south of the port and opened a vigorous attack while the Norwegians were working in from the east. Occasional Verey lights told the Navy of the positions of the Allied forces and barrages were laid down.

GERMANY SAID TRANSPORTING TANKS BY GIANT PLANES TO FRONT LINES

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, May 23—With the success of German military operations on the Western Front attributed to the use of new weapons of war, a report here today claims gigantic military planes capable of transporting tanks and field pieces to the frontlines, are being employed for the first time since the beginning of the war by the Nazis in a determined drive to crush Allied resistance in Flanders and to gain control of Channel ports.

These mammoth planes, resembling the Nazi's Dornier bombers, are said to have a wing spread of 120 feet and to be driven by four powerful motors, which reportedly enable them to take off with 30-ton tanks and heavy field pieces. Their lifting power, it is claimed, nearly matches that of the American Clipper ships, which can take off with a load of 40 tons.

Should this report be true, military experts indicated it is entirely feasible for the Nazis to attack England from within by augmenting parachutist attacks with tanks and artillery pieces transported by planes.

FLAME-THROWING TANKS

United Press

PARIS, May 24—The newest and most terrible of all modern war machines designed to destroy and to kill efficiently if not painlessly—German flame-throwing tanks operated by specialists in asbestos suits—made their appearance on the Western Front yesterday.

The Germans threw these new monsters of destruction into the death struggle on the Western Front in an effort to send aid to the sorely battered German divisions whose sprint to the English Channel was reported by the French to have been slowed up.

Refueling difficulties the fatigue of men and motors, and the alleged loss of more than 1,400 tanks, armored cars and other light motorized units in ten days of shattering battle were said to have slowed up the German columns.

IN DESTROYING TOWNS

The flame-throwers, which are designed for the wholesale destruction of towns and villages, as well as for frontal attacks on fortified lines and casements, represent the last word in the imagination of military engineers who try to keep parallel the race between the increased killing power and the increased resistance power of modern weapons.

Many French military experts agreed here last night that material has surpassed tactics in the present war and that armies are obliged to overcome the tremendous advance the engineers have given to attacking armies in the way of the new equipment.

Flame-throwing tanks are fast and light and they are well equipped to defend themselves. They carry two machine-guns and a 37 mm. cannon. Their flame-thrower protrudes like a long gun barrel.

The tank rolls up to a building and sets it on fire by squirting liquid petrol inside. If the building is fortified, the tank can even fight its own way to the objective.

Rumbling down a village street, the flame-throwing tanks set fire to every third building on the theory that each flaming house will spread the fire to buildings immediately on either side.

When these tanks attack casements, they run right up to the stronghold and try to squirt the liquid fire through the gun aperture, thus frying the gunners inside the casement.

These tactics are weighted with danger, however, because most casements are fitted with anti-tank guns which can pierce the thick steel plating of the average tank. These flame-throwers, to keep moving rapidly and cover great distances, have been forced to sacrifice heavy armor protection for speed.

OFFICER FROM FRONT DESCRIBES DIFFICULTIES FACED BY B.E.F.

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, May 29—How the British Expeditionary Force, which fought with the Belgian Army just east of Brussels when the Low Countries were invaded by the Germans, turned back with unflinching gallantry attack after attack of Nazi troops, was described tonight over the radio by a senior officer of the B.E.F. who has returned from the front lines.

He paid high tribute to the cool and skilful handling of British troops by General Viscount Gort, the Commander-in-Chief, and to the heroism of the troops and self-sacrificing gallantry of the air force.

Allied forces, he said, were forced to withdraw only because of German penetration southward. Despite incredible difficulties encountered, the withdrawal was carried out without confusion due to the magnificent leadership of the General Staff and the gallant endurance of the troops.

The whole area in which the B.E.F. fought was literally swarming with hapless refugees who were fleeing in terror, he said, adding that the heartrending sights will forever haunt him.

The successful extrication, he continued, of the long British mechanized columns, which were constantly under intense Nazi air attacks, was due to remarkable feats performed by the rearguards. German armored and mechanized units, however, poured through the gap to the south cutting the British communications southward and exposing the Allied positions in the rear.

Describing the difficulties which continued to mount with ever-increasing pressure of the Germans, he said that with the Belgians on the left and the French on the right, the Allies, which had to keep their communications with the coast open, had to form two new fronts—one to the south and another to the west—to face strong Nazi forces rapidly attempting to encircle them.

Despite the long strung out and ever-lengthening front, which was cut off from the main Allied army in France, the defenders bravely fought back at every point, and even delivered one brilliant major counterattack near Arras. But inadequate force of Allied armored units prevented the encircled army from piercing the German lines, so nothing else remained except to stop the Nazis from breaking through. Any movement within the ring became exceedingly difficult, he concluded.

ICELAND CALLED GRANDMOTHER OF PARLIAMENTS

Country on Borderline Of Hemisphere; Northern Frontier Faces Arctic

Establishment of direct diplomatic relations now under way between the United States and Iceland following German occupation of the island's sister kingdom of Denmark calls attention to a small nation which itself has had no foreign war in more than a thousand years, says a bulletin from the Washington, D.C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"For most of the long period since its settlement in the 9th century, Iceland moreover has had a representative form of government," continues the bulletin. "Called the 'Grandmother of Parliaments,' its elective assembly, the Althing, was established back in 930, more than 800 years before the infant United States declared its independence. This assembly has been in continuous existence ever since, with the exception of a less-than-half-century 'blackout' beween 1800 and 1843.

HEMISPHERES MEET

"Iceland is set astride the 20th degree of west longitude, the arbitrary line generally accepted as marking the end of the Western and the beginning of the Eastern Hemisphere. Its northern reaches border on the Arctic Circle.

"It is some 2,500 miles northeast of New York City and about 700 miles west of Bergen, one of the first German objectives in the action against Norway. Two hundred miles farther west of Iceland lies Greenland.

"A roughly oval-shaped patch of land with a small fanlike peninsula jutting off its northwest coast, Iceland was first settled—according to the latest information on this long-controversial subject—by Irish monks. Centuries before, various seafaring nations are believed to have been familiar with the island, including the Greeks and peoples of the British Isles. Some historians assert that Columbus himself sailed to Iceland in the winter of 1477.

"The first extensive colonization, however, was by Norwegians. Today, the island's population of less than 120,000 is still largely Scandinavian. More than a quarter of the inhabitants are concentrated in the capital at Reykjavik.

"While its blood ties, culture, and economic life have so far been linked with Europe, Iceland has recently turned toward the West. Not long before the German occupation of Denmark, the island obtained a million-dollar credit loan from Uncle Sam, facilitating purchases from the big neighbor to the southwest of such necessities as rye, wheat, stock feed, and gasoline. In November, 1939, direct shipping connections were set up between the United States and the North Atlantic island. An Icelandic tourist bureau has been established to encourage an already growing travel interest in this Viking land of the midnight sun, with its volcanic scenery, its hot springs, and winter sports facilities.

"In recent trade figures Great Britain ranked first in Iceland's import-export books. As a source of supply Denmark was second, while a rapidly expanding German business made third place. In 1939 the United States came fourth as a customer for Icelandic supplies, particularly cod liver oil.

"A region of fire and snow, where glaciers and lava beds combine to make much of its area unproductive, Iceland has few mineral resources and a generally poor soil, growing in quantity only such crops as hay, potatoes and turnips. On the other hand the volcanic nature of the island which have frequently brought disaster also provide a continuous supply of hot springs, whose piped water is valuable in heating plants, in greenhouses, and warming the earth of truck gardens. Iceland in addition has a rich fishing and, fish-production industry. With its may rushing streams, the island has a potential water power believed to be greater than that of any other country of similar size.

"With an ancient folk literature which was flourishing in the days of Europe's medieval darkness, Iceland boasts no illiteracy, no jail. With no army and navy, its budget has been balanced for years.

"Old as Icelandic history is, however, the modern nation celebrated its 20th birthday only in December, 1938. Explanation of the apparent paradox lies in the fact that the island was early under the control of Norway and later under Denmark. It was not until 1918 that Iceland received its present independence and Constitution, under which it was allied with Denmark by allegiance to the same king. Following recent upsets in Europe, the Icelandic Parliament has now decided to handle its own foreign policy."

Nakajima Faction Shies From Meet

The Seiyukai Nakajima Faction has informally decided not to send its representatives to the preparatory committee in the "Sacred Campaign League" for the formation of a new political party but not to prohibit the party men from participating voluntarily in the committee.

In the meantime, the same party presented a resolution regarding rice measures to Toshio Shimada, Agriculture and Forestry Minister, Thursday afternoon.

The resolution reads:

"The Government shall concentrate its efforts in the attainment of the increased production of provisions and simultaneously carry out the purchase of barley, wheat and rye to be produced this year."

FRENCH INFLUENCE LEAGUE TO QUIT

Avenol Arrives in Paris; Small Staff at Geneva

Transocean

GENEVA, May 19—The Secretary General of the League of Nations, M. Avenol, arrived in France two days ago and has no intention of returning to Geneva although he left a skeleton staff of 60 League officials in Geneva, Transocean is informed.

It is also assertdd here that all funds of the League have been removed to France in spite of emphatic protests by some of the delegations of the Southeast European countries.

Complete uncertainty still prevails regarding the present status of the roughly 40 diplomatic delegations to the League.

Diplomatic quarters here hold the view that the action of the Secretary General of the League, who so brusquely put an end to the activities of the League Secretariat in Geneva, has been inspired by the French Government, which hopes that the liquidation of the League Secretariat in Geneva will be regarded by the world as confirmation of the rumors spread by Allied propaganda that Switzerland is threatened by Germany.

It cannot be denied, it is pointed out, that in spite of the war the League of Nations was able to continue its activities in Switzerland without any hindrance. It is moreover confirmed that the Swiss Government by no means suggested to the Secretary General of the League that he should make preparations for a departure from Geneva.

It is moreover regarded as significant that the steps taken by Secretary General Avenol, who is a Frenchman, were taken against the will and to a large extent also without the knowledge of the heads of the League delegations from the various countries.

Britain and France Cannot Be Divided, Says N.Y. Times

Reuter

LONDON, May 21—"Germany is trying to divide France and Britain physically as German diplomacy has previously sought to separate the two Allies spiritually," declares a New York Times editorial quoted in a special commentary issued in London.

"Of one thing we may be certain, the alliance between France and Britain is unbreakable. Both peoples have stubborn loyalty, both have courage which is never more magnificently displayed than in the hour of great trial.

"Both are clear-eyed enough to see that they would be the next inevitable victims of German fury if either of them could be isolated then defeated through the ability of the German Army to throw its full strength in one direction or the other.

"In union too solid to be broken either by the terror of total war or an offer of treacherous peace the two nations battle for democracy and freedom."

The Gothenburg Goteborgs-Posten says: 'The situation changes to the Allies' advantage to the same degree as German armoured divisions spread.

"Then, if not before, the Allies' chance comes. General Weygand certainly knows when to grasp his chance."

India Watching 'Fifth Column'

Reuter

SIMLA, May 21—The Government of India, it is understood, has taken certain steps to meet the possible menace of "fifth column" activities.

The steps are additional to ordinary precautionary measures adopted at the outbreak of the war.

REICH PROTESTS

BERLIN, May 31—Through the mediation of the Swedish Government, Reich Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop notified the French Government of the following information: "Reports reaching the Reich Government are increasing in number of late according to which members of the German air force and parachute troops who have been made prisoners of war by the French are accorded a treatment which is in utter contrast to the regulations of international law and all treaty regulations as well as to the elementary rules of humaneness.

"An especially characteristic example of such a scandalous treatment is the case of Colonel Lackner who temporarily was a prisoner of war of the French forces. From his service report it becomes evident that this officer when he descended by parachute after his plane had been set fire to was fired at by the French troops. He was most brutally ill-treated by Moroccan soldiers and threatened with being shot after he had been captured and he finally was shackled with chains.

"The report furthermore shows that several other captured German fliers were taken despite their injuries in a long drive to a place where they were interrogated without having been given medical assistance. This treatment of injured German soldiers is not a matter of just a few individual cases for which despotism and cruelty of lower French ranks could be made responsible.

"Many other reports which have reached the Reich Government testify in a similar way of the cruelty and brutality with which German fliers and parachutists are treated by the French troops after they have been captured. The German high command is not willing to pass silently over these facts and to continue in future the magnanimous treatment hitherto accorded French fliers captured by the Germans despite the opposite French attitude.

"The Reich Government therefore informs the French Government that it will henceforth treat the members of the French air force falling into German hands exactly according to the French example and that it will retaliate most sharply against any case which becomes known of firing at a German flier who is in distress and who is descending with his parachute, as well as against any case of murder of German fliers."

AXIS VOLUME PUBLISHED

BERLIN, May 31—On the occasion of the first anniversary of the German-Italian alliance, the periodical "Rome-Berlin-Tokyo" recalls the words Reich Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop addressed to the Italian nation in May, 1939, in Milan.

"Often in history," the German Foreign Minister stated on that occasion, "two great men who lived in the same era, have been opponents. Fate wished that in our era two great men are friends: the Duce and the Fuehrer. For your Italians and for us Germans this fact means a tremendous piece of good. Democracy, however, which looks with hatred upon the imposing renascence of the German and Italian nations, may know that the friendship of these two men is inseparable, and that they want peace. Democracy may also know, however, that these two men are invincible."

From British Sources

WITHDRAWAL CONTINUES

LONDON, May 31—Under the protection of the Allied navies and air forces the withdrawal of British, French and Belgians still continues, while their comrades hold off the Germans in what is officially described as "fighting as bitter as ever." It cannot be revealed how many have been got away, but it was learned from authoritative sources here that the number of men who have reached Britain is "very large."

CORUNNA LINE HELD

PARIS, May 31—The line which the Allies are holding some distance from the coast is known as the Corunna line. Reports say that this line is being held firmly and the defenders have been reinforced by the arrival of some of General Prioux's troops, who have cut through the German lines near Cassel and along the passes leading to Dunkirk.

The Dunkirk area is being helped by the flooding on both sides of the town. It is believed that water released from the Marck canal has turned the land into marsh. In the past two and a half days thousands of tons of water have poured through lock gates controlled by French troops. The floods vary from 18 inches to three or four feet in depth.

R. A. F. RAID CONTINUES

LONDON, May 31—The Royal Air Force is continuing its magnificent work in covering the retreat. Against vastly superior numbers they have time and again shown their fighting qualities and in numberless aerial combats have defeated stronger forces.

One squadron which has been prominent in the recent fighting is an auxiliary squadron of pilots who learned to fly in the weekends. They arrived at the beginning of the invasion of the Low Countries and since then have accounted for 45 enemy planes, with several more possibles. Most of the pilots are from the west of England, but one is Canadian and another a well-known Davis Cup tennis player.

Most of the 2,000 German planes believed destroyed since the invasion of the Low Countries have been bombers, which carry a crew of four. Their fighters carry one or two. It is thought that the enemy must have lost at least 5,000 pilots and gunners. Their losses are three or four times as great as those of the Allies combined. The Allies will have achieved equality in personnel, it is thought. It is known that Germany is using pilots with very little training.

BELGIAN PARLIAMENT

PARIS, May 31—The Belgian Parliament met at Limoges today and began with an enthusiastic demonstration of gratitude toward France. Mr. Pierlot, the Belgian Premier, told the deputies of the action taken by the Government. "Belgium has only one word: 'We came into the war by the side of France and Britain, and we shall only lay down the arms which remain to us when we have attained all our war aims—peace, independence and freedom.'"

GERMANS LOSE EQUIPMENT

WASHINGTON, May 31—Reports from American observers in Europe state that Germany has lost 40 per cent of her mechanized equipments in the battle of Flanders. Meanwhile it is reported here that Berlin is now bringing heavy pressure to bear on Rome for Italy to enter the war forthwith, presumably for the purpose of creating a diversion which might draw the French troops from the northern front.

Close political observers here feel that President Roosevelt, as a result of his supplementary emergency defense program, has taken another step toward more open and fuller assistance for the Allies and it is thought that he will take more such steps as long as public opinion agrees with them.

INDIAN FORCE INCREASED

BOMBAY, May 31—India is to increase her land forces by 100,000 men, it is reported today. The new formation is to include motorized and mechanized units and the air force is to be quadrupled. Since the outbreak of war the Indian army has undergone a first expansion of 60,000 men. The Indian navy, has in addition to escort vessels, has a large fleet of anti-submarine craft, mine sweepers and patrol boats.

In the last nine months India's ordnance factories had increased output six or seven times, it was revealed.

ROOSEVELT DENOUNCES MACHINEGUNNING OF FRENCH REFUGEES BY GERMANS

Reuter

WASHINGTON, May 22—At a press conference yesterday, President Roosevelt denounced the machine-gunning of French refugees by German aircraft.

German planes, he said, were sweeping down roads in France with their machine guns wide open, taking a death roll of refugees the like of which had never been seen before.

He thought that the United States would realize the implication of that method of warfare.

Referring to the world "implication," President Roosevelt did not reveal what he thought the implication should be, but remarked that the United States was pretty well united in the current situation, and the faster the news came from Europe the more united the American people became.

He added that 5,000,000 women and children were fleeing southward in France along a 200-mile front, using every available road, mostly on foot or in carts, with German planes gunning them.

President Roosevelt made a very deep impression even on hard-boiled pressmen with his quiet, but obviously heartfelt, denunciation of German machine-gunning of fleeing French women, children and old men.

The President enunciated three points of policy in connection with the general discussion of the defense program.

1. Not a single war millionaire as a result of the war disaster abroad.

2. Labor should not seek to take advantage of the current emergency situation.

3. The Government proposed in no way to weaken its social gains made in the past two years.

THE CHOICE OF THE MULTITUDE

THRILLING BOULOGNE EVACUATION UNDER ENEMY FIRE IS DESCRIBED

Reuter

LONDON, May 29—How destroyers evacuated British troops from Boulogne "under hellish fire" was described in detail by a naval eye-witness today.

He explained how a demolition party was detailed to be ready to move at two hours' notice. Embarking in lorries, a combined party of seamen, Royal Marines and small detachments of Royal Engineers were taken by road to a port, where they embarked in a destroyer and were rushed across the Channel, reaching the main jetty at Boulogne in the forenoon.

A naval party was landed to hold the railway station fit for demolition charges, and to earmark bridges, trains, lock gates, etc. which should be destroyed when the time came.

NEVER UNDER FIRE

The seamen, some of whom were quite young and had never been under fire, were in the railway station fitting detonators to their explosive charges when they came under high explosive shell-fire from the enemy.

The Germans were gradually closing in on the town with light mechanized vehicles, followed by tanks and motorized field guns. German aircraft were busy using bombs and machine-guns. Once there were 60 machines overhead.

Owing to the position of the Germans all round the town, it was impossible to send field guns or other assistance. Consequently, the troops could not hold out indefinitely against the Germans' armored vehicles.

Small parties of Germans were already coming down the streets on the outskirts of the town, and it was decided to shorten the perimeter by a slight British withdrawal.

Naval and military officers, after conferring, agreed that the town could not be held, and with the enemy closing in the demolition of all bridges and important points was decided upon.

RELIEVED BY OTHERS

The destroyer which had brought the naval demolition party had already left under orders. She was relieved by another, and the second was relieved by a third.

When the decision was reached that the town could not be held, small parties of seamen went out with parcels of explosives which they placed by bridges, though they could not be destroyed until the last of Allied troops had withdrawn.

In another part of the harbor was a large train with a wet dock beside it containing a naval trawler.

As both might be captured by the enemy, the officer in charge decided to destroy them together with the power-house and pumping station.

While all this was going on, the Germans were all round the docks at a range of about 400 yards. Snipers were within 50 feet.

Then came the long-expected order: "Complete the demolition."

Machinery, power-houses, etc. were blown up. Anything and everything that might be useful to the enemy were sabotaged. Further charges were placed to make certain of sluice gates and bridges.

Two destroyers came into the harbor and steamed stern first out of the narrow entrance with all the troops they could cram aboard.

THREE MORE ARRIVE

Three more destroyers entered and were fired on furiously by German field guns concealed in a wooded hill. Several German heavy tanks came downhill onto the foreshore while troops on the jetty were embarking in a destroyer.

The courage and daring of the troops were magnificent, even under the tornado of fire, with casualties occurring every second.

All this time the guns of the destroyers were in hot action, blasting the hillsides and German field guns at point-blank range.

One shot at a tank registered a direct hit and caused it to capsize and spin over and over like a cart-wheel. A second tank was similarly knocked out, and others speedily retired.

But for the rapid and accurate fire of the destroyers, the retiring troops must have sustained far heavier casualties. Indeed, the evacuation might never have been possible.

SLOW TRAFFIC IN U.S. SEEN EXPENSIVE

Boston Survey Reveals That Downtown Speed Now Slower Than in 1927

Christian Science Monitor

BOSTON—Thirteen years ago, Dr. Miller McClintock, one of the nation's outstanding traffic engineers, found that automobiles moved along Tremont Street in downtown Boston at an average speed of 5.2 miles an hour.

Today, Prof. A. J. Bone of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, stated that despite the intervening years of progress in automobile design, highway engineering and road building, traffic on Tremont Street moves at the rate of 4.4 miles an hour, or almost one mile an hour slower than it did in 1927.

But why stop with speed comparisons between this year and 1927 when the pace of Old Dobbin 40 years ago easily equaled the 4.4 mile an hour pace of modern automobiles in Tremont Street traffic.

INCREASES GAS COSTS

The Professor's revelation of horse-and-buggy speeds in Boston was made officially before the highway section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers meeting at the Institute recently, only his remarks today expanded his subject into a veritable treatise on the high costs of slow traffic. He considered Boston a flagrant example of lagging traffic which pays twice as much as it should for gasoline consumption.

Traffic congestion, Professor Bone declared, increases gas costs on short city trips by 50 per cent. In other words, it costs $18,000 a year per mile to start and stop, and poke along in first or second gear in Boston congestion, according to his calculations. Of course, the $18,000 expense is shared by some 15,000 motorists, the average number packed into a busy city thoroughfare each hour of each day.

Professor Bone's tests show that traffic on a certain mile of Tremont Street is stopped 52 per cent of the time by traffic lights, policemen and pedestrians. The gasoline mileage on a muddy road in rural districts, he said, is figured at 7 miles a gallon at a speed of 15 miles an hour. On Tremont Street, the gasoline rate is 7.2 miles a gallon at 4.4 miles an hour.

Intentionally or unintentionally, the Professor virtually allied himself with current proposals to construct an elevated express road over Boston streets when he said that "if new facilities of the express highway type were provided in downtown Boston, the average speed on such roads would be greater than 20 miles an hour." Traffic authorities in Boston have arrived at the conclusion that only through an elevated roadway can rapid transit be provided for automobiles in a district that is so honeycombed with narrow, broken up streets.

ACTUAL EXPERIENCE

Professoor Bone obtained some of the data on Tremont Street by actual experience, inching his way along behind the wheel of his own car and abiding by the rules of courtesy and law. How long did it take to drive one-half mile? Seven minutes. Stops? Four and five to the half mile. Only three of the seven minutes was the car in third gear.

These figures prompted a study of gasoline consumption. On busy days when it is necessary to shift gears in rhythm with the windmill gesticulations of the traffic cop and the hurried leaps of pedestrians, the car used gasoline at the rate of 7.2 miles to the gallon. On comparatively peaceful Sundays when traffic stays at home until late hours at least, the same road gave 18.2 miles to the gasoline gallon.

From then on, Professor Bone's computations were just plain arithmetic. If 15,000 cars drive over the same mile each day and if each driver gets 6.1 fewer miles per gallon when the street is crowded, and figuring the number of miles they drive each year on gasoline costing 16 cents a gallon, then the estimated cost of traffic congestion to these motorists is $18,000.

Multiply that by the congestion on similar streets throughout the United States and you have . . but Professor Bone did not attempt to go that far. His slide rule was taxed enough as it was.

WAR REFUGEES IN MEXICO GET CITIZENSHIP

All Spanish People Resident In Nation to Be Naturalized Mexicans If They Desire

Christian Science Monitor

MEXICO, D. F.—The Mexican Government has given permission to all Spanish refugees resident here to become naturalized Mexican citizens if they wish. The same privilege is extended also to residents from other Latin-American nations and a special procedure for facilitating the naturalization process has been set up by the Ministries of Foreign Affairs and Interior.

The majority of the Spanish refugees here, who now number approximately 6,000, are expected to take advantage of the offer. Though many of them still dream of returning to Spain, the prospect for such a return seems remote in view of the apparent strength of the Franco Government and its continued antagonism for those who fought for the Republican cause. Moreover the adoption of Mexican citizenship will not involve the loss of Spanish, or Latin-American nationality according to the decree just issued.

The chief restriction placed upon the naturalized citizens is that, after becoming Mexican nationals, they cannot appeal to their original governments for protection against Mexican laws. This precept is a rigid one in Mexico for government officials have frequently attacked foreigners who sought exrta-territorial privileges. The Mexican spokesmen have consistently contended that immigrants here should accept the hazards and responsibilities, as well as the benefits, of Mexican nationals.

IS NEW STEP FORWARD

The permission to attain Mexican citizenship carries one step further the process of settling the Spanish refugees here. One of the first steps made to enable them to find work was the induction of all members of the Spanish General Union of Labor (UGT) into the Confederation of Mexican Labor in order to give them union status when applying for work.

The condition of the refugees in Mexico is constantly improving although they yet have many problems to solve. It is now estimated that 60 per cent have found work while the remainder are still unemployed. Because of the depressed state of Mexico's economy since they arrived, and because many Mexicans are without work, this record speaks well for the adaptive powers of the Spaniards.

The majority of their work has come from projects initiated by the Spaniards themselves with funds provided by the Republican Government. In each case a careful study of the opportunities available and markets to be supplied preceded the establishment of the industry. The capacities of the refugees and their past training were also taken into consideration.

The biggest project begun in Mexico City was the establishment of the Vulcan Iron Works at a cost of 600,000 pesos. It will employ 500 men, of whom the majority are refugees. The second largest project here is the Mexican Chemical Laboratories, financed with 200,000 pesos, which will employ 100 men. The weekly Bulletin published by and for refugees gives work to 15 journalists and a project is under consideration for starting a publishing house for magazines and books.

FARMS FOR 400 FAMILIES

A large agricultural colony is being established at Santa Clara, Chihuahua on an hacienda bought from a Mexican owner. Cost of this colony is put at 800,000 pesos and 400 families are to be settled there. The land includes farming, grazing and forest lands and will provide the Spaniards with ample opportunity to prove their husbandry.

Another project which will give employment to refugees trained in metal work is an iron and steel foundry to be started at Tiahuana, Lower California. It is being organized by an experienced Spanish technician but the capital invested will be from the United States and Mexico. It will employ 600 men, principally refugees and furnish a needed industry for Mexico which imports most of its finished metal products.

The granting of citizenship to the refugees and to natives of Latin-American States is in sharp contrast with the restrictions which the Mexican Government imposes upon most Europeans, Asiatics and North Americans. It makes clear that although immigration here is needed, only Spanish and Indian stocks is desired since these two form the basic population of Mexico and are believed best fitted to adapt themselves to the Nation's characteristics.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT" - by Ripley

MOUNTAIN CLIMBING IN JAPAN BECOMES POPULAR WITH TOURISTS AND NATIVES

With the return of summer to the green islands of Japan, long lines of whiterobed pilgrims begin once more to greet the dawn from the top of graceful, snowmantled Fujiyama, which stands as a guardian priestess over the empire of the rising sun. Each year more than 60,000 persons climb its perfectly straight slopes. Some are kindergarten children; many more are grandparents. All are drawn from every stratum of Japanese life by the lure of beautiful, semi-sacred Fujiyama.

Despite its altitude of 12,467 feet, Mt. Fuji is not difficult to climb. Annually, during the summer a score of more of Western visitors make the ascent. The actual ascent entails about six hours of hiking up a plainly marked and well traveled trail. Traditionally the climb is made at night so that the pilgrims can see the sunrise from the summit.

Starting from Gotemba railway station, a few hours rail trip from Tokyo, at the eastern foot, climbers have a choice of bus, private car or horseback through the lower forests if they want to harbor their strength. Once in the open, the trail rises more steeply, winding around lava out-croppings and switchbacking steadily higher. To the east lies the truncated Hakone volcano, now a popular hotspring resort; southward stretches the flashing Pacific Ocean; while to the north the five Fuji lakes lay like a string of emeralds.

Every mile and a half the trail is marked by a large, picturesque stone hut, where Japanese food and soft drinks are sold, and where tired pilgrims can rest. Not only do the ten "stations" of Fujiyama offer intermediate goals to the climber, but their bustling activity, their air of hearty hospitality and the sight of resting groups of alpinists are a long-remembered feature of the climb through the early dawn.

Graceful Mt. Fuji is most popular early in August, when the weekend finds an almost endless line of pilgrims stretching up the two principal trails from base to summit. At that season, too, other mountains throughout the empire are drawing their quotas of climbing devotees. Smoking Mt. Asama, overlooking the popular summer resort of Karuizawa, tempts a few hardy souls willing to brave the threat of a volcanic eruption.

Jagged Shirouma, Yarigatake and Tateyama in the Japanese Alps, offering some of the finest rock climbing in the Far East, attract college students and city-dwelling alpinists in great numbers. On the subtropical island of Formosa, Mt. Morrison (Mt. Niitaka to the Japanese) and its flanking ranges stand in snow-capped solitude, waiting for the handful of venturesome mountaineers who annually assail the highest peak in the empire.

For the less ambitious, also, Japan offers ideal summer sport in the long valleys and green hills that rib the three main islands. Every weekend finds the countryside full of hikers, both men and women. The Chichibu range, an hour's ride by train from Tokyo, offers tumbling streams, emerald forests and ancient temples to lovers of the outdoors. Nearby, the spires and crags of Mt. Myogi, whose mist-draped peaks back one another like a scene from a Chinese etching, dare the hardy. But best-loved of all—the peak to which all return sooner or later—is snow-wrapped Fujiyama.

U.S. Army Officers En Route To Ecuador to Establish Mission

United Press

WASHINGTON, May 28—The Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, disclosed here yesterday that representatives of the United States Army and Navy left Panama yesterday for Ecuador to discuss the possibility of establishing a military mission there to study hemispheric defense in accordance with Ecuador's desire.

The representatives, Captain Fred Riefkohl, of the U.S. Navy and Captain Francis Brady of the Army Air Corps, do not constitute such a mission, Hull explained. He indicated they would lay the groundwork for the actual military mission, which would be sent later.

CINCINNATI REDS TAKE LEAD IN NATIONAL LEAGUE

Beat Chicago Cubs 4-2 In Upset of Memorial Day Baseball in U.S.

United Press

NEW YORK, May 30—The largest program of major league baseball played so far this season was staged today as the game participated in the nationwide observance of Memorial Day.

Batting sprees, home runs and pitcher's duels went into the make-up of the day's schedule, with all teams engaging in double headers with the exception of the rained-out Pittsburgh Pirates and St. Louis Cardinals.

Standings underwent a wholesale revision, with the most notable change being the ascent of the Cincinnati Reds into first place in the senior circuit. The Reds moved up by taking both ends of a double bill from the Chicago Cubs while the Brooklyn Dodgers were losing two to the New York Giants.

4-2 VICTORY

In the opening game the Reds were outhit but managed to bunch their blows for a 4-2 victory over the Bruins. Nicholson's homer in the fourth with one on gave the Cubs their only tallies. In the nightcap the Reds were forced to 12 innings before garnering a 9-8 decision. Rizzo's single in the 12th scored McCormick with the winning run.

Veteran Carl Hubbell turned in a superb one-hit performance to hurl the Giants to a 7-0 victory over the Dodgers in the opening game. Carl pitched to only 27 batters, striking out six and walking none. In the nightcap the Giants staged a tremendous spree to score eight runs in the 12th inning and defeat the Dodgers by 12-4. The rally was climaxed by Demaree's second homer of the year with two aboard.

The Boston Bees and Philadelphia Phillies divided honors, the Bees copping the opener, 5-1 and losing the nightcap, 5-1. Miller's home run with the bases full clinched the nightcap.

In the American League, the Cleveland Indians swept two games from the Chicago White Sox to move up to within one game of the Boston Red Sox, who divided honors with the New York Yankees.

Four twin killings in the first five innings helped the Indians to win the opener, 3-1, while Trosky's 11th homer paved the way to a 3-1 win in the nightcap.

WASHINGTON SENATORS WIN

The Washington Senators took two from the Philadelphia Athletics, 14-2 and 7-6. Hayes's sixth homer of the year featured the opener, while in the nightcap Bonura homered with the bases full and Case homered with one on in the seventh.

The Detroit Tigers won two from the St. Louis Browns, 15-6 and 2-1. In the opener York's double in the ninth scored Greenberg with the winning run, while in the nightcap York homered with two on to lead the attack.

The Yanks and Red Sox divided, the Yanks taking the opener, 4-0, and Beantown the nightcap, 11-4. Dickey's third homer in three games featured a second inning Yankee rally in the opener. In the nightcap Cronin opened hostilities in the first by clouting a homer with two aboard, after which the Red Sox were never headed.

ALLIED LOSSES IN NAZI DRIVE TO WEST TOLD

Maginot Line Pierced, Belgians Surrender Part of 21-Day Drive

D.N.B.

BERLIN, May 31—Twenty-one days of the German offensive in the West have resulted in the following situation, military experts stated today.

1. The Belgian army has surrendered.
2. The French 1st, 7th and 9th armies have been wiped out in the Flanders battle.
3. The British expeditionary Corps sent to the Continent has been annihilated.
4. The Maginot Line, so far considered impregnable, was broken through on a 300 kilometer front from Dunkirk to Montmedy.
5. The German front line runs from Abbeville along the Somme, Aisne and Meuse to Sedan and at its nearest point is only 100 kilometers from Paris.
6. The German armed forces have reached the narrowest part of the Channel at Calais and dominate the Thames estuary.

AIR FORCE DOMINATES

Moreover, the German air force dominates not only the front area but also the enemy hinterland, and by effective bombing disturbs the enemy's lines of supply and industrial production. The planned attack by the enemy armies against the Ruhr district has been repulsed and the German positions were advanced 300 kilometers toward the West. The German supply is secured while the Western Powers lost important industrial districts in Belgium and Northern France. Fighting is still going on between the German troops and isolated enemy detachments are still offering desperate resistance but it is of no importance as far as the outcome of the Flanders battle is concerned.

BRITISH ATROCITIES CHARGED

D.N.B.

BERLIN, D.N.B. May 31—Atrocities committed by the British troops in Belgium are described by war correspondent Franz Pesendorfer in a dispatch from the front. The British troops, Pesendorfer states, brutally maltreated the Belgian civilian population and plundered their homes. British dynamiting squads destroyed not only bridges and entire blocks of buildings in the regions which were to be evacuated by the British forces but also ruthlessly plundered the homes of the people in the regions where dynamiting took place. At Gramon, plundering British soldiers threatened to shoot a Belgian gendarme who tried to prevent them from pillaging and compelled him to leave the quarter of the town where the plundering was underway.

FLEMING SHOT

A Fleming who tried to enter his home which was located close to the point where a British dynamiting squadron had been at work, was shot by the British soldiers. Similar incidents occurred in the majority of the Flemish towns and villages raided by British troops. Particularly dastardly outrages were committed by the British troops in Denderhauten on the night of May 20. A Flemish peasant "arrested" by British soldiers because he allegedly had tried to cut a telephone wire, was bayonetted and riddled with bullets. Another inhabitant of the village who demanded to know what had happened to the murdered peasant, was likewise assassinated and the same fate befell a third man who inquired about the fate of two men refugees of the neighboring village of Denderlewe. When the British troops had withdrawn, the bodies of the murdered men were found by other inhabitants of the village of Denderhauten.

U.S. LABOR RIFT, LEWIS ARE STUDIED

Latest Dramatic Peace Offer by C.I.O. Head Unlikely to End Problem

Christian Science Monitor

WASHINGTON—The original causes of cleavage between the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor have largely disappeared but the rift between them is wider and deeper than ever, and the latest dramatic peace offer by John L. Lewis, C. I. O. head, seems unlikely to bring them immediately together.

Students of the problem who have been interested and sympathetic with the American labor movement for years tend to blame the C. I. O. leader for the present impasse. They cannot bring themselves to take the latest peace offer by Mr. Lewis very seriously. On the other hand unionists are delighted to have peace discussed in labor circles at all. So great is the desire for peace among the rank and file and so obvious is it becoming that the present struggle is having suicidal effects on organized labor, that any talk of peace is welcomed. Like the mission of Sumner Welles to war-torn Europe, it lifts the heart of many peace-loving trade unions to think of a possibility of agreement and armistice between rival factions.

INDUSTRIAL VS. CRAFT UNION

The C. I. O. originally split from the A. F. of L. on an industrial-versus-craft issue and also because a group of energetic, enthusiastic and imaginative leaders in the A. F. of L. believed that under existing conditions little hope existed for organizing mass industries. Their success in organizing these industries outside the A. F. of L., where the plodding, lethargic elder leadership had failed, amply justified their hopes. Now, after four years of separation, however, and a bitterness enhanced by two unsuccessful peace efforts, a new condition has been created, in which the original basis of craft-versus-industrial organization has largely disappeared. It becomes now largely a matter of rival personalities, of new vested interests, and of union rivalries engendered by bitter fighting.

Over the week end, Mr. Lewis in a statement to the American Youth Congress made a dramatic new peace offer. He made it out the sky so suddenly that many are inclined to think it was extemporized. He proposes that the two groups, whose leading representatives have twice failed to find a basis for agreement, should hold conventions, side by side, in the same hall at the same time and vote on a resolution calling for the return of the C. I. O. to the Federation. In case the vote was "aye," the Federation would grant charters to each C. I. O. unit, "leaving questions of detail for later consideration." Mr. Lewis promises to seek no elective office under this new dispensation. He would presumably limit himself to the powerful United Mine Workers, one of the wealthiest and most closely organized unions in the world.

"MATTERS OF DETAILS"

The difficulty with this proposal is in those "matters of detail." It is as though France and Germany were asked suddenly to form a federal union, and to vote first on joining it and only later on the matter of which side should dominate. It is as though two men should bind themselves legally to buy and sell a house, following which the "details" of the sale would be worked out. It is a curious way to go about it. The matter becomes clearer if the past history of the peace efforts are reviewed.

The first "peace" meeting began in October, 1937, with the C. I. O. represented by a Committee of 10, the A. F. of L. by a committee of three. The C. I. O. had 32 units: 7 ousted by the A. F. of L., 5 that had voluntarily withdrawn, and 20 others started by the C. I. O. or originally independent. It is about these 20 units that the difficulty exists. Many of them are direct rivals to already existent A. F. of L. units. The bitterness between some of these groups is extreme. Take the C. I. O. woodworkers. Their rival is the A. F. of L. carpenters. Suppose a strike of the latter occurs in a northwest furniture factory. The employer may fill his factory with strikebreakers, and seek for them a C. I. O. status. Time and time again "strikebreakers" have become "unionists" by charters granted in this shortsighted fashion by one side or the other. The Progressive Miners have charters from the A. F. of L., against the Lewis United Mine Workers, and similar clashes exist throughout the whole labor field.

The A. F. of L. in its peace terms proposed first to iron out the matter of the 20 unions, and when agreement had been reached to vote back all 32 unions simultaneously while changing its constitution to specify trade areas where industrial unionization would prevail. The 12 C. I. O. unions that had had previous existence would be restored automatically, and these contained 70 per cent of the body's total membership. This seemed to many like a genuine peace move.

The C. I. O. rejected the proposal and in the following years the A. F. of L. grew stronger in membership, while the C. I. O. went through more difficult times, although its strength is now established.

Last March Mr. Roosevelt made a second peace effort. A White House conference was called at which Mr. Lewis made an immediate, grandiose gesture. He proposed that both the A. F. of L. and C. I. O. dissolve, and the Railroad Brotherhoods (who are independent of either party) also disband, and "one big union" be formed under the presidency of one of the rail union executives. The rail unions shuddered at the thought. They did not want to be dragged into the A. F. or L.-C. I. O. fray. They have been independent for 50 years and propose to stay independent.

MR. LEWIS WITHDRAWS

However, as negotiations continued the A.F. of L. leaders gave ground on another point, and agreed to take back the original 12 unions in their new and enlarged status for some of them had branched out into broader fields—specifically, the United Mine Workers had taken in chemical workers and the like. Mr. Lewis left the conference and asked the A. F. of L. committee to postpone negotiations. Mr. Lewis never returned and never resumed discussions.

On Friday, Feb. 9, President Roosevelt explained that he had made new efforts for labor peace but had been advised by Mr. Lewis that the time was not opportune. This White House statement seemed to pin responsibility directly on the C. I. O. head for failure to continue the negotiations as many others had previously done. It was after this statement that Mr. Lewis made his angry reply to Mr. Roosevelt at the Youth Conference, giving his new peace proposal.

A. F. of L. leaders ridicule the proposal, and ask whether it is offered seriously. One explanation is that he believes negotiations with the present A. F. of L. leadership are hopeless, and feels that only a complete C. I. O. victory is possible, with the Federation gradually disintegrating.

Opponents see Mr. Lewis entering politics. In recent days he has certainly thrown his weight into the political scale. He has made a vehement attack on Vice-President Garner. He has declared that the Democrats would be defeated under Mr. Roosevelt's third-term aegis. And having thus pretty well covered both sides of the party with his attack, and having previously shown contempt for the Republicans, he has given sympathy and support to Senator Burton K. Wheeler (D) of Montana, as a presidential aspirant, a man whom few observers believe could unite the party or win the election.

In the crudest form, the charge against Mr. Lewis is that he seeks to split the Democrats now and elect a Republican, and then run himself in 1944. There is nothing directly to substantiate the idea, which reflects however the increasingly active part he is playing on the political scene.

He has a firm control over the United Mine workers and is able to assess political contributions against them which, in 1936, he poured into the Roosevelt war chest. Just who gets the contribution this year remains to be seen.

Italian Press Hails Rumanian Appointment

Domei Tsushin

ROME, June 2—The Fascist press today hailed the appointment of Ion Gigurtu as the new Foreign Minister of Rumania, asserting that he is a warm friend of the Rome-Berlin axis.

The change in the Foreign Affairs portfolio was interpreted here as indication that King Carol of Rumania has now realized that in view of the trend of the war Rumania's future interests would best be served by identifying itself with the axis.

FUEHRER VISITS BATTLE SITES WHERE HE FOUGHT IN 1914

German High Command Press Chief Marvels at Low Reich Losses

D.N.B.
BERLIN, June 3—The Fuehrer over the weekend visited the battlefields in Flanders and Northern France where during the Great War he fought as a lance-corporal against the British and French.

Reich Press Chief Dr. Dietrich who accompanied the Fuehrer on this tour of inspection, described the trip to German newspapermen today.

Starting from Brussels, the Fuehrer visited Ghent, Courtrai, Menin, Ypres, Langemark, Lille, Lens, Vimy, Arras and Cambrai.

When arriving at the Hermos cemetery at Langemark where the flower of the German youth found their last resting place in 1914, the Fuehrer was enthusiastically greeted by a battalion of young German infantry.

FUEHRER MOVED

Deeply moved, the Fuehrer inspected Menin, Wervik and other small villages near Ypres where he had fought in the big Flanders battle in the Great War.

"It must have been a proud feeling for our Fuehrer to stand as the Supreme Commander of the German armed forces after the biggest victory of modern times at the same places where 22 years ago as a lance-corporal he had fought with millions of German soldiers in vain for victory," Dr. Dietrich said.

On Vimy ridge, the Fuehrer visited the Canadian war memorial. Dr. Dietrich confirms that the monument is entirely untouched and not even hit by shells. Photos taken of the monument while the Fuehrer was present disclosed that the Canadian war memorial is perfectly intact. Shortly after he had left Vimy ridge, the Fuehrer heard that the Canadian Defense Minister had asserted the destruction of the Canadian war memorial by German soldiers.

LOW LOSSES PUZZLE

D.N.B.
BERLIN, June 3—"The fact that we have had such unexpectedly low losses in the May offensive in the West, is regarded by ourselves almost as an enigma," the head of the press section with the German High Command, Colonel Hesse, told foreign correspondents today. Colonel Hesse made this statement while describing his impressions and observations during his six trips through the battle area, partly accompanying the commander-in-chief of the army, General von Brauchitsch. A comprehensive account, probably containing further details on the result of this successful German offensive, will be published shortly by the German High Command, Colonel Hesse declared. Also the German armored forces which took such an active part in the fighting, he added, had suffered comparatively slight losses.

ONE EXPLANATION

"We have only one explanation for this fact," said the German officer. "Either the others shoot badly and hit badly, or their weapons are no good.

"The large majority of our infantry divisions had not yet to fight at all. We frequently just overran the others. The German thrust wrought annihilation and discouragement in the Anglo-French lines. More than once large, well-ordered groups marched up with the white flag attached to sticks and surrendered their arms."

The German superiority and the unexpectedly quick German successes, Colonel Hesse pointed out, are based on the unconditional unity of the German leadership and on the fact that the German command is always ahead and carries the troops with it. When on one of his trips making inquiries about a German General, he was told that he had to look for the German General in the advance posts, 15 kilometers ahead.

UNIFIED COMMAND

The unity of command and men, Colonel Hesse stated, also means that the armed forces are directed from one point as one organic entity. To this must be added the enormous superiority in arms and Germany's possession of certain weapons for fighting at a close range. In the past decade, Germany has developed a new art of leading the troops—"quick decisions and lightning action."

Colonel Hesse underlined in this connection the excellent cooperation between the various groups of the armed forces and the great feats of the German infantry who marched 40 to 50 kilometers per day and time and again caught up with the armored forces. "Thus, after all, it was not tanks or drive bombers or whatever it may have been but the marvelous German soldiers who brought about these successes under a command which was always in the front positions," he stressed.

"We are convinced that we are going to win the war soon, and we hope the experiences we are undergoing today shall be spared us and Europe for a very long time," the German officer concluded. "It is this will which inspires the German soldier and enables him to carry out performances which we have experienced in the past few weeks."

Mary Anderson Dies At 80 in London

Reuter
LONDON, May 30—Madame de Navarro, who as Mary Anderson was a noted actress and beauty of the Victorian era, died today at the age of 80.

She retired from the stage in 1889, but returned in 1915 to act only for the purpose of helping to raise funds for war charities.

Madame de Navarro was born in Sacramento, California. She was educated at Roman Catholic institutions till she was 13, when she studied for the stage upon the advice of Charlotte Cushman.

In 1875, at the age of 16, she played Juliet for the first time and met with great success.

Captain Alan T. Eadon, Director of Civil Aviation, has been appointed Chief Executive Officer of the Air Center, in addition to his own duties.

TIMES STRESSES IMPORTANCE OF SEA CONTROL

Despite Air Force Growth, Battleships Still More Potent, Says Journal

Reuter
LONDON, May 31—The importance of sea-power in the present war, despite the growth of air arms, is stressed in an editorial of The Times, entitled "The Sea Grip."

The article, which is reproduced in a special commentary, begins by paying tribute to the British Expeditionary Force. It states: "As one day follows another, it grows more and more certain that in the supreme struggle of the French and British Armies hemmed in against the north-eastern coast of France, the world is witnessing one of the grimmest and most glorious feats of skill and steady gallantry in all military history.

"It is not possible to follow the conflict in its heroic detail. Yet, now and again, the pall of obscurity is lit with the gleam of individual fortitude and daring."

UNDER NO ILLUSION

Continuing, the editorial declares: "It should never be forgotten that the real struggle is for domination of the sea. The very magnitude of the effort which the enemy has exerted in his drive toward Channel ports, shows that he is under no illusions about the chief obstacle to his ambition of world domination—sea-power today is even more potent than ever. Modern armies, whether on the surface of the earth or above it, cannot move or fight without supplies brought from afar.

"Nothing that has happened in the war so far supports the theory that men-of-war can be driven from the sea by direct air attacks. On the contrary, though the full force of German air-power was exerted against the British in Norway, it was unable to prevent the British Navy from carrying out, with but slight losses, every duty demanded of it; and the tale has been the same in the ports of Holland, Belgium and Picardy."

Concluding on a note of sober optimism, the article affirms: "Sea-power, with its citadel stoutly defended by the Navy itself, by super-squadrons of the Royal Air Force, by a network of well-designed and well-manned ground defenses and—not the least important—supported by firm civilian determination, will not be shaken. And so long as it is maintained, Great Britain and France must prevail in the end."

INTENSIFIED DRIVE URGED

Reuter
LONDON, May 31—A plea for an intensified arms drive is the theme of several editorials in London papers, quoted by a special commentary.

The Daily Express says: "Men of the British Expeditionary Force are carrying out a rearguard action of a kind that has never been fought before. Brave men face an overwhelming mass of metal and machinery. Yet, such is their valor that Hitler has to throw a million troops against them. Now it is for the people of Great Britain to show themselves worthy of their fighting men. They read dispatches from Flanders with pride—and with shame. Shame that our soldiers went into the battle without all the arms unceasing effort could have given them."

The Daily Herald writes: "The blow fell in Belgium, Holland and northern France almost simultaneously with Winston Churchill's accession to Premiership. A few days later, an astounding deficiency in the equipment of our tropps became manifest . . . Who is to blame for insufficient airplanes and tanks, which has crippled the operations of our Army in Flanders?"

He was 75 years of age.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT" - by Ripley

SOUTH AFRICA WOMEN SERVE AS JURY MEMBERS

Suddenly They Discover The Fact That They Can Have the Privilege There

Christian Science Monitor
PRETORIA, South Africa—Women of South Africa have suddenly discovered that they possess "a right, a privilege, and a duty" of which, for nine years, they have remained in ignorance.

They have become aware that during these nine years they could, if they would, have been serving upon juries, and they are being urged now—since South Africa is compiling a new jury list which will remain in force for the next four years—to claim their right and "do their duty."

That no women have performed jury service in South Africa has not been entirely due to their own neglect, although many of them own that neglect has entered into it. The fact is that legislative peculiarities have been against them and it is being said that, of all peculiar legislation, that which relates to women and juries is almost unique.

The story goes back to 1931. In that year, immediately after the House had been considering the Women's Enfranchisement Bill, it was discovered, greatly to the consternation of legislators, that by the new measure, women would be entitled not only to votes but—given the necessary qualifications—to jury service as well.

"CIVIL COMMOTION" FEARED

The House was at a loss what to do in so embarrassing a situation. The Minister of Justice declared that such a state of affairs would "cause the greatest dissatisfaction." The Minister of Agriculture corrected him by saying that it would indeed "mean civil commotion." Certain private Members, on the other hand, maintained that, being voters, women should be responsible, as men were responsible, for jury service, and a number of women upheld that opinion.

In the end, the Government compromised somewhat painfully. Women were to be admitted, but their way was to be made so hard that only the most determined among them, the most resourceful, were likely to qualify for service.

In a measure called the Female Jurors Act, rules were laid down. In the first place, those who applied for inclusion on the jury list must make that application in November—and, incidentally, must remember without being prompted that renewal of application would be necessary in four years' time, and also in November. Secondly, women would be allowed to serve only on a jury composed entirely of their own sex.

WAY MADE DIFFICULT

And, to add the final stumbling-block, an accused person—who must be a woman or a young person of under 18 years of age—who wished to come before a women's jury, must apply for that privilege in writing to the Sheriff or his deputy at least 14 days before the day fixed for their trial.

It was all very difficult, and in the end only 26 women applied for enrollment—of which number eight were turned down as not possessing the necessary qualifications. The remaining 18 have never been called upon to serve.

Now organized women are doing their utmost to stir public opinion to see that a real loss is being sustained by the virtual exclusion of many persons who possess both ability and leisure to offer fine service. If sufficient women are not included in the register, they point out, the chance of having a women's jury will disappear for four years. It is known that criminal cases are pending in the conduct of which the special qualifications of women would be of the utmost value and organized women are anxious to see those qualifications used.

FAR EAST CONFERENCE BOOSTS CARGO RATES TO ORIENT 50 PER CENT

N.Y. Times
The war in Scandinavia and its threatened effect on organized shipping services throughout the world were felt here recently when ship operators in the Far East Conference ordered rate increases as high as 50 per cent on general cargo items moving between Atlantic ports and the Orient.

Effective May 18, the new rates cover a wide range of items from paper to automobiles, nerly 150 commodities having been listed in the new schedule. Increases are expected in other conferences within the next few weeks, although there is a tendency in the trade to maintain stabilized rates as far as possible in the face of fluctuations abroad.

Although no official announcement was available at the associated conferences covering Atlantic trades, it was learned recently that two conferences had extended present rates through May.

These were the United Kingdom and the French groups. Meanwhile, the lines in the Rotterdam and Antwerp trade have extended current rates through the first half of next month.

SCANDINAVIAN QUESTION UP

Officials and shipping representatives of Britain, Denmark and Norway continued their discussions of the question of Scandinavian merchant tonnage recently, but in the case of Denmark the talks remained in the academic field, since it was conceded that the Allies had already seized or impounded some 50 Danish vessels in British ports, chiefly in the East.

The Danish Shipping Committee declined to reveal the nature of their discussions, but it was learned that the members are attempting to persuade British officialdom that Danish vessels engaged in neutral services should be left unmolested. The committee has declined thus far to recognize the British theory that ships of the Danish flag are no longer neutral.

Danish operators, it was said, are prepared to assure the Allies that their vessels will not go to Denmark if left alone to carry on their accustomed neutral trading.

KOSHO DEFEATS KOKO IN TWO BALL GAMES

Yokohama Commercial School Takes Games 7-4, 8-4, in 14th Annual Series

The Yokohama Higher Commercial School baseball team defeated the Yokohama Higher Technical School nine in the 14th annual series between these two institutions in two straight games. The Kosho boys avenged the defeat they suffered at the hands of their intra-city rivals last year by winning Saturday's contest by 7 to 4 and Monday's by 8 to 4. The series count is now tied with seven victories for each school.

A seven-run barrage by Kosho in the second inning of Mondays game clinched the honors for Koko was not able to overcome this big lead. In Saturday's contest the winners broke a four-all deadlock in the seventh inning with a three-run rally to decide the issue.

OPENER HOTTEST

The opening game was by far the more interesting as the outcome was in doubt until the end. Koko started in grand fashion to score three runs in the first half of the opening canto. Then Kosho also came through with three markers in their half of the initial canto to knot the count.

The Commercials took the lead in the fourth, when Komoura clouted the ball almost to the left field fence, and Tsuchiura streaked for home from first. He would have been an easy out had not the catcher dropped the ball in tagging the runner as he slid for the plate.

GAME SEE-SAWS

In their half of the sixth inning Kosho came right back to regain the lead with three runs. Nagano, first man up, started the fireworks by slashing a single past third. Then Tsuchiyama, after fouling the first two offerings, got four balls in succession from Hashimoto who was having difficulty in finding the plate. Hashimoto had replaced Ishii on the mound in the fifth. The hurler threw to second to catch Nagano off the base, and the runner was trapped between second and third. However, poor judgment by the infield resulted in Nagano reaching third safely, while Tsuchiyama stole second in the meantime. Daimon dropped a texas leaguer behind second and Nagano scored. Komura received a free ride to first on four balls, and the bases were loaded with none out.

At this stage the Koko boys called time out and their board of strategy decided, after a conference, to have Ishii take on the hurling assignment again. He started beautifully by striking out Miura with three throws. Kumai then flied out to centerfield. When Odano grounded to second it looked as if the attack had fizzled out, but the infielder fumbled and Tsuchiyama crossed the plate. When Kawashima was given a walk Daimon strolled in. Nagano grounded to third to end the inning. Both teams tightened up and no further scoring took place.

SECOND GAME DULL

Rain on Saturday night and Sunday morning resulted in the second game being postponed until the following day.

In Monday's contest the seven runs the Kosho boys scored in the second inning plus another marker obtained in the fourth which gave them an 8 to 0 lead, robbed the game of the thrills contained in the first battle as it was almost certain they had it "in the bag."

Players in the limelight in the series were three pitchers and a third basemen. Perhaps the most colorful figure was Ishii, who shouldered the hurling assignment for Koko in both games except for two innings. He has plenty of speed, and a lot on the ball, but his wildness proved costly. His outcurve was not behaving on Saturday and when he hit four batters in as many innings he became the target of the Kosho fans' ire, whose shouted epithets were decidedly not complimentary.

CAPACITY CROWDS

Herai, Kosho freshman pitcher who went the entire route in the second game, received glowing comments from the experts on his performance. Daimon, the Commercials' moundsman in the first contest, not only pitched well but made hits in both games when they meant runs. Nakano, Kosho's guardian of the hot corner, was the leading hitter; his average in the series being .500 for eight times at bat.

Both games drew near capacity crowds. Not only the baseball but the colorfulness of side attractions drew the fans. The cheering sections of both schools were out in full force. Each had about 16 cheerleaders with headbands and flags of the schools' colors.

COVERING THE WORLD

From British Sources

NAZI OFFENSIVE SEEN

PARIS, June 5—This morning's military communiqué states that a new battle has begun, the Germans having launched an attack along a 110-mile front between the sea and the Laon-Soissons Road. This is the center of the line from the Somme Estuary to the Maginot defenses.

Violent artillery bombardment was followed by dive bombers and massed infantry, but up to the present the Germans have not used tanks to any extent, it is reported. There was also a report of pressure from Amiens to the Somme.

R.A.F. RAIDS CONTINUE

LONDON, June 5—The Air Ministry made the following announcement this evening: "During Tuesday night, heavy bombers of the Royal Air Force again attacked military objectives in Germany. Oil refineries and oil fuel depots in the Ruhr and elsewhere were subjected to intensive bombing attacks. One of our aircraft is missing. One aircraft of the Coastal Command returning from an offensive reconnaissance over Scandinavia, intercepted and shot down a Dornier flying boat."

It is also officially reported that German coastal batteries between Gravelines and Dunkirk were again successfully attacked last night, while during the day British aircraft again bombed oil tanks in Holland. Many fighter sorties were made during the day and night but few German aircraft were seen. Two German fighters were brought down.

ALLIES AT SILKVIK

STOCKHOLM, June 5—A new advance of nearly 10 miles along the iron ore railway from Narvik toward Sweden, brought the Allied forces to Silkvik where the retreating Germans are in strongly entrenched positions says an 'Aftonbladet' correspondent on the Lapland border. The railway is being bombarded by naval and field artillery from positions on the heights of Narvik.

Refugees Problem

PARIS, June 5—One of the most urgent problems in France is to care for the millions of refugees streaming from the war-stricken areas. The International Red Cross Committee, appealing to Red Cross societies of all nations to help the French Red Cross, estimated today that these refugees number more than five million. Two million are from Belgium. Most of them had no time to collect their possessions or transport to carry them. They have no food or money, only the clothes in which they escaped.

BELGIAN RADIUM TAKEN

LONDON, June 5—The Minister for Economic Warfare, Dr. Hugh Dalton, announced today that all stocks of radium and cobalt in Belgium before the invasion have been taken by the Allies. Stocks of petrol and oil which were left were almost all destroyed.

CARRYING WAR TO U.S.

BERLIN, June 5—Official German circles have read with greatest interest the last speech by the British Prime Minister, Winston Churchill, because of various points contained in his statement. This particularly refers to Mr. Churchill's declaration that he was ready to fight to the last moment even if the isles would be taken and "the Government was obliged to go overseas."

"This declaration," it is declared in Berlin, "must be regarded as the first official admission of the possibility that the British Government would flee to Canada. Mr. Churchill's further declaration that he and the British Government would remain in America until the new world was ready to save the old world is looked upon as a political fact of greatest importance."

Foreign correspondents in Berlin were told by the spokesman of the Wilhelmstrasse that this statement of Mr. Churchill has no other aim in view but to carry the war also to America and to win over the United States for the war against Germany. The spokesman declined to define the German Government's attitude towards this problem. In view of such utterances, he added, which contain the demand addressed to the United States to join the war, it is not up to Germany to speak. "The United States must now speak."

ITALIANS SHOT

ROME, June 5—Seven Italian civilians were shot by the French troops in Belgium and an additional number was maltreated, according to a report by the Italian Consulate at Charleroi. The report, published by the Agenzia Stefani, declares: "A few days before the German troops occupied Vieux Campinair, 12 kilometers from Charleroi, the French troops organized a hunt for the Italian residents, mostly coal miners. A French officer heading a platoon went into the house of an Italian workman, father of a large family.

"The officer found nothing but nevertheless drew his pistol, left the house and called to his soldiers "they are spies." Thereupon the soldiers fired at the house. Later, the Italian workman, his wife and his children were lined up in the courtyard, facing the wall with arms lifted. Other Italians from Vieux Campinair were made to join these unlucky people. Afterwards, the Italians were brought before a kind of military tribunal presided over by a French lieutenant. Some of them were released but seven were shot."

The Italian report concludes with stating that this incident was no the only crime the French perpetrated in Belgium and France against Italians.

Backs King's Move

AMSTERDAM, June 5—The Archbishop of Mecheln and chief functionary of the Catholic Church in Belgium, Cardinal E. van Roey, published a letter fully sanctioning and defending the Belgian King's attitude.

The letter says that the situation of the Belgian army on May 28 was desperate, that no help was given by the Allies and that the King's decision was made in complete agreement with the Belgium general staff.

ATHENIA DAMAGE

NEW YORK, June 5—The American Athenia victims have now formally brought action for damages amounting to $1.2 million against the British shipping company Ronaldson Atlantic as the owners and against the Cunard Line as the charterers of the Athenia. According to American newspapers, over 300 victims have joined in this action. It is likely that the solicitor of the Athenia victims, the well-known lawyer Nugent, will repeat in the course of the trial the accusation made by him in public some time ago, reproaching Great Britain with negligence and lacking cooperation in clearing up the question of guilt.

GREEK PRAISES GERMANS

MADRID, June 5—The crew of the Greek steamer Yonna which was sunk by a German submarine 100 miles east of Cape Finisterre, spoke very highly about the treatment by the German seamen.

The crew which was taken to Vigo stated that the German submarine commander requested them to enter the lifeboats and take food along. They were given an exact description of the way to the Spanish coast. After the lifeboats with 62 members of the crew were at a great distance, the Yonna was sunk for carrying contraband.

ROOSEVELT HELD READY TO RUN FOR 3RD TERM

McNutt Believed Trying For Vice-Presidency On Democratic Ticket

Domei Tsushin

WASHINGTON, June 4—The United Press reports on the authority of unconfirmed but reliable information that President Roosevelt has indicated to his trusted advisers in the past few days his willingness to run for a third term with Senator James Byrnes, of South Carolina, as his running mate.

The President made a cruise on the Potomac last weekend in the company of Senator Byrnes.

TO RUN AGAIN

New Dealers, confident that President Roosevelt will run again in view of the European situation, reportedly stressed the desirability of choosing a conservative by placing a southerner as a running mate, while President Roosevelt is said to regard Senator Byrnes as the ideal man to overcome legislative problems and to clear the way for prompt action including possibly emergency legislation.

The Senator is reported to have told his friends that he was convinced President Roosevelt will accept a third term, and that he himself was willing to run with the President. He added, however, that he had nothing to say on the matters he discussed with the President on the Potomac.

Stephen Early, the President's White House Secretary, in an interview today disclaimed any knowledge of the above information.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENCY

United Press

WASHINGTON, June 1—Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator who yesterday advocated a third term for President Roosevelt, today was believed to be seeking the vice-presidential nomination on the Democratic ticket.

Mr. McNutt, who until yesterday had been seeking the Democratic presidential nomination, is believed to have abandoned this ambition because of the growing belief that Mr. Roosevelt will seek a third term.

Earlier Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Democrat of Montana, who had supported Mr. McNutt's campaign for the presidential nomination, admitted that Mr. McNutt would be "licked before he gets started" unless Mr. Roosevelt decides not to seek re-election.

WOULD NOT RUN

Two months ago Mr. McNutt's campaign managers believed Mr. Roosevelt would not run for a third term and said the Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, would be the man to defeat for the nomination.

Mr. Hull, political observers said today, remains a possible compromise candidate if Mr. Roosevelt does not seek re-election. The President's continued silence on the third term question, however, has widened the group around him who believe that he will accept the Democratic nomination if it is offered.

If John N. Garner, Vice-President, passes out of the political picture, no one would fit better in his position than Mr. McNutt, observers believed. Because of recent friction between the President and Mr. Garner, it was believed unlikely that they would be running mates again this year.

Mr. McNutt would be an asset to the Democratic Party as vice-presidential candidate because he probably could save his important home state of Indiana from voting Republican.

James Farley, Postmaster General who, also has presidential ambitions but would not oppose Mr. Roosevelt, could not be nominated for the vice-presidency because he comes from New York, the same state as the President. An effort would be made to nominate a western or southern vice-presidential candidate, it was believed.

The President, it is believed, would prefer a liberal running mate such as the Attorney General, Robert Jackson, but Mr. Jackson also is a New Yorker.

Mr. McNutt's nominal withdrawal from the presidential race yesterday now leaves only Mr. Garner and Mr. Farley as avowed candidates.

Japanese Researcher Finds Product Better Than Nylon

After Dupont Company's nylon products appeared on the market and created a sensation in the fibre industry, another synthetic product, superior in various respects, has been discovered by Dr. Ryohei Oda of the Industrial Chemistry Research Department of Kyoto Imperial University and his assistant.

This fibre was made possible by substituting bisulphide of carbon for adipic acid and is necessary in the manufacturing of rayon. By using sulphide carbon, which is plentiful in Japan, a marked improvement has been made in its coloring, manufacturing process and texture. It also was discovered that by compounding this fibre with nylon the defects of the latter may be completely eliminated.

FLANDERS VICTORY CELEBRATED BY REICH

To Display Flags 8 Days In Honor of Reich Soldiers

Domei Tsushin

BERLIN, June 5—The victory of Flanders was celebrated here last night a few minutes before midnight. The first news of the announcement was made over the radio at 10 p.m. informing the German people that a significant report should be expected in an hour or so.

From then on only military music was played, including the new "France Song." Finally after a flourish of trumpets to the tune of the "Watch on the Rhine," the report of the high command was broadcast to the people assembled in the streets, in restaurants, in coffee-houses and in their homes.

The radio program then changed to a festive hour beginning with the singing of the soldiers hymn of praise, "We Assemble to Prayer."

The Feuhrer's Field Headquaters in an announcement today ordered the German people to display flags for eight days in honor of the German soldiers. The announcement said: "German people! The biggest battle of all times has been victoriously concluded by our soldiers. Within a few weeks, more than 1,200,000 Allies have fallen into our hands. The Netherlands and Belgium have capitulated. The bulk of the British Expeditionary Force has been annihilated, and the rest has been taken prisoner or chased from the continent. Three French armies have ceased to exist. The danger of the enemy invading the Ruhr district has thus been definitely removed.

"German people! This glorious victory has been achieved with loss of blood; your soldiers have staked their lives and health amidst unparalleled strain. I therefore order that from today flags be displayed for eight days in the whole of Germany. This is to honor our soldiers.

"I also order the pealing of all church bells for three days. Their pealing may introduce the prayers with which from now on the German people shall once more accompany its sons. Because today, German divisions and air squadrons were again put into action to continue the fight for the freedom and future of our people."

COVERING THE WORLD

From German Sources

WINDSOR RESIGNS

BERNE, June 6—Reports that the Duke of Windor had resigned his post as liaison officer between the French and British armies are confirmed in Paris. It is stated that the former King of England has withdrawn to his residence at the French Riviera.

Strictest silence is observed in Paris on circumstances surrounding this step. It has become known, however, that the duties of the Duke who held the rank of Brigadier-General has been taken over by Brigadier-General Edward Spears.

SAW ABANDONED TANKS

STOCKHOLM, June 6—The Berlin correspondent of the Aftonbladet who spent four days at the Western Front reports that near Cassel he saw masses of destroyed British and French tanks and motortrucks. Uniforms and equipment were strewn all over the fields.

The Germans in Bergues seized enormous quantities of war material. The correspondent states that one German detachment alone captured mountains of arms, foodstuffs, chocolate and two million cigarets.

The Swedish correspondent emphasizes the excellent discipline of the German soldiers who on the battlefield are as calm as on the parade ground in their home garrisons.

FOOD TAKEN, SAYS PAPER

AMSTERDAM, June 6—The Amsterdam paper Tijd gives a graphic account of the excesses committed by the French and British troops in Flanders. Not only food was taken away but houses were robbed of everything that could be taken along. The food seized from the civilians was often destroyed while the population suffered hunger.

The Allied troops took jewels and furnishings with them. The British and French troops, says the Dutch paper, spread dreadful terror. Many families returning to their houses after days of absence found their houses plundered.

Plays Up New Drive

BERLIN, June 6—"On a broad from against the French Army," is the headline the Voelkischer Beobachter gives to a report on the new offensive in France. "In the next few days," says the paper, "every Frenchman will know what has been hidden to him and of what on the other hand every German was conscious after having read the account of the German high command about the Flanders battle. This battle was not an ordinary victory but the preliminary decision of the war in the West."

BRITISH COMMENT

STOCKHOLM, June 6—Press reports from London state that in connection with the German thrust against the French positions on the Somme and Aisne, British political circles take the view that the fate of France may possibly be decided within the next few weeks.

The Times in an editorial writes that at the moment when the new German offensive begins the Allies had just suffered a serious defeat. The battle in Flanders, according to the paper, could not be compared with Gallipoli or with the battle of the Marne. The paper attributes a large share of responsibility for the defeat to the French high command and says that history will judge which had more disastrous effects, England's neglect to dispatch in time a strong expeditionary army to France, or the antiquated French tactics and military theories.

REASONS GIVEN

MOSCOW, June 6—Three factors were decisive for the German victory in Flanders in the opinion of the Krasnaja Svesda, organ of the Soviet Russian army:

(1) The speed of the military movements;

(2) Irresistibility of the German attacks;

(3) Novel and astonishing plans of attacking operations.

From British Sources

BATTLE RESUMED

PARIS, June 6—This morning's military communique stated: "The battle was resumed at dawn on the whole line from the sea to the river Aisne. Enemy pressure was particularly marked to the south of the lower Somme where slight withdrawal of our advanced elements took place. On the whole, we maintained our positions on the rest of the front attacked".

GERMAN LINES BOMBED

LONDON, June 6—The Air Ministry announced today: "During yesterday, medium bombers carried out a series of attacks over the German lines of communication to the rear of the battlefield. Our fighters, operating from France, maintained offensive patrols throughout the day. Reports so far received show that six enemy aircraft were destroyed. One of our fighters was shot down.

Army cooperation aircraft of the Royal Air Force carried out a number of successful reconnaissances during the day. Throughout the night, medium and heavy bombers of the Royal Air Force attacked enemy troop concentrations and barassed the enemy's moyements behind the fighting front. Other formations of heavy bombers struck at junctions and marshalling yards to the west of the Ruhr, while others attacked military objectives in Germany. Two of our aircraft are missing. Aircraft of the Coastal Command made further raids on oil fuel depots in Belgium."

NO DAMAGE SEEN

ROUEN, June 6—German aircraft appeared over the city today and a few bombs were dropped. Little damage was done. Seven German planes were shot down in the region.

LOSSES CONCEALED

LONDON, June 6—It is pointed out here that the practice of concealing their casualties, which has been constantly followed during the past year, is recalled by the official German announcement to the effect that the German losses during the invasion of the Low Countries and northern France are 64,238. The British estimate the German losses in the campaign to total between 400,000 and 500,000.

FRENCH CABINET

PARIS, June 6—The most important change, as the result of yesterday's Cabinet reshuffle, is that Paul Reynaud takes over the Foreign Ministry as well as the Ministry for National Defense, it is pointed out here. Mr. Daladier has no place in the new Cabinet.

In a broadcast speech tonight Mr. Reynaud reviewed the whole development of the war for the past fortnight, stating that he could now give "reasons for hope—not words but facts."

TO CHECK PROFITS

LONDON, June 6—The determination of Parliament to prevent accumulation of profits from the war was shown when the House of Commons yesterday adopted the 100 per cent Excess Profits Tax. Sir Kingsley Wood, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, in introducing the measure, announced a new clause which will tighten its application. Revenue Commissioners have power to disallow any item of expenditure which cannot be justified as reasonable and necessary.

2,000 TANKS USED

PARIS, June 6—Military quarters here state tonight that the Germans flung over 2,000 tanks into the battle today, several hundreds of which have been destroyed. The tanks failed to penetrate the French defenses, which are disposed in great depth. Infiltration of six or seven miles occurred on the lower Somme and at Ailette canal, but nearly all the French supports have held firm.

EGYPT REAFFIRMS BRITISH FRIENDSHIP

Italian Residents Leaving; Ambassador Meets Premier

Domei Tsushin

CAIRO, June 3—Whole hearted support of the Allies was voiced by the Government today amid general uneasiness as hundreds of Italian residents hastily started evacuating the country for Italy.

Egypt's traditional friendship for Great Britain was reaffirmed by Premier Ali Maher Pasha after the full Cabinet had met to discuss the possible involvement of Egypt if Italy participates in the war as an ally of Germany.

"Cooperation between Egypt and Great Britain is closer then ever," the Premier declared, adding, "Egypt will stand by Great Britain in accordance with the spirit of the Anglo-Egyptian treaty of August 26, 1936."

The Premier also asserted the Government's firm determination to crush all rumor mongering in the country. A new law which will be made effective immediately will impose an imprisonment sentence for talk harmful to the state, he declared.

Amidst the tension prevailing throughout the country, large numbers of Italian residents packed their belongings and started leaving. Many, including school children, embarked for Italy today aboard an Italian steamer which had arrived from East Africa.

The British Ambssador, Sir Miles Lampson, meanwhile called on Premier Ali Pasha after the Cabinet meeting and presumably discussed further defense precautions to be adopted against possible Italian moves against Egypt.

Senate Committee Approves $1,055,000,000 Relief Bill

Domei Tsushin

WASHINGTON, June 4—The Senate appropriations subcommittee, paring off $56,000,000 from the relief bill passed by the House last month, today approved the appropriation of $1,055,000,000 for the Works Project Administration.

The subcommittee also attached a provision to the relief bill providing for the training of 1,000 Civilian Conservaton Corps youths in noncombatant national defense activities.

MAGINOT PARALYZED FRENCH MOVES, SAYS BERLIN PAPER

Soldiers Likely to Lose Initiative And Depend Too Much on Fortress

Transocean

BERLIN, May 24—"When it completed the Maginot Line, France, to a certain extent, paralyzed its future operations," the military correspondent of the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung wrote this morning.

Further, he said, "the owners of a fortress can easily be forced into a dependence upon them. They are likely to lose their initiative without regard to the value those fortresses may have.

"Gradually a definite scheme was developed to include the Maginot Line in the operations plan. The "armee de la couverture" idea sprang into being. This dictated lying in readiness behind the fortifications. The covering army included the troops actually in the fortifications, numerically strong units for maneuvering, and a strong group of very mobile reserves. These, according to General Weygand, must be mechanized, motorized, and on horseback. They were to be always ready to fight down a dangerous situation in the defense lines. Active divisions should always be kept in the country on a war-footing and, finally, a mass of troops was to be prepared to execute the maneuvers.

PRINCIPAL AIMS

"Cover and mobility were regarded as the principal aims of France's military organization. A former Chief of the French General Staff, General Defency, once discussed the problem of a covering army. He said its principal task was to arrest an advance of the enemy while it was still on the frontier. He then made it very clear that, in his opinion, defensive operations alone would soon lead to defeat.

"Another noted French military writer, Rene la Bruyere, once calculated that, under the protection of the Maginot Line, France could await the arrival of British reserve troops from the dominions and Africa. He estimated these to be more than 1,000,000 men.

"General Mordacq shared the views of General Petain. He said there was only one solution: the covering must be such that it could at any time beat back an "attaque brusquee." As soon as the cover was pressed inwards, General Mordacq continued, France's whole system of national defense would collapse before it even came into action.

NO ATTACK PLAN

"The 75 year old General Duval, who has often been mentioned in German newspapers, has voiced the view that every war plan contained within itself both offensive and defensive tactics. But there is no possibility of carrying through a successful attack from Lorraine, for instance, this general maintained. The French fortifications were opposed by those on the German side so that they both neutralized each other. France would as little be able to break through the German fortifications as Germany would the French. And similar conditions prevailed along the Alpine front.

"So long as the diplomatic situation remains as it is, this general said, France has no other military possibility but to be on the defensive. Not only must French soil, but also the French Empire be defended.

"This throws a vivid light on the British alliance, which France had little hope of escaping without courting a worse fate. But Great Britain also needed this alliance. Should France disappear as a great world power, then Britain would also be reduced to the status of a second rate power. Britain would not possess the power to resist Germany which would then seek to raise up in Europe Napoleon's original conception of a United States of Europe.

"The ditch of the Pas de Calais would no more protect England now than it did in the time of Julius Caesar or William the Conqueror.

SALVATION IN MAGINOT

"These views of French military writers show that France, relying on its own strength, hoped to find salvation in its defensive line. These views prevailed at the beginning of 1939. But then the situation changed completely. As we know today, at the suggestion of Britain, who hoped to wage an offensive war against Germany with the French Army as a ram for a wide attack into Germany—the heart of the Ruhr region—through Belgium. British participation in this offensive was to be small. But on the other hand, the British expected the Belgian Army to participate. In spite of the declaration made by the King of the Belgians in October, 1938, Belgium's army was considered an asset in all Britain's calculations.

"Under coercion and in obedience to Britain's demands, France was compelled to change its defensive plans and to adopt an offensive scheme. In the beginning of May of this year, preparations had been so far completed that only the order to advance was awaited.

"The British and French, however, made an important mistake when they believed that the Maginot Line was invincible. Their plan was thus deprived of the most important cornerstone in its foundation. The fortresses on France's eastern and northeastern frontier, supplemented by the fortifications on Belgium's eastern border were to act as a protecting shield while the offensive in the north, across Belgian territory, was to penetrate into Germany.

"It was the break through of the German armies in the northern section of the Maginot Line, for the length of 100 kilometers, that smashed these plans. In view of the admission mentioned at the beginning of this article, this achievement must be regarded as the beginning of the Allies' defeat," this military writer concluded.

Police Catch 52 Taxicab Drivers With Bad Meters

An investigation of taxicab meters by the Metropolitan Police Board from May 31 to June 4, disclosed that of the total 4,000 cabs inspected 52 were found to have "phony" meters.

Thirty-three had meters which had not been re-examined after the term of validity had expired for more than a year, and eight had meters which had not passed official approval, while 11 drivers were guilty of tampering with sealed meters.

From these dishonest methods approximately 20 per cent of excess fare was charged to each customer. Police authorities have compelled each offender to install a new meter.

In the American League, the Cleveland Indians and Washington Senators split a twin-bill, the Tribe winning the opener as Bob Feller pitched his 10th victory of the year and the Nats returning to cop the nightcap by a convincing margin, 7-2, bunching 15 hits off four Indian pitchers.

In the only other game, the Chicago White Sox, with Ed Smith holding the New York Yankees to seven scattered hits, trimmed the champions, 7-3.

GAINS SEEN

NEW YORK, June 2—Some substantial gains were registered in both the American and National Leagues today as a program of seven double headers and a single game was played off.

Biggest gains were recorded by the New York Yankees, who inflicted two setbacks on the St. Louis Browns, and the Brooklyn Dodgers, who swept both ends from the Chicago Cubs.

The Yanks are now firmly ensconced in fourth place, an immediate threat to the three leaders.

Bucky Walters achieved his ninth consecutive victory in pitching the Reds to an 11-1 triumph over the Bees in the opener of a twin bill. He held the Bees hitless until the sixth. Rizzo set the batting pace for the winners with two home runs.

Wasdell, an ex-Senator, drove in all runs for the Brooklyn Dodgers as the Flatbush Fusiliers nosed out the Cubs in the opener of a twin bill 3-2. It gave Hamlin his first victory in five starts.

Rookie Dobb Elliott's double enabled the Pittsburgh Pirates to take the first game of a twin bill from the New York Giants, as Pitcher Bowman of the Cardinals registered his first triumph of the season by beating the New York Giants in the second game of a twin bill. He was helped by two homers by Johnny Mize and one by Terry Moore.

Hank Greenberg clouted a home run for the Detroit Tigers as the Bengals clawed the Washington Senators into submission, 8-6, while Blazin' Bob Feller scored his eighth victory of the year as the Cleveland Indians conquered the Philadelphia Athletics, 7-2.

In the nightcaps, play was of a considerably closer standard than was the case in the openers.

The Chicago White Sox permitted the Cleveland Indians to gain a full game by splitting honors with the Boston Red Sox. Ted Lyons nuckle-balled the Chisox to victory in the opener, 6-0, while Beantown took the nightcap by a convincing 10-7 margin.

The New York Yankees swept both ends of a double header from the St. Louis Browns, 14-4 and 11-1, revealing a world of power at the plate and serving notice on the league that they have regained their famous stride.

The Yanks have now won 11 of their last 13 starts, and appear well on the way since Joe DiMaggio, George Selkirk and Jake Powell returned to the lineup.

Japanese Railroad Exhibition Opens At Magdeburg

Transocean

BERLIN, May 26—An exhibition by the Japanese Ministry of Railroads was opened in Magdeburg yesterday. Saburo Kurusu, Japanese Ambassador to Berlin, spoke at the opening ceremony. He said that the purpose of the exhibition was to demonstrate to Europe the ability of the present-day Japanese industry and arts, and thereby to destroy the notions which did not correspond to reality.

The exhibition includes Japanese goods from children's toys to canned goods and, in the art section, demonstrates how modern Japanese handicrafts have adapted themselves to the historic past, although Japan is a modern industrial country.

Dies Declares Congress Has Power to Dissolve Communist Nazi Groups

United Press

WASHINGTON, June 3—The Communist Party and the Nazi German-American Bund faced the threat of dissolution by the Government today after the Communist Party Convention in New York adopted an election program opposing President Roosevelt's national defense program.

In Washington, Martin Dies, chairman of the Congressional Committee Investigating Un-American Activities in the United States, declared that Congress has the power to dissolve both the Communist Party and the Nazi German-American Bund in the United States.

BILL INTRODUCED

Mr. Dies, who already has introduced in Congress a bill which would outlaw both the Communist and Nazi Organizations, said his plan resembles action taken against these groups in Canada and France.

Mr. Dies said the Government has the power to dissolve holdings companies which are resembled by the organization of the Communist Party and the German-American Bund in the United States.

Meanwhile, on the eve of the nomination of Earl Browder as Communist presidential candidate, the Communist Party Convention in New York yesterday approved a campaign budget of $250,000. Each member of the Communist Party is expected to donate at least one day's wages toward the campaign fund.

2,000 DELEGATES PRESENT

The Communist convention, at which 2,000 delegates were present, also drafted an election platform calling for support of Soviet Russia's "peace policy" and opposing President Roosevelt's national defense program.

Contributions to the election campaign fund are to begin on June 15 and each member of the Communist Party will be regularly called upon to contribute the equivalent of one day's wages.

As Mr. Browder's running mate, as vice-presidential candidate, the Communist Party is expected to nominate a negro, James Ford.

THE CHOICE OF THE MULTITUDE

NEW RETRENCHMENT POLICY ADOPTED BY MANCHOUKUO

Tightened Money Market Condition In Japan One of Basic Causes

By SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

HSINKING, June 9—Every possible economy and retrenchment and emphasis upon vitally essential projects are the guiding principles of the new policies for coordinated readjustment and rationalization of corporative financing schemes and of budget execution finally decided upon by the Government of Manchoukuo at its session of the State Council this week to cope with the adverse effects of the worldwide wartime economy.

The tightened condition of the money market, especially in Japan which provides this country with the greater bulk of its funds required for new enterprises, the necessity for conforming expenditure with the actual state of goods mobilization and of foreign exchange allocation are the basic causes for the adoption of this new retrenchment policy.

TO STRENGTHEN CONTROL

Under this policy the control of fund raising by both special corporations and private firms and of projects for new enterprises will be drastically strengthened by taking into consideration the goods mobilization and foreign exchange programs. All new projects will be restricted to urgently necessary undertakings, and the extension of loans for relatively non-essential projects will be further curbed.

By such measures the Government hopes to keep down the present currency expansion tendency, prevent any undue rise of commodity prices, improve the balance of international receipts and payments and rationalize State and corporate spending with the one object of getting maximum results with the funds and goods available.

In a statement issued on June 3 explaining the aims of the new policy, the Government announced that its working budget would be regulated on a rational basis with economy as the watch word.

The same principle would also be applied to the general enterprise financing schemes of the semi-official corporations and private concerns, which will be prevailed upon to thoroughly observe the policy of concentrating their efforts upon essential undertakings by practising retrenchment and economy in any projects of relatively unurgent and unnecessary nature. The government control of funds in agriculture, mining, and manufacturing industries, and in commerce would be further reinforced, and international payments and receipts rationally readjusted.

SECURITY ASSURED

"Such measures are designed to add to the security of the Japan-Manchoukuo economy, while achieving the predominant aims of the constructive development of the country and stabilizing the economic life of the people", the announcement states.

Specifically, the following concrete measures will be adopted with corporate expenditure:

1. In conformity with the strengthening of the principle of laying stress upon vital enterprises, the enterprise funds and ordinary expenditures of the special corporations and private companies will be curtailed.

2. The fund raising schemes will be subjected to a general, sweeping readjustment by taking into consideration not only the commodity mobilization and foreign exchange plans, but also the condition of the Japanese debenture market and the internal financial situation.

3. Any enterprises or parts thereof, to which the allotment of mobilized goods or foreign exchange has been deferred, will have their funds curtailed, regardless of whether such funds are unrelated to goods mobilization or foreign exchange, or whether such enterprises possess necessary materials.

PLANS TO BE REVISED

4. All fund raising plans will be revised in the form of budgets, and any projects for the establishment of new companies or for increase of capital will be permitted within the limits of the financial requirments for the next one year.

5. The extension of loans by banks for unurgent and non-essential projects will be restricted.

As regards financial transactions with Japan, the Government intends to rationalize advance payments for the purchase of goods ordered from Japan, and to collect payments for exports as quickly as possible. Japanese capitalists interested in participating in Manchoukuo industry will be encouraged to invest in kind as much as possible, while Manchurian firms receiving funds from Japan will be made to concentrate such funds in the Central Bank of Manchou.

In the execution of the State budget, a careful reexamination will be made with a view to curtailing as much as possible wasteful and relatively unnecessary expenditures. It is interesting to note that the policy hitherto followed by the Government of paying in cash will be replaced by bond payments as much as possible, with the twofold object of keeping the amount of government dispersed funds to a minimum, and of recovering idle funds. This is deemed especially in view of the soaring tendency of both commodity prices and currency.

The civil service which has expanded tremendously along with the growth of the State is also due for a reform. While adopting further measures designed to increase the efficiency of the service, the Government is contemplating reducing the clerical staff, and of limiting the number of new public servants to be enployed to the minimum necessary for the conduct of State affairs.

WITHOUT ISSUING BONDS

Another important feature of the budget policy is the extension of the principle of financing governmental expenditures without the issuance of bonds also to the special accounts. Hitherto this principle of non-bond issue was followed only in the case of general accounts, and the flotation of new bonds was conducted with comparative freedom in the case of those expenditures for new enterprises in the special accounts. This practice will henceforth be subject to great modification.

Considered from the standpoin of war-time economy as a whole, the present decision of the Government to strengthen its control over funds should help to rectify the somewhat lop-sided controlled economy of this country resulting, from the undue stress placed upon goods control to the neglect of fund control. With equal attention paid to both, the managed economy of Manchoukuo should function with better results.

U.S. NEWSMAN SEES PRISONERS ON FRONT TOUR

Germans Estimate 400,000 British and French Captured in Flanders

By RICHARD HOTTELET

United Press

WITH GERMAN ARMY ON WESTERN FRONT, June 5—Following on the heels of the advancing German forces, I saw the shattered and captured remnants of the Allied northern field armies yesterday.

With a group of war correspondents, I drove three hundred miles through northern France over roads which in some places were lined with burned and wrecked French mechanized vehicles.

I saw the inner organization of the German Army which gives the impression of being about as close to invincible as a human army has ever been.

SEES ALL OF BELGIUM

Our tour of the front yesterday took us through all of Belgium and all the main battlefields of France except Sedan.

We drove along roads which were intact with the exception of a few points where the French had blown the roads up. Along some stretches of road, at intervals of several hundred yards, lay parts of camouflaged tanks, caterpillar munitions trucks, troop transports, pieces of artillery and staff cars.

At one point we saw an entire car lying in a ditch as if it had been knocked there by the swing of a giant's hand. Its wheels and doors were torn off.

Over these roads German Army trucks were carrying reinforcements to the front while from the front came an unending stream of khaki-clad Allied prisoners.

400,000 PRISONERS TAKEN

The Germans estimate that exclusive of the Dutch and Belgians, they have taken 400,000 British and French prisoners.

At one point we saw a camp of 12,000 British and French prisoners of war. On an open field on the bank of the Somme River, these men lay sprawled out and exhausted. Many were asleep but some stood in small groups and talked. Some were waiting in lines for their food.

These Allied prisoners were young and old — including 19-year-old Scotchmen and Canadians, burly British sailors, and grizzled Moroccan veterans.

Unshaven, dirty, hungry and tired, they seemed to be dejected. When some of the English prisoners learned I was an American, however, they sprang up and crowded around me. They animatedly asked me for the latest news from the front.

While with their first words they asked for news from the front, in their second breath they asked when I thought they would get a real bath.

The Germans told me the English were the cleanest prisoners in the camp. They showed me a long line of prisoners standing on the banks of the Somme River clad only in shirts, washing their trousers and tunics, their "battle dress" and their socks and undershirts. Most of them, who were captured on the foremost lines and had just arrived at camp, had 10-day beards, their faces were streaked with dust and their lips cracked and blistered.

This prison camp was merely a transit camp where Allied prisoners were kept for several days before being sent to prison camps in Germany.

One young German sergeant told me that his troops had developed great respect for the British prisoners.

I personally saw and spoke with a number of British prisoners. They included a 19-year-old boy from Edinburgh, a 20-year-old boy from Lancashire, a former London bus driver, and a former Canadian farm hand. From not one of them did I hear a word of despair.

NO EPIDEMIC DANGER

The Germans have enforced rigid hygenic rules and there is no danger of an epidemic starting in the prison camps. The greatest problem of the Germans is feeding the famished men. When they arrived at the camp most of these men had not eaten in days. Thirteen German Army field kitchens scattered over the field are kept going full speed day and night.

The men were guarded by a few German soldiers with two machine guns mounted on a small knoll in the center of the camp. No barbed wire encircled the camp.

"These people are too tired to try to escape," a German sergeant told me. "Anyway, where would they escape to?"

Not one of the men I spoke to had any complaint to make about the treatment received from the Germans.

One Cameron Highlander told me in a thick Scotch accent, "We were well equipped and motorized, but not nearly to the same extent as the Germans. We were simply crushed. We were subjected to an almost unbearable pounding by tanks and then, quite suddenly, before we realized what had happened, German tank columns were firing behind us and on each side and we had no other choice but to surrender."

I asked one man if he would go on fighting now if he could rejoin his formation, or if he was sick of war.

"Yes sir," he replied, "I would go on fighting. We have not lost the war yet. This is the same position we were in 1915. We will come out on top this time the same as we did in the past."

One young German non-commissioned officer, who was attached to the guard detail, summed up the opinions of the British prisoners.

"They are captured, but not beaten men," he said. "You have to admire the way they took it."

Townsend Reintroduces Silver Measure

Reuter

WASHINGTON, May 31—In an amended form, Senator John Townsend today reintroduced into the Senate his well-known Silver Bill.

He has deleted the tax provision, which was the basis for the return to the Senate of the original measure, when the House of Representatives protected its constitutional right to originate all tax legislation.

Recently, House leaders, by 45 to 36 votes, agreed to return to the Senate the bill, which would terminate the authority for foreign silver purchases under the Silver Purchase Act of 1934 and the fifty per cent tax on transfers of silver.

The measure would, however, not prevent limited purchase under the previous authority or by means of the Stabilization Fund.

Full Scale U.S. Rearmament Urged

United Press

CHICAGO, May 31—Raymond Kelly, National Commander of the American Legion, in a Memorial Day speech yesterday, urged the adoption of a full scale rearmament program by the United States for the purpose of protecting the Western Hemisphere.

He pleaded, however, against taking action "until we are absolutely certain that any war in which we may become involved must be to our own interest. It is equally important to the American people, when making their decision for peace or war, to adopt a realistic attitude toward what, if any, assistance they might render those other nations with whose cause they are indubitably sympathetic," he asserted.

Younger Daughter of Juliana Baptised at Buckingham Palace

Reuter

LONDON, June 1—Irene, younger daughter of Princess Juliana and Prince Bernhard, was baptised in the private chapel of Buckingham Palace yesterday.

Queen Elizabeth acted as witness, and was one of the godparents along with representatives of the Dutch Navy and the Dutch and Netherlands Indies armies.

King George and Queen Wilhelmina were present at the ceremony.

QUEZON WON'T RUN FOR REELECTION

P. I. Chief Asked to Drop Journey to South America

United Press

MANILA, June 5—President Manuel Quezon yesterday reiterated his determination not to run for reelection to the presidency, but said it would be treason to refuse to serve if the nation demanded it through a popular election.

In a speech a an open forum under the auspices of the Civil Liberties Union yesterday, President Quezon pleaded for the passage of a constitutional amendment creating a Senate.

"There will be a revolution within 15 years" unless a bicameral legislature is established, he said. A bicameral legislature would be "the best guarantee against dictatorship," he asserted.

ASKED TO ABANDON PLANS

United Press

WASHINGTON, June 5—The Republican Representative of Nebraska, Karl Stefan, in a statement to the United Press yesterday, urged the President of the Philippines, Sr. Manuel Quezon, to publicly abandon plans to tour South America in view of the world crisis.

The present world situation "demands that Sr. Quezon remain in the Philippines to guide and counsel the Filipino people during a period when the entire world is in flames and the Philippines might become involved," Mr. Stefan said.

He did not say whether the crisis would also require Sr. Quezon to remain as President, but insular sources here understood there was a growing movement within the Philippines to retain Sr. Quezon in the presidency if war conditions continue.

"Our own Secretary of State, Mr. Cordell Hull, has announced our interest in the preservation of the status quo in the Dutch East Indies," Mr. Stefan said. "That injects us squarely into the Far Eastern situation and makes our position in the Philippines tremendously complicated with questions of world policy.

"President Quezon is plainly obligated to remain in the Philippines and cooperate with the United States in seeing the crisis through. He can be of great assistance in keeping the Filipinos calm, giving them personal leadership and maintaining popular support for our policy in the Far East with its attendant dangers to Philippine security."

Portuguese Leaders Knighted By King George in London

Reuter

LONDON, June 1—In connection with the 800th anniversary of Portuguese independence, celebrations of which open today, King George has conferred knighthoods upon Dr. Salazar, Portuguese Premier, and other representatives of Portugal and her overseas possessions.

The King's action is regarded as a special indication of the friendly British interest on an occasion of such great significance to Britain's ancient ally.

Chinese Paper Sarcastic Over Italian Sabre-Rattling

Reuter

CHUNGKING, June 1—Commenting on the almost daily reports of the alleged imminence of the Italian entry into the European war, the newspaper Sin Mi Pao today states: "Italy's attitude reminds one of the popular Chinese saying about a Soochow man in a quarrel. 'There is a lot of yelling and gesturing, but he will not fight; the more one thinks the more one realizes the consequences and the less one is inclined to fight.'"

THE CHOICE OF THE MULTITUDE

THE WORLD'S LARGEST CITY HAS A LANGUAGE OF ITS OWN

'It May Be English But Spare Our Ears,' Moans New York City Magistrate Curran

Editor's note: The following article has nothing to do with statesmanship, politics or war. It merely is a bit of light chit-chat by Chief Magistrate Henry H. Curran of New York City. Magistrate Curran, who philosophizes on various subjects from time to time, has some pertinent things to say about his city's language. For Japanese who so eagerly try to learn American slang it may prove enlightening. For Americans it will be amusing. For nationals in Tokyo of various embattled Powers, there will be no possible chance of taking offense. We dare you to write an indignant letter to the editor over this article, which appeared in the New York Times.

By HENRY H. CURRAN

Have we in New York a language all our own, different in accent and choice of words from that used in the rest of the United States and—not so good? I don't wholly think so, but there are those who do.

They are right enough about the presence of different languages in different parts of the United States. The countryman's talk is unlike that of the city man wherever you go. It is slower, more drawling, more nasal, stouter and more studied in its slang and parables. The city man's words tumble out faster. His slang is the fancy of a moment, the fashion of a night.

Regionally there are differences just as sharp. When your tennis opponent says "yoh ad" for "your vantage," you know he is from Dixie. When your visitor tells about his "gaddin" by the "habbuh," you know his garden is by Boston Harbor. When your cousin calls excitedly as he peers over the top of the Empire State Building, "Look over here and look over there!" with every "r" rolling and rumbling like heavy artillery, you know he lives somewhere in the valley of the Father of Waters.

MARKS FOR NEW YORK

There are marks for New York, too. When my buddy says he "woyks" Sundays, so he can't go to "choych," then I know he was born and brought up in Little Old New York. There is nothing like that anywhere else in the world. It must have come from chowder parties or elevated railroads or July humidity or shad or some such oddity that was peculiar to New Yorkers as distinguished from the smaller and wiser cities.

As a matter of common consent, the best English in the world is spoken in Dublin. Even the distractions of Broadway and the Bowery cannot wholly ruin it. It was a New York cop, old-fashioned, Irish and serious, who taught me that.

O'Shea, who was doing the testifying in Traffic Court that day, had come through an "altercation" with a cab driver, and the resulting "abrasions and contusions" could be seen on the driver's face as he listened. The old cop never talks of quarrels, scratches and bruises. Those inadequate words may do in parlors and subways, but not in the wild sidewalk life of altercations, abrasions and contusions.

FEMALES USELESS

"Were there passengers in the cab?" I asked.

"Yes, Your Honor. There were two females."

"Did you question the females?"

"No, Your Honor. There is little use questioning females."

In O'Shea's life there is never a male, never a woman or lady or girl, never a colleen or spinster or relict. There are men. There are occasional females, but naturally as few of those unaccountables as possible. O'shea is wise.

"Did you say the cab driver used 'loud and boisterous language' and called you 'vile and indecent names'?" I asked, reading the complaint.

"I did."

"What did he call you?"

"He called me out of my name."

"But what did he say?"

"He called me out of my name."

O'SHEA ADAMANT

Nothing could persuade O'Shea in his old-fashioned Irish modesty to specify what was said. In the emerald hills over the sea it is indecent to specify, if you are "called out of your name." There is a friendly mist there that cloaks the ultimate in sadness that such things can be.

When the case was over and the cab driver had been convicted and paid his fine, I asked O'Shea why he never gave a ticket to a female.

"It's what they say, Judge. You can't reason with a female. I get enough of it at home without looking for more on the road. And if you're tough they cry, and, Judge, when they cry it's terrible."

"Yes, it is," I agreed.

"For instance, Judge"—O'Shea took up a story-telling attitude—"once there was an officer apprehended a Park Avenue matron for speeding, and he waved her to pull over to the curb. When he walked up to her he says, very severe, 'Where's the fire?' and the matron gives him a regular love look and says, 'In your beautiful, big blue eyes, officer!'—and what could the officer do?" O'Shea was wincing with reflected chivalry.

HE SPEAKS ENGLISH

Now, O'Shea's English is not perfect, and he would be the last to say that it is. There is a little New York in it and a little "cop" in it. But he tells his story crisply, clearly and in order. He pronounces every consonant. He leaves out slang unless it is settled and definite. He never says "oh, yeah." He speaks English.

The new cop does it even better. I put him pretty near the top—which may surprise you—but I have heard thousands of them testify and I know. Specifically, their English is better than that of the youth of today, and a good deal better than that of most of the big and little bankers, industrialists and lawyers of today.

Approaching reverently now the "big business men" and their retinues of fee retrievers, there was a great deal of selling going on in the thoughtless Twenties. The shrine of big business and the favored of its appanage was to "sell" somebody, which was short and smart for selling something to somebody. You might wake up in the morning and find yourself suddenly "sold on the proposition." Or the sellers would "sell the idea" and then "sell the country" on it. On the side they "sold" the church. The parsons were described variously as "selling Christianity" or "selling you on Christianity." In any event, there was selling, and that, in any form, was the summum bonum.

FORMULA EXACT

The exact formula required, first, contacting (ugh!) the prospect, which was you; then following faithfully the rule for shaking hands with a prospect, which meant taking your right hand in the seller's own with the electric salesman's grip, grasping your right elbow firmly with his left hand, and drawing you slightly off your feet toward him, while he played upon you the vitalized eye, and thus overcame sales resistence. He addressed you thus:

"I should like to get your reaction to this proposition, so that we can function constructively together and put it over in a big way."

While he was quietly picking your pocket in a big way he murmured, "It's all for service."

That was the formula. "Big business" actually used that language, which was not English. Shortly it was followed by prefacing every statement of fact or opinion with "the thought is" or "the thinking is." What followed usually proved on examination to be almost wholly innocent of such things as thought or thinking.

GROANS ARE FASHION

Happily, the hard times of the Thirties sent that ritual into the limbo of old nightmares.

But there is worse afoot. The fashion of magnates now is to precede every other sentence with a groan of easy exhalation that sounds like "uh-h-h" or "ah-h-h" or even "aw-w-w." It is a sad but masterful sound that signifies richness and wisdom in the sentence to follow. It takes time but inspires confidence. It signals the gravity of the speaker, his deep understanding of the inevitability of everything, his wisdom, in the weighing of every word that will shortly be uttered. The duration of the groan is long, the longer the wiser. The words that follow are quite worthless and therefore harmless. They make no trouble. It is the groan, with its deadly and certain recurrence, that incites to murder. The stick-up, so blithely prevalent today, has followed the groan. It is the definite result of the big business groan. There may be worse to come.

YOUTH CONCISE

Compared to this torture, the talk of youth today is so serene in its purity of word and enunciation that it almost reaches the clear, cold, declamatory heights of the cop—who is the exemplar above all.

The faults of youth, which are put down by some to the speed with which they are yanked through the high schools, are, after all, only spotty and always curable. There is a current addiction to "so what" and "oh kay," but that exists mostly in the colleges and universities and the leisurely of the land.

The stenographer, bending so devotedly and prettily over her typewriter, never uses either. The shop girl, standing so sturdily and prettily behind the counter, never uses either. They both say "yes" instead of "yeah." They talk with articulation and without accent. They say "church" instead of "choych," and "work" instead of "woyk." They lift up our language. They lay a long-term debt of gratitude upon the shoulders of the "flaming" portion of youth that flounders in the wake of this workaday leadership. They do say "okie-doke" from time to time, but, I think, only in moments of great contentment. It has a happy euphony—sounds like the old oaken bucket bumping against the side of the well.

EPITHET ON CHEST?

In older days there were those of lesser education who said "dese" and "dose" for "these" and "those." They were soon referred to as "dese and dose" boys or girls. They have gone with the wind.

I suspect that the present practice of saying "definitely," instead of "yes," will soon go with the wind, too. Meanwhile, it is a jewel of clarity in comparison with that indefinite death in mid-air indicated by "so what," and it is a linguistic health resort compared to the sickbed of the business man's groan.

Of course there are still "swell" and "lousy." I don't mind "swell," just as I don't much mind "oh kay," if they are not overdone. They are gay and good-natured. But why bring in the louse? A disagreeable animal. We had cooties in the army, but that was war, and we were all in it together. "Lousy?" It is not an adjective. It is an epithet. Did you ever have one on your chest? Try it—and then find another word.

U.S. SEEKING S. AMERICAN DEFENSE BASES

Senator Walsh Discloses Negotiations but Fails to Elaborate on Announcement

United Press

WASHINGTON, June 5—The United States is negotiating for the establishment of United States air bases in South America, Senator David I. Walsh, chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, disclosed in the Senate yesterday.

Senator Walsh did not elaborate on his announcement. He made his disclosure while explaining the provisions of the naval aircraft expansion bill.

Senator Walsh's declaration, diplomatic observers pointed out, was the first authoritative statement indicating he manner in which the United States intends to carry out its policy of defending the Western Hemisphere.

SPECULATION EXISTS

Previously there had been speculation over the policy the United States would adopt in assuring that adequate military preparations would be made in South America.

Senator Walsh's statement indicated that the United States itself intends to assume a large share of the responsibility for defending South America with the United States fighting forces. This represents a more direct policy, it was pointed out, than relying solely on United States financial and technical aid to the South American Republics to enable them to build up their own fighting forces.

No indication was forthcoming from official circles here last night regarding the sites for South American air bases now being sought by the United States.

Senator Walsh's statement, however, again centered attention on the possibility of fortifying two strategic islands in the Caribbean off Nicaragua's east coast and the construction of a new naval base on the Pacific side of Central America.

In the treaty negotiated between the United States and Nicaragua in 1914, granting this country a 99-year lease to a Nicaraguan canal site were provisions giving the United States the right to fortify Little and Great Coan islands and establish a naval base in the Gulf of Fonseca.

The United States has never undertaken any construction in this Nicaragua-owned territory but comprehensive surveys have been made and charts of the areas have been drawn up by the Navy Department.

Some quarters believe that chances are good that the United States will undertake either or both of the projects.

GULF OF FONSECA

The Gulf of Fonseca is one of the most strategic locations for a base in that part of the New World and is one of the few sheltered parts in Central America. Bordered by Salvador, Honduras and Nicaragua, its entrance is dominated on both sides by mountains which, if protected with strong shore batteries, could make the Gulf area impregnable.

In any defense program contemplating naval cooperation among the nations of the New World, a base in the Gulf would be an invaluable asset as a stopping off place for United States vessels en route to South American waters. It is about 2,200 miles from the fleet base at San Diego, California. This distance is approximately the maximum effective cruising range of modern warships.

The treaty contemplated that establishment of the base would hinge on the construction of a second canal across Nicaragua but apparently there is nothing to stand in the way of building the base, whether the waterway is undertaken or not.

CORN ISLE VALUABLE

The Corn islands also would prove of extreme value in the event a continental defense plan is agreed upon. The islands, leased for a period of 99 years, are less than 50 miles off Nicaragua's east coast and would afford considerable protection to the mainland.

The islands dominate the Caribbean side of the proposed Nicaraguan canal and lie in a commanding position north of the Atlantic side of the Panama Canal.

The possibility of the United States' taking advantage of the treaty provisions is strengthened by increasing concern in War and Navy quarters over the security of the Panama Canal. The Secretary of War, Harry H. Woodring, in his annual report, stressed the necessity of making the Canal impregnable. A new base on the Pacific side near the canal and for lied islands on the Caribbean side would considerably strengthen the waterway's position.

In South America, United States defense leaders attach most importance to Brazil and it may be mainly from that country that the United States is now seeking air bases, observers believed.

According to Major-General David P. Barrows of the United States Army, Brazil is the "all essential" country in South America for making possible the carrying out of the United States' new policy of protecting both Americas against invasion.

General Barrows, former president of the University of California, has prepared a detailed study for the National Defense Section of the famous Commonwealth Club of California on the new problems created by America's determination to assume the defense in both Southern Atlantic and Southern Pacific waters.

Copies of the report are in the hands of President Roosevelt, congressional leaders and the Navy and War Departments.

Explaining that a fleet can only operate within a radius of 2,000 to 2,500 miles, and an air force within a radius even less, General Barrows points out the effective defense of the American fleet at present time toward the south would be limited merely to the northern countries of South America. On the Pacific side, he points out, the circle of the fleet's effectiveness would pass through Peru. The present Atlantic bases, he states, furnish protection only as far south as the northern half of Brazil.

HELP NECESSARY

"While we can make our defense of the Panama Canal and the Caribean effective with our present naval and air bases, yet if we are to carry out our newly defined policy in North and South America, we must have help from the southern continent," his report states. "That help must necessarily be less military than naval in cooperation with our own efforts.

"In South America," he said, "the essential state is Brazil. Brazil is a mighty state, embracing half of the continent and half of the people. I mean by cooperation, Brazil's willingness to put whatever she has that is useful to us at our disposal. This includes harbors, and fortified air bases to the south. This cooperation we must have, if we are to undertake the defense of the whole southern continent.

"That cooperation, too, I fancy we already have. For 100 years Brazilian policy has moved right along with the American policy, which is highly fortunate."

General Barrows pointed out that with the fleet effective from its home bases for the defense of the northern half of Brazil, it would, with a Brazilian base, become also effective for the defense not only of the remainder of Brazil but for the whole Southern Atlantic coast for a distance of 2,000 to 2,500 miles southward.

NEW YORK, June 8—The Brooklyn Dodgers found themselves back in second place today when the Cincinnati Reds went on the biggest scoring spree of the season to down the Dodgers, 23-2, amassing 27 hits at the expense of three pitchers.

Outfielder Harry Craft of the Reds provided the punch for the winners, for in five trips to the plate, he banged a homer, a triple, a double and two singles to drive in six runs. Veteran Paul Derringer went the full distance for the Reds to allow the Dodgers only seven scattered hits.

DOWN REDS

Yesterday in the opening game of the crucial series, the Dodgers, behind the able pitching of Bucky Walters, downed the Reds, 4-2. All the Dodgers' scoring was credited to homers by Dolph Camilli and Peewee Reese, the former with two mates on bases.

The New York Giants consolidated their position in third place by taking both ends of a double header from the St. Louis Cardinals. Though outhit, 13-9, Joiner of the Giants held the Cards in the pinches with tight hurling and won the game, 4-2.

In the second game, the Giants scored twice in the third inning to clinch the game, despite Joe Orengo's circuit clout in the eighth. The Terrymen won 5-2.

The St. Louis Browns, holder of the cellar position in the American league, ran rough-shod over the Athletics, to convert 14 hits into 15 runs, while holding their opponents to a lone tally.

Another easy win was registered by the Chicago White Sox over the Washington Senators, 12-6, despite the fact that each team chalked up 13 hits and four errors.

BROOKLYN ON TOP

United Press

NEW YORK, June 7—The Brooklyn Dodgers assumed leadership in the National League pennant race today by opening their crucial series with the Cincinnati Reds with a 4-2 victory over the Rhinelanders and Bucky Walters.

The Dodgers out-hit the Reds, 9-6, and managed to stave off the effect of two errors by virtue of an uprising in the first inning that saw Camilli clout a home run with two mates aboard.

These three runs proved enough to win the game, although the Dodgers added another run in the seventh when Peewee Reese clouted a homer with nobody aboard.

The Dodgers also gained on the New York Giants, who have begun to press the leaders during the last week, when the Terrymen succumbed to the St. Louis Cardinals, 3-2. The Giants had a 10-6 edge in hits, but failed to bunch their blows. As a matter of fact, the Cardinals actually put the game on ice in the first inning on a combination of three singles and a walk.

Doubles by Billy Herman and Rip Collins in the eighth inning drove two runs across the plate, broke a 3-3 deadlock, and gave the Chicago Cubs a 5-3 victory over the Boston Bees, enabling the Cubs to register their fourth straight victory.

BALL OF FIRE

Robays was a ball of fire for the Pittsburgh Pirates, collecting four hits in five trips to the plate to drive in five runs and pace an attack that resulted in a convincing 10-4 victory for the Cubs over the Philadelphia Phillies. The triumph enabled the Pirates to move up out of the cellar.

In the American League, Rookie Bran Cato led the Washington Senators to 3-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox when he clouted a triple, a double and a single to drive in all three Senator runs and give pitcher Leonard his eighth win of the season.

Despite Hal Trosky's 14th home run of the year, the Cleveland Indians bowed in defeat before the New York Yankees, 5-4, when George Selkirk, star left-fielder, broke up a tie in the eighth inning by stealing home on Bob Feller and Rolly Hemsley.

After yielding five runs in the fifth inning, Butland was yanked by the Boston Red Sox, but the damage was done and the Detroit Tigers had no difficulty in marching to a 7-1 triumph.

The Philadelphia Athletics nosed out the St. Louis Browns, 3-2, winning out in the eighth when Dixie Walker clouted a single to score Cain, who had drawn a walk.

Y.C. & A.C. BASEBALL TEAM DEFEATS SPORT CLUB NINE BY 14-11

The Yokohama Sport Club baseball team lost to the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club nine by 14 to 11 at the latter's grounds Sunday afternoon. The winners outhit their opponents by 11 to 6.

The home team trailed by 6 to 0 at one time but managed to tie the score at seven-all in the fifth. The visitors took the lead again in the sixth when they gained another three runs, and it was only by staging a four-run rally in the "lucky seventh" that the Y.C. & A.C. managed to forge ahead for the first time. The home team pushed another three men across the plate in the eighth to gain a safe margin, the score being 14 to 10. The Y.S.C. made one run in their last time at bat.

HARRISS PITCHES

Harriss pitched the major part of the game for the winners. He kept the six hits he allowed the opposition in as many innings well scattered, but issued 14 free passes. Beatty hurled the seventh and eighth, and Cromarty the ninth, and they managed to hold the opposition hitless with good support Da Silva did most of the mound service for the Y.S.C., being relieved by Kondo in the eighth, but errors on the part of their teammates robbed them of any chances for a victory.

Naruse's long drive to left which evaded the fielder resulted in the only home run of the game. Beatty obtained three hits in four trips to the plate, consisting of two triples and a double, while Lamport, Bielous and Da Rosa all got two hits in four times at bat.

AIRPORT JOBS SLATED AT OSAKA, KOBE

Approximately ¥460,000 Provided for 2 Giant Aeronautical Projects

By SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

OSAKA, June 11—Two giant airport projects are to be undertaken by Osaka, Kobe and intermediate townships in the very near future. The first is to be the enlargement of the present Osaka Dai-ni Hikojo, or the Second Osaka Airport, at Itami. The second, also enlargement work, on the Hanshin Aeronautical School's flying field. Both projects, it is understood, will be completed by the end of next year at a total cost of approximately ¥19,500,000.

The Osaka airport at Itami will be enlarged to four times its present area to enable it in future to accommodate large, multi-motored transports. Upon completion, it will be one of the largest and most modernly equipped airports in the Orient with criss-cross runways in the center of the field. The new hangars are to be all-steel while administrative buildings, field-houses, waiting rooms and other necessary housing are to be of ferro-concrete.

WILL COST 12 MILLION

The work, which is understood, will cost approximately ¥12,000,000, will be undertaken in view of the fact that the present field is entirely too small to cope with the increasing air traffic. The air-express running between Tokyo and Fukuoka, in Kyushu, is unable to stop over in the Hanshin districts due to the lack of proper landing space.

The Hanshin Aeronautical School's flying field will be enlarged to five times its present area and turned into an air-defense airport. The field which is situated in Taisho Mura, on the eastern outskirts of Osaka, will be entirely redesigned into an "idealistic air defense port," as the authorities put it. All high-tension wires in the near vicinity are to be removed and the drainage system rennovated. The project will cost approximately ¥7,500,000.

It is understood that the bulk of the tremendous expenses are to be shouldered by both Osaka and Hyogo Prefectures, while the remainder will come through donations from individuals and organizations of various nature in the whole of the Hanshin districts. Considerable subsidies are coming through the War Office. It is further understood that approximately ¥460,000 has been received by authorities already toward both projects.

BEACON BUILT

While on the subject of national defense, the aeronautical school and air beacon under construction on the summit of Mt. Ikoma in Kyoto, is of noteworthy interest. Construction work on the two projects which are being built as a single unit, began on the first of the current month and is to be completed by the end of Sepetmber.

Though no detailed information has yet been disclosed to the press, it is understood that the building is to occupy a 283 tsubo site 2,400 feet above sea level overlooking Kyoto and Osaka. The administrative building will be of wooden construction while the beacon will be of ferro-concrete, stream-lined in cross section.

The school building will have regular class-rooms, library, study hall and dormitory with adequate facilities for 60 students and pupils, including dining room, social hall, baths, etc. This is one of the first schools of its kind in Japan.

THE CHOICE OF THE MULTITUDE

ALLIED FAILURE IN NORWAY IS EXPLAINED

Britain Forced to Drop Campaign Due to Pressure On Other Battle Fronts

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, June 11—Formal announcement that the two-month-old Allied campaign in Norway has ended with the withdrawal of British, French and Polish forces from the Narvik region was made by Major Clement R. Atlee, Lord Privy Seal, in the House of Commons tonight.

He explained that the withdrawal was effected owing to the pressure of war on other fronts. The Norwegian forces in northern Norway laid down their arms in order to save the territory from further destruction by the Germans. In order to watch Norwegian interests during the war, King Haakon VII and members of his Government have moved their residence to England, he said.

EXPLAINS FAILURE

Speaking for Prime Minister Winston Churchill, with regard to recent military events, Major Atlee said of unsuccessful Norwegian campaign:

"It is with deep regret that the British Government was forced to make the decision to abandon the campaign in northern Norway at a moment when it turned in our favor and when Narvik had fallen in our hands."

The Allies, he continued, working under arduous conditions succeeded during the past months in keeping vastly superior forces away from the decisive theater of war. The time, however, had come when it was clear that all available Allied forces must be employed on the main front, where the issue of the fate of Norway and other free Democratic countries must be decided.

He declared that the "decision was hard," adding that the King and the Norwegian Government although leaving their country temporarily had decided to continue the struggle on the other fronts.

Referring to Italy's war declaration, he asserted, "hardly ever before in history has the decision to embroil a great nation into war been so wanton with so little excuse." Great Britain and France all along have been prepared to consider any real grievances of Italy and to right them. The Allies have been patient under constant abuse and provocation.

ITALIAN MOVE BIT

He declared that Italy's declaration of war was completely sordid with material motives "because Premier Mussolini thinks he sees the chance of securing spoils at the expense of the Western Democracies now they are at grips with the brute force of Germany."

He expressed the belief that many Italians feel ashamed at the role thrust upon them. "France has been stabbed in the back, Britain was attacked in the hope that in her destruction, Mussolini might get pickings for his new Roman Empire. Mussolini made a profound mistake. The victims whose spoils he hopes to share are not yet dead."

The French people, he continued, are never greater than when in adversity. The French are fighting magnificently by sea and air on their own soil and Great Britain is standing firmly beside her. The Italians, like the Germans, will find they have to meet resolute resistance soon and they soon will find the might of the Allies seapower.

Already 14 Italian ships have been seized and ten others in Britain's ports will be confiscated. Commenting on President Roosevelt's speech, he said that assurances from the American President "makes it inevitable that however hard the road, the cause of civilization will prevail in the end.

DEMOCRACY RISES

"Two dictators are united to destroy Democracy. Democracy will answer the challenge. From the Atlantic has come the answer.

"It was as though day followed night when only a few hours after Italy's dictator made his dastardly announcement, President Roosevelt delivered a message worthy of the great, free republic.

"In extending the whole of America's sympathies to the nations giving lifeblood in the combat against the forces of hate, Mr. Roosevelt vitally has inspired the free peoples of Europe."

Major Atlee declared that Mr. Roosevelt's assurance that material resources of his great industrial nation would be placed at the Allies disposal makes inevitable however hard the road the cause of civilization will in the end prevail.

Now attacks, he declared, makes no difference to the Allies stern resolution to defeat their enemies He said that the Allies are fully confident of the ability to withstand all attacks and achieve victory. "We fight not for ourselves alone but for the freedom of the human spirit," he concluded.

Japan Mission to Italy Altering Tour Schedule

Domei Tsushin

VENICE, June 10—The Japanese mission visiting Italy, altering its schedule because of Italy's entry into the war, has decided to return to Rome tomorrow and to await instructions from Tokyo there regarding its future plans.

Members of the mission, passing the vast Venice Square on their hotel after inspecting a local glass factory this evening, witnessed 30,000 Fascists hear with continuous cheering Premier Benito Mussolini's radio speech announcing that Italy has decided to participate in the war.

Railway Travelers Advised to Bring Own Night Gowns

Starting June 11 renting of night gowns on Government railway trains will be discontinued temporarily on account of the present water shortage.

All the laundering of night gowns, pillow cases, sheets, and seat covers on first and second class trains were done in special laundry establishments in premises of Tokyo Station, which is the terminus of the Tokaido Line and the starting-point of the Tohoku, Joban and Shinetsu Lines. Due to the water situation it has become impossible to handle all the laundering of the trains under jurisdiction of Tokyo Railway Bureau. The daily average has been 900 pillow cases, night gowns and seat covers.

In order to meet the present water situation renting of night gowns will be discontinued during the water shortage, and tourists are requested to bring their own when traveling.

ITALIAN ENTRY PLACES ALLIES IN DIFFICULTY

Rome Will Be Liability Rather Than Aid to Reich, Says Hugh Dalton

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, June 10—Italy's intervention in the European hostilities while the British and French are battling desperately to stem the German drive on Paris admittedly has place the Allies in the most precarious position since the war began, but every indication in London tonight pointed to the grim determination to carry on the struggle without flinching.

British circles declared tonight that the Allies this time were not caught unprepared. They said that although the exact moment that Il Duce chose for entering the war naturally was unpredictable, but the belief that he had made up his mind gradually was strengthened in Allied circles in recent weeks.

FULL PRECAUTIONS TAKEN

The fullest precautions of military and naval character have been taken for meeting the extension of the conflict to the Mediterranean from Norway. The fleet, it is emphasized, stands ready to block Italy's life-lines of supply from Gibraltar to the Suez, to the Dardanelles and is ready to carry the war to Italian waters.

The Allied armies in the Near East, estimated at more than 1,000,000 men, equally are prepared to resist possible Italian attacks on Egypt and Tunis and at the same time are ready to seize the Italian colonies in Africa.

Faced by these obstacles Il Duce is believed not likely to attempt a southward thrust at the present stage and probably will concentrate all offensive efforts against southern France while Germany hammers in the north in the win-or-nothing drive, calculated to knock out France within a space of a few months, leaving Britain the prey of invasion.

There is strong possibility, it is said here, that Germany may also back up the Italian drive by a move through Switzerland and although strong French forces are stationed along the Alpine and southern frontiers, a combined blitzkrieg on two fronts will prove a most serious test for the Allied armies.

VICTORY CERTAIN

If they can stave off attacks for the next two or three months while Italy and Germany expend their remaining supplies, the majority of military observers agree that an Allied victory is certain. The supreme question of the hour is "can the Allies hold?"

The first step for meeting the new development is expected to be to rush, through the reorganization of the British Expeditionary Forces, another reequipped army in the greatest possible number. The troops will be supported by mechanized equipment, planes, guns and tanks at the shortest possible time for helping General Weygand beat back the Italian and German attacks.

Simultaneously, a full force of the Allied blockade will be immediately applied to Italy and the possibility of aggressive action in the Mediterranean against Italian possessions in North Africa is undoubtedly to be considered.

In the long run, the blockade is expected to prove most effective as Italian stocks of vital war materials are believed to be far scantier than Germany's, especially in oil.

MAY BE LIABILITY

The Minister of Economic Warfare, Hugh Dalton, in a statement to the press tonight predicted that Italy will prove a liability rather than an aid to Germany due to the former's economic vulnerability But at the same time, observers agree that the Allies must first hold the ground by military means if economic measures are to have time for becoming effective.

The British Broadcasting Corporation in a public statement tonight assured the people that "preparations of the Allied Governments are complete," asserting that the Allies shall "meet sword with sword.

"In the struggle between civilization and the pagan hordes of Germany, the Fascist Government has waited to intervene at a moment of greatest embarrassment to the Allies. The treacherous blow was delivered in order to obtain war spoils which Germany will deign give Italy.

"In fact, what Italy will get is the scorn of the entire world."

The B.B.C. announcement warned that the war will be a long one and that it will take place on land, sea and air until the German menace is chased from Europe. "Italy cannot hope to secure a great victory. On the contrary, Italy will be compelled to make heavy sacrifices which will only benefit the Reich."

HAS 4 BATTLESHIPS

Military experts describing Italy's strength said that last available figures gave for the Italian navy four battleships, 22 cruisers, 56 flotilla leaders and destroyers, 72 torpedo boats and 105 submarines. The Army is believed to number nearly 2,000,000 effectives in addition to garrisons overseas, while the Air Force is reported to possess over 5,000 planes, of which more than half is believed to be obsolete.

Allied strength in the Mediterranean is expected to be strengthened by the addition of Turkey whose entry is considered certain under the terms of the mutual aid pacts with Britain and France.

Italian action also is regarded as assuring full American assistance to the Allies short of actual entry into the war, while many observers also see therein a possible stimulus of Soviet disaffection toward Germany and a favoring of British efforts for a trade accord.

COVERING THE WORLD

From German Sources

British Bombs

GENEVA, June 12—The bombs dropped last night not far from the center of the city of Geneva were of English origin. As the Swiss Army Staff announces, the "investigation of the bombings in Western Switzerland revealed that the bombs were dropped by the English. Seven bombs were dropped on Renens and six on Geneva. The planes were flying in a westerly direction."

NEUTRALITY VIOLATED

ROME, June 12—Spain's neutrality has been violated by English warships, "Lavoro Fascista" reports. Whilst chasing several Italian vessels which were ordered to proceed to Spanish ports, English warships continued the pursuit far into Spanish territorial waters. Five Italian vessels were captured in the Straits of Gibraltar although they were proceeding along the Spanish coast in Spanish waters. The Italian paper concludes the report by stating that the violation of the Spanish neutrality by the English has caused a storm of indignation in Spain.

PARIS ROADS BLOCKED

STOCKHOLM, June 12—All roads leading to Paris have been blocked and infested with mines, says the Dagens Nyheter in a report from the French capital. In the course of last night, more barricades were erected in the streets of Paris and additional preparations were made for the defense of the city.

SPAIN PROTESTS

MADRID, June 12—The Spanish Government submitted to the British Ambassador here an energetic protest, requesting the immediate release of the Italian sailors captured by English vessels in Spanish territorial waters. The craziest case of all, as became known here, is that of the Italian freighter Libano, the crew of which after scuttling their vessel tried to escape swimming. About half of the crew reached the Spanish shore while the remainder were fished from the water and imprisoned by the English in the Bay of Gibraltar.

20,000 Captured

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, June 12—The German high command announced tonight: "The Franco-British forces surrounded at St. Valery capitulated after the failure of attempts at leaving the town by boats. One French Corps General, and one English and four French Division Commanders surrendered. The number of prisoners is above 20,000."

PARIS FALL NEARS

COPENHAGEN, June 12—The fall of the French capital is a certainty, front reports to Copenhagen newspapers state today. "By crossing the Seine west of Paris and by advancing toward the Marne valley east of the city, the German troops have cut off the entire defense system of the French capital," says Politiken.

BACK AXIS ACTION

MADRID, June 12—Spontaneous demonstrations for Italy and Germany took place in Valencia today. Headed by the flags of Spain, Italy and the Reich, demonstrators marched through the streets, singing national songs.

American Liner Washington Stopped by Unknown Sub

Domei Tsushin

WASHINGTON, June 11—The United States liner Washington, of 24,289-ton, which is carrying 1,020 passengers, mostly American refugees from Europe, was halted by an unidentified submarine early this morning in the north Atlantic, the State Department revealed.

The submarine, it is disclosed, ordered the passengers to abandon the liner but later permitted to proceed when it was identified as an American vessel.

From British Sources

FIGHTING AT SENLIS

PARIS, June 12—The battle for Paris is fully engaged, following French withdrawal to the north of the city on the orders of the high command. North of the capital there is bitter fighting round Senlis, which is 25 miles from Paris. The Germans have crossed the Seine at several points near Rouen and the French troops are now trying to hurl them back and wipe out their bridgeheads. The main French forces are holding the south bank of the Marne. Further east the Germans are thrusting in the direction of Rheims.

According to this morning's communique, the Germans are using two armored divisions and four or five other divisions in the attempt to take Rheims. The positions at Rheims are most serious, and elsewhere also the Germans are throwing their whole strength into the attack. They are staking everything on this action and are using their reserve tanks and even tanks used for training purposes.

REICH SAID WEAK

LONDON, June 12—A military correspondent broadcasting a commentary on Italy's entry into the war, said that "Italy's entry at a time when the Germans are throwing every man into the Paris battle leads to the assumption that Hitler requires reinforcements. Why should the Germans ask the Italians to come to their aid, as if they did not think themselves to be winning? They have not forgotten Poland, and the fact that the Russians got most of the spoils without fighting. Today's news supports the view that the Germans required reinforcements at all costs. They wish to reach a quick decision."

BLOCKADE ENFORCED

LONDON, June 12—Blockade measures against Italy similar to those already taken against Germany were announced today. All Italian exports from now on will be treated as contraband of war.

The embargo on German exports was enforced last November as a reprisal for Germany's ruthless sinking of merchant ships without regard to the rights of neutrals and the obligations of humanity. Today's proclamation says that these violations have continued and evidently are part of the settled method of waging war which Germany has adopted. Italy by her actions has associated herself with Germany in the war and made herself party to the German methods.

At least 27 Italian merchant ships have been lost so far, most of them seized for useful service in the Allied cause. Three have been scuttled. Stories of the capture, beaching or scuttling of these ships come from Australia, Canada and South Africa.

At Calcutta the Calabria (9,515 tons) is reported seized. The Romolo (9,780 tons) has been intercepted in mid-Pacific. The Romolo's crew set the ship on fire and abandoned her. She sank but the crew were all saved. The Cellina (6,086 tons), reported yesterday scuttled, is still afloat in Algeciras Bay, and has been seized by the British authorities. Other Italian ships have taken refuge in Spanish ports in the last 24 hours.

Cairo Fights Italy

CAIRO, June 12—The Egyptian Chamber of Deputies has approved a resolution breaking off diplomatic relations with Italy, it is reported here today.

LINER STOPPING EXPLAINED

LONDON, June 12—There have been two astonishing developments arising from the stopping of the American liner Washington yesterday by a submarine, which, after threatening to torpedo her, finally allowed her to proceed. It was officially admitted in Berlin that the submarine concerned was a German vessel and the explanation is that the German Government had not been told that the liner was calling at Galway where she was proceeding.

This explanation was supplemented later today by the Deutschlandsender radio station with the statement that it was thought she was British; and it was described as incorrect that the United States Government had notified all Governments concerned that she was returning home via Ireland. The explanation concluded: "The German Government did not learn until yesterday afternoon that the ship would call at an Irish port in addition to Bordeaux and Lisbon."

The world has proof that this is a lie, it is asserted here. Four days ago, at 11:15 a.m., British summer time, Hamburg radio stated that Washington was to call at an Irish port. At 6 a.m. on Monday Deutschlandsender radio itself also stated that the Washington was calling at an Irish port. Now this afternoon Deutschlandsender with unparalled impudence asks the world to believe that the German Government did not know what the rest of the world and its own wireless stations had known for days.

Turin Attacked

LONDON, June 12—Tonight's Air Ministry communique states that in the course of reconnaissances over northern Italy, heavy bombers operating from Great Britain attacked military objectives at Turin, while others bombed targets at Genoa. One of our heavy bombers is missing.

Our fighters were active over France yesterday. At least eight enemy aircraft were destroyed. One of our fighters is missing.

SUMMER WATER RATIONING IN KOBE MAY BE AVERTED BY NEW SCHEME

By SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

KOBE, June 11—Kobe's water reserve continues to drop and summer water rationing—a feature of Kobe since 1920—comes ever nearer. But a new and timely plan has been figured out, the success of which may mean no rationing this summer.

The plan, as submitted to Kobe municipal authorities a few days ago by the Kobe Civil Engineering branch of the Home Office, is to dam the Minato, Tennoji, Uji, Sumiyoshi and a number of other rivers flowing into Kobe from the back hills, and lead the water into the city's reservoirs. Mr. Takata, civil engineer of the Home Office, who recently returned from an extensive survey of water resources of Korea, is conducting special surveys of the various rivers and their potentialities as a supply source.

Upon completion of the survey work, it is understood that the dams will be designed immediately and construction work begun and rushed through in order to take care of the coming summer season. Mr. Haraguchi, head of the local branch, said that the dams would be of infinite use in the future too for it is feared that the ¥19,500,000 water pipe project already under construction will not be able to cope fully with the city's water requisites after completion. The permanent project will link the Yodogawa River in Osaka with Kobe's water reservoirs, pipes passing through Amagasaki, Nishinomiya and other intermediate localities. The work is to be completed in 1944, a year later than originally scheduled due to the shortage of materials, labor etc.

British Note Issue Up

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, June 11—The Treasury has been authorized, effectively today, to increase the amount of fiduciary issue by £50,000,000 to £650,000,000.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Kingsley Wood, questioned on the inflationary measure in the House of Commons today, explained that, owing to a growing demand for currency, the increase was necessary and unavoidable.

Marseilles Remains Quiet, Despite Italian Entry

MARSEILLES, June 11—Despite the large Italian colony in this important French Mediterranean port, Italy's entrance into the war has provoked no disorders of any kind.

KIYOSE URGES CHANGE IN JAPAN POLICY

Must Strengthen National Defense, Stop Flattering United States and Britain

Most important policies which Japan must pursue in the present emergency are a change from her diplomatic policy flattering the United States and Britain to a self-determinating one and strengthening of her national defense, declared Dr. Ichiro Kiyose when interviewed by a representative of The Japan Times and Mail this morning.

Dr. Kiyose is a parliamentary member belonging to the Kokumin-Domei, and is known as one of the country's leading renovationists. It is still remembered that he bitterly assailed the Foreign Office measures in the 75th Diet session with regard to the Asama Maru Incident.

POWERFUL DEFENSE NEEDED

"It is needless to say that the current hostilities in Europe have given not a small deal of impetus to our nation. It clearly has given us the suggestion for the need of strengthening Japan's national defense and political renovation. Although the Nomonhan battle opened our eyes to the subjects, the detailed news of the European war make us feel fully the need of a powerful national defense.

"Particularly in view of the fact that America's naval expansion plan is being carried out and that the U.S. has placed an embargo of machine tools against Japan, though they claim the action is not directed against Japan, perfect national defense is the most urgent need," he continued.

MUST BE PREPARED

"We are led to know that Japan cannot accomplish her great task of building up a new order in East Asia, unless Japan is free from the United States in regard to supply of necessary materials," he stated.

"Moreover," he continued, "we are necessitated to apply the new order to a larger extent than ever."

"When the current European hostilities terminate, what attitude will America and Britain take to Japan? This is a serious question. We must be prepared for a possible grave situation between Japan and them," he declared.

BIG BATTLES NEEDED

Asked about the method of speeding up disposal of the current China Affairs, he said "We must extend our war fronts to Szechwan and Yunnan provinces to deal a fatal blow to the Chungking Government. Large-scaled battles must be fought."

In response to a question on the recent movement for a new political party, he replied "A new party will be meaningless unless a genius appears, who can clearly show what the people are groping for and the way they must follow.

"The truth is well proved in the appearance of Adolf Hitler, who expressed what the German people could not express and gave the solution," he continued. "Chancellor Hitler aimed at the unification of German people scattered through Europe and sought for the genuine unity of race. Such ideals of the Germans, that is, Hitler, were manifested in the form of abandonment of the Versailles Treaty. It is quite the same with the Chinese revolution led by Sun Yat-sen and his followers who advocated the Three People's Principle. They synthesized the desires and hopes of the people at large."

"In our own country the people became conscious before and after the outbreak of the Manchurian Incident that the existing political parties are incapable of leading the country. May 15, 1931, and February 26, 1936 Incidents occurred as an explosion of the national discontentment against the old ideology of the political parties.

"The Manchurian Incident and the present China Affair themselves are products of Japan in the time of transition. However, the political outlook of the country still maintains the status quo, method of forming cabinets and the attitude of the parties being the same as before.

NO FAITH IN U.S.

One of his friends staying in U.S., he said, sent him a book entitled "American White Paper" written jointly by Joseph Alsop and Robert Kintner. The book states that the U.S. will, through cooperation with Britain and France, ask for Japan's complete withdrawal from China and that they will try to dissolve the new National Government in Nanking after the European war, he remarked.

"The book is written by journalists, but such a possibility surely exists," he said.

Asked about a recent article in the New York Times on Japanese-American relations, written by Walter Lippman and the remarks of Under-secretary of State Sumner Welles that America must keep amity with Japan, he replied,

"Such talk may have caused comparatively big echoes within the U.S., but we cannot have confidence in it."

"If a genius clearly shows the way and policy which the people must follow, it will be quite easy to make a powerful party in the country."

Asked what he himself thinks is the definite way for the people to follow, he smiled and said.

"I myself, as one of the Japanese nation, am studying it. But to this extent can I say now—change of Japan's diplomatic policy flattering America and Britain and that strengthening her national defense, these two are the most urgent needs for our nation who has such an important mission as establishing a new order in the Far East."

Bulgaria Officials Looking For Soviet Protection

Domei Tsushin

SOFIA, June 10—Bulgarian officials appeared tonight to be looking to the Soviet Union for protection against becoming involved in the spreading European conflict following fears that Turkey might retaliate against Italy's declaration of war on the Allies.

The greatest immediate fear, semi-official sources indicated tonight, is whether Turkey will live by its pledges to the Allies and enter the war thus bringing the conflict to the Balkans. Latest dispatches intimated that Turkey's entry into the war was a matter of hours.

China Aid Comes

to learn exactly what amount of money has been sent from the Chinese working abroad to assist the Chiang Kai-shek regime to fight Japan. However, some important donations include 5,073,418 Yuan in Chinese money, and 219,568 Yuan in Hongkong dollars, from the Dutch East Indies and 897,896 Yuan in Hongkong dollars from British Borneo.

The total sum semi-officially alleged to have been sent in by the emigrants in the same period reaches 47,078,960 Yuan, divided into 45,384,431 Yuan in Chinese money, 219,568 Yuan in Hongkong dollars and 1,414,961 Yuan in Dutch dollars.

STRAITS LEAD

According to the April announcement of the spokesman of the Emigrants Commission subscriptions to the war funds sent from the Chinese abroad from July 1937 to March, 1940, reached at least the level of 100,000,000 Yuan, of which 68,500,000 Yuan was actually forwarded through the Commission. Most prominent among these contributions are those donated by resident Chinese in the Straits Settlements and the Dutch East Indies.

To quote the figures published by the Emigrants Commission:

Localities	Contributions (In Yuan)
Straits Settlements	26,000,000
Java	7,000,000
Philippines	4,500,000
Sumatra	3,500,000
Burma	2,500,000
Great Britain	250,000
U.S.A.	2,787,000
Canada	1,238,000
Hawaii Islands	400,000
Australia	375,000
New Zealand	534,000
Other places	19,416,000
Total	68,500,000

If the popular estimates are taken up as the basis, the total sum of the Chinese emigrants' contribution to the war expenses since the outbreak of the Sino-Japanese conflict must have so far amounted, it is generally believed, to the level of 400,000,000 Yuan, even excepting the remittances urgently made to the emigrants' relatives or old friends, upon the successive falls of Amoy, Swatow and Canton to the Japanese forces.

AID IS REASON

The fact that the Chiang Kai-shek regime is still sustaining its existence, one way or the other, despite 11 of the 24 provinces having been wholly or partially occupied by the Japanese Imperial forces, the structure of China's economy being severely shattered, is attributed chiefly to the abundant aid offered by the Chinese emigrants.

Then, as to the subscriptions and canvassing for the "Nation Rescuing" national bonds, the part played by the Chinese abroad could never be ignored, as is plainly shown by the announcement made in April by the Commission for Raising the "Nation Rescuing" Bonds. The leading amounts of the subscriptions reported from various parts of the world where the subscribing Chinese are living, along with the names of the parts, are as follows:

	Yuan
From Singapore	47,470,560
" Batavia	7,715,832
" Sourabaya	11,633,154
" Melbourne	1,328,476
" New York	14,827,924
" San Francisco	8,491,640
" Hongkong	6,644,277
" French Indo-China	4,462,701

All in all, the "Nation Rescuing" national bonds were accepted by the Chinese emigrants to the face value of 1,116,188,541 Yuan. Their contributions in other lines to the cause of the Chiang Kai-shek regime are both manifold and effective.

JAPANESE EDITION OF TARZAN 'CAUGHT' BY IKEBUKURO POLICE

A Japanese version of Tarzan is now an inmate of the Itabashi poorhouse in Tokyo. He is about 17 years old, eats crow and dove meat raw and does not know where he was born, according to the Nichi Nichi.

He was found by the Ikebukuro police during a hunt for delinquent youths in April. Because he had no one to take care of him, he was sent to the Itabashi asylum.

According to the youngster, his earliest memory is that he was living with an old man in out-of-the-way mountains in Wakayama Prefecture. During his life with the strange old man in the mountains, he was taught by him a variety of old Japanese martial sports. He used to live on berries, fruits and meat of wolves and wild birds in the mountain forests.

As he grew up to adolescence, the old man said that he had nothing to learn from him and that he should descend the mountains. So saying, the old man vanished like smoke, the boy says.

Since that day he had been wandering aimlessly until he was arrested by the police. When he came to Tokyo he ate the meat of doves in shrines which he killed by hitting with stones.

The boy is five feet and four inches tall. He has a handsome face and wears white pants and shirt and a hunting cap. Being very agile, he likes to climb trees in the asylum compound. He calls himself Taro Kanda and says he is 17 years old.

MASS EXODUS OF PARIS DESCRIBED IN N.Y. HERALD TRIBUNE DISPATCH

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, June 12—The New York Herald Tribune today publishes a dispatch from its continental edition at Paris, vividly describing the mass exodus of civilians from the French capital and the arrival of haggard, battle-worn French troops into the city.

"The great mass flight of Parisians southward almost had ended by sundown," it recounts, "when stragglers from the exhausted army in the North began to stream into the city. All night long and during the morning and afternoon, men, women and children evacuated the town by train, bus, truck, automobile, bicycle, baby carriage and afoot. They took with them everything they could, everything from broken bottles of wine, mattresses, chairs, clothing, bird cages, dogs and cats.

"Almost as the last evacuees were leaving, soldiers of the army in the North began to arrive with their faces covered with dust, unshaven, chins sagging with weariness and with great, dark circles around their eyes. The soldiers marched in broken step, with lieutenant or captain in charge. Later in the evening came in from the northwest, hundreds aboard trucks and some on armored cars.

"This morning the entire valley of the Seine within many miles of Paris was covered with black smoke clouds, which seemed to come from burning gasoline or oil. In the west and north of Paris, it was so smoky that at 9 o'clock this morning the Arch of Triumph could not be seen from a short distance. Hotels are closing fast, though some cafes, restaurants still are open. However, Paris will only be a shadow of a city if it falls into enemy hands."

NEW YORK, June 12—The 35,000-ton battleship North Carolina, the second of six 35,000 tonners being built by the United States Navy, will be launched tomorrow at the Navy Yard here. Its sistership the Washington, the first of this class, was launched last week at the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

Although the North Carolina was laid down earlier than the Washington, the former's launching was delayed because of changes in construction.

The launching ceremonies will be governed by wartime restrictions, limiting visitors to American citizens only. Cameras will be barred, while news photographers will be permitted to take their pictures from specified positions.

A number of marines, police, navy yard guards, and plainclothesmen will be detailed to guard against any untoward incidents.

FOOD SUPPLY OF ENGLAND IS MENACED

Confronted with Meat Shortage with Loss Of Dutch, Danish Marts

Transocean

BERLIN, June 8—In view of the fact that England covers only 49 per cent of her meat demands from her own supplies and since imports have been sharply reduced by the loss of Dutch and Danish supplies, England is confronted by a serious meat problem.

Restaurants and hotels have been hard hit by the new meat rationing measure. At the present time they receive only 60 per cent of their former consumption. The supply of beef is a particularly difficult problem. According to reports in the English press a number of towns received no meat supplies at all last week. The poorer classes are not in a position to buy meat since prices which have been jacked up by hoarders are prohibitive.

TOO LATE NOW

After nine months of war an appalling lack of organization in England's food supply distribution is apparent. On June 3, the Daily Telegraph stated that England was in need of a rigid economic organization and that Germany's organization could not be defeated by English individualism. Individualism, says the Daily Telegraph, is all well and proper in peace time and may function in theory. From a practical point of view, however, it is too late after nine months of war.

The English Minister of Labor, Mr. Bevin, stated at the Builders Congress in London, that the economic system which was built up on monopolies and big business had failed in an hour of danger.

He stated that a new social order would have to be created. During the World War the same tactics of making promises were employed. After the war, all promises were forgotten and the workers of the richest country in the world went on suffering privation.

The extent of the misery among English workers is shown by investigations of the English industrialist Rowntree in 1936. These figures were confirmed by English Labor Unions and statistics. According to these figures 25 per cent of all railroad-workers, 40 per cent of all textile workers, 50 per cent of all construction workers, 55 per cent of municipal employes, 75 per cent of all metal workers, 80 per cent of all miners, 100 per cent of all farm workers did not have a weekly income of 26.50 Marks.

POVERTY LINE

Rowntree referred to this amount as the poverty line. According to his figures 4 million men in England are working for less than this amount. In addition there are also 2½ million female workers who receive less than this amount. In other words 6½ million workers are under the poverty line. If family members are counted in this group it can be said that more than 10 million English workers are living with their wives and children under indescribable conditions. The hopes which Mr. Bevin is now holding for the future are bound to be a failure for the workers of the richest nation in the world.

French workers fare little better than their English colleagues. The Paris newspaper Le Journal stated on June 6 that the French Ministry of Agriculture has requisitioned the workers who emigrated from the departments of the Oise, Aisne and Seine et Oise because of the German offensive. Only 40 per cent of her agricultural areas were cultivated in full. This and the loss of extensive agricultural areas in Northern France have confronted France with a serious food problem. The agricultural commission of the French Chamber of Commerce has made an urgent appeal to the French Government to place more farm workers at the disposal of agriculture by releasing them from army service.

This is a problem which is very difficult to solve, especially in view of the fact that from the military point of view France has to count on every man. This appeal, just as the announcement of the English measures to mobilize workers, comes too late for the "army of agriculture".

N.Y.K. European Route Disrupted by War

Domei Tsushin

OSAKA, June 13—The Nippon Yusen Kaisya has taken the following measures on its Mediterranean route which was disrupted by Italy's participation in the European War:

1. Until further notice, the Japan-Nearest-Italy line will terminate at Aden, via Bombay and Karachi, beginning with the Tsuruga Maru which sails from Kobe on June 19, thus strengthening the Indo-Japan route. In case of danger to Aden, ships will terminate their voyage at Karachi.

2. The Durban Maru and seven other ships on the London line and the Lisbon Maru and two other ships on the Liverpool line, will all take the Capetown route. On homeward voyage, ships may take the Capetown or Panama route as occasion calls depending on the freightage.

3. The eastward round the world service will terminate at New York, and will strengthen the New York line.

Overdue Polish Submarine Is Presumably Lost

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, June 12—The Polish submarine Orzel, overdue at her base, is presumed to have been lost, the Admiralty announced today.

The Orzel recently made a spectacular escape through the Baltic after the Nazi invasion of Poland. She was interned at Tallinn, in Estonia, after she had eluded the Nazis at Gydnia. The Polish crew made a daring escape from the Estonian port, weaved her way through the Skagerrak and reached Britain. Her members were subsequently decorated for their feat.

Rumania-Soviet Relations Expected to Be Bettered

Domei Tsushin

BUCHAREST, June 11—Belief that Rumano-Soviet relations, which at times have veered close to the brink of diplomatic rupture, soon will be restored to normal is expressed by competent circles here today, who report that Moscow intends shortly to dispatch a minister to Bucharest to assume charge of the Soviet Legation, which for the past two years has been managed by a charge d'affaires.

Mr. Lawrentjeff, former Soviet Minister to Sofia, may be appointed new Soviet Minister to Rumania, they said.

COVERING THE WORLD

From German Sources

Direct Negotiations

BERLIN, June 14—With reference to a Reuter message from Washington which is confirmed by the State Department and according to which the American Ambassador to Paris, William Bullitt, communicated through the American Embassy in Berlin, the request of the French Government to the Reich Government to regard Paris as an open town, it is announced in Berlin that the German Government has no knowledge of any such official communication from the American Embassy. On the contrary, the negotiations dealing with the surrender of the French capital were carried out solely between the competent German and French authorities.

AGAINST BRITISH WISHES

BERLIN, June 14—Paris has not been surrendered. The French Command merely at the last minute gave up its intention of defending the city and declared Paris an open town because it had no troops and equipment available for the defense.

German quarters welcome this development which made it possible to prevent the destruction of Paris. On the basis of former reports there can be no doubt that England would have liked to see Paris destroyed in order to exploit this fact by a new wave of propaganda against Germany. It is therefore stated in Berlin that the French leadership through its decision to give up Paris for the first time did not comply with England's wishes.

INTERNAL STRIFE

ROME, June 14—Serious differences of opinion between Premier Reynaud and President Lebrun are reported by the Agencia Stefani from Geneva. The report declared that Mr. Lebrun criticized Premier Reynaud because of his policy of blindly obeying England. The President also feared the Italian intervention would come. When he saw the situation getting worse, he called on Pierre Laval on June 17, offering him the premiership if he were prepared to open negotiations for a separate peace.

When Mr. Reynaud learned that Mr. Laval had seen the President, he immediately went to the Elysee and threatened to bring President Lebrun before a military tribunal for high treason.

On this occasion, Stefani learns, Mr. Reynaud asserted that the situation was not yet desperate and that moreover the Italian intervention could have been prevented by the United States. The formation of a government under Mr. Laval was thus prevented. But the United States intervention did not come even after Italy's entry into the war. This state of affairs prompted Mr. Reynaud to make his desperate appeal for assistance to the United States.

Offer Rejected

BERLIN, June 14—The Fuehrer gave the American correspondent, Karl von Wiegand, an interview. He stated in this interview, "It was never my intention or my aim to destroy the British Empire. On the contrary, before the outbreak of this war which was instigated by England and France, I made proposals to the British Government in which I went so far as to offer Great Britain Germany's help for the maintenance of the Empire. My offer was completely rejected."

INFLUENCED BY RUSSIA

ROME, June 14—Popolo di Roma prints a report from Budapest which says that the attitude of Turkey is particularly influenced by Russia. "Moscow true to its word to maintain peace in the Balkans and the Black Sea used its influence in Ankara and had more success than Paris and London although the Allied Ambassadors had a long discussion Wednesday with Foreign Minister Saracoglu and other high officials."

EGYPT AND TURKEY

BUCHAREST, June 14—Commenting upon the role which Turkey and Egypt are now playing in view of Italy's entry into the war, Curentul writes today: "Ever since May 10 things have been developing in an ever increasing degree in Germany's favor so that even the states which allowed themselves to be duped by the British-French prestige are now compelled to revise their positions for reasons of the most elementary urge of self-preservation. It is difficult to believe that Turkey and Egypt will risk participation in the fight which ever clearer is foreshadowing an early victory of the Axis Powers."

DROPPED BOMBS

BERNE, June 13—Details now available of the British bomb attack on West Switzerland show that the British fliers dropped eight bombs on Rennes, an important railway junction near Lausanne. One bomb hit the Grand Hotel de Rennes and caused heavy damage to the building. One man and one woman were killed. One bomb fell on a tramway line. A tramcar and a motorcar were damaged by bomb fragments. Five bombs hit railway installations.

COLONIES DEMANDED

MADRID, June 13—The problem of the former Spanish colonies in Africa is exhaustively dealt with by the Spanish paper Alcazar. "Spain possessed in Africa the first colonies which ever existed," says the paper. "These colonies were acquired by Spanish explorers and developed in peaceful administration. They were taken from Spain by France and England. It is only natural that today when a New Spain is born, the Spaniards demand the return of everything taken from them in time of weakness.

ATTACK RUMORS

MADRID, June 13—Rumors about the murderous attack on the former French Air Minister, Pierre Cot, by French airmen are consistent. Madrid newspapers under the heading "Day of Judgment" presumes that the hour might have come now also for other agitators, as for instance Lloyd George.

From British Sources

PARIS SAVED

TOURS, June 14—The official communique this morning reports the withdrawal of French troops from Paris. It says that on both sides of Paris the enemy push has increased further. Our advance troops covering Paris have withdrawn according to orders received. The French command aimed at sparing Paris the devastation which its defense would have involved. No valuable strategic result justified the sacrifice of Paris.

On the Champagne front the enemy are progressing in fighting toward the south. Their most advanced elements appear to be directed toward Romilly on the Seine and Saint Dizier on the Marne.

To Give More Aid

LONDON, June 14—The French, by whose side more and more British troops are battling, are heartened by the renewed pledge that Britain will give France the utmost aid to continue the struggle. This promise is given in a message from the British Government to the Government of France.

It proclaims the indissoluble union of the peoples of the two countries, and states: "We cannot measure the various forms of tribulation which will fall on our peoples in the near future. We are sure the ordeal by fire will only fuse them together into an unconquerable whole. We renew our pledge to continue the struggle at all costs. We shall never turn from the conflict until France stands safe and erect in all her grandeur, until civilization is free from the nightmare of Nazism."

U.S. PEOPLE MOVED

WASHINGTON, June 14—There are signs that the people of this country have been deeply moved by France's appeal to President Roosevelt. Americans throughout the United States are asking themselves in what fresh ways the United States can give additional help.

Senator Pepper, a New Dealer who has repeatedly tried to persuade the Senate to vote that army and navy planes be sent to the Allies in large numbers, said, "It seems to me, if the people had the opportunity to pass on it today they would grant the aid Reynaud asks. It is unthinkable that we stand here and do nothing. I think we should immediately redouble our efforts to send more planes, more ships and more arms and ammunition."

TRIBUTE TO REYNAUD

WELLINGTON, June 14—The New Zealand Prime Minister has cabled to Premier Reynaud a tribute to the heroic resistance of the French, and has reaffirmed New Zealand's decision to pursue the conflict until victory is obtained.

ENDORSES MESSAGE

MELBOURNE, June 14—Australia Premier Menzies, has cabled to French Premier, Paul Reynaud, endorsing the British Government's message to France and assuring him of the fullest support of Australia.

SCHARNHORST HIT

LONDON, June 14—The Admiralty communique tonight announced that aircraft of the Fleet Air Arm carried out an attack on German naval units off Trondheim fjord early yesterday morning. Information is now received that one hit was obtained with a heavy bomb on the German battleship Scharnhorst 26,000 tons. Possibly a second hit was also registered on the battlesnip.

British Police Captured

PRETORIA, June 14—It is learned here that the Italians have captured and imprisoned two British senior police officials and an army sergeant. They were walking on the Kenya side of the frontier on Monday a few hours before the Italian declaration of war.

OCCUPY TANGIER

TANGIER, June 14—In reported agreement with France and the Sultan of Morocco, 1,200 Spanish Moroccan troops today occupied Tangier international zone to "guarantee preservation of its neutrality."

AIRMAN HONORED

LONDON, June 14—A Dominion airman appearing in the most recent list of decorations is Pilot Officer W. L. McKnight who was born at Edmonton, Alberta, and receives the Distinguished Flying Cross for exceptional skill and courage which he has consistently shown. An example is his destruction of enemy aircraft after a long chase over hostile territory.

Another recipient of this distinction is a South African from Durban, Flying Officer R. N. Selley, who was captain of one flight of three aircraft engaged in protecting shipping evacuating the British Expeditionary Force.

BAN LIFTED

WASHINGTON, June 13—A Vatican City message states that the ban imposed by the Italian Government on the Osservatore Romano was lifted this afternoon after the newspaper had agreed to omit war news of every kind. Earlier the authorities had stated that the paper could not circulate if it continued to publish British and French communiques as well as the Italian.

LOYALTY DEMONSTRATED

LONDON, June 14—The loyalty of the British Colonies is further demonstrated in reports recently received here from Natal and Mauritius.

In Natal £50,000 has been subscribed in five days to speed the plane fund. The original aim was £40,000 in a month.

At Port Louis, Mauritius, the Legislative Council has approved a gift of £150,000 to the British Imperial Government from the Colony's reserve fund and has also placed the balance of the fund, amounting to £500,000, at the disposal of the Imperial Government when required.

Bucharest Orders Rumanian Ships to Return Home

Domei Tsushin

BUCHAREST, June 12—The Government, seeking to safeguard its shipping now on the high seas, in a decree today, ordered the suspension of all Rumanian shipping in the Black Sea and the Mediterranean. All vessels in foreign waters also were instructed to return to home ports immediately.

Official quarters said that war conditions in the Mediterranean made the order imperative, however, they did not explain the reason for the suspension of shipping in the Black Sea.

Ethiopian Mohammedans Offer To Fight with Italy

Domei Tsushin

ROME, June 12—Mohammedans in Ethiopia have asked the Italian authorities to allow them to have the "honor of fighting for Italy," according to reports reaching here from Addis Ababa.

Meanwhile, it is reported that the Albanian Premier, Sheket Verlaci, Secretary-General of the Albanian Fascist Party, Lieungen Jacomini, and the president of the Cooperative Fascist Supreme Council of Albania, Mr. Toci, today wired Premier Mussolini confirming their faith and devotion to Il Duce and Italy.

BROWNS DOWN NAT 7 TO 4; DODGERS LEAD

In American League, Boston Is Leading Followed by Cleveland

United Press

NEW YORK, June 10—The St Louis Browns moved up one notch today in the only game played in the American League, supplanting the Washington Senators for sixth place by trimming the Nats, 7-4.

Three hits, a walk and two costly errors clinched the game for the Browns in the seventh inning, when they chased five runs across the plate.

The Cleveland Indians were rained out in Boston and the Detroit Tigers were rained out in New York. The Chicago White Sox and Philadelphia Athletics postponed their game for a double header later in the season.

HALF A GAME

In the National League the pace-setting Brooklyn Dodgers picked up a half game on the idle Cincinnati Reds to cement their grip on the top rung. Victims of the Dodger bats today were the Pittsburgh Pirates, who succumbed by 8-7 in a slugging spree that saw both teams send a veritable parade of pitchers to the hill.

With the score standing at 7-7, Babe Phelps came to bat in the eighth inning with two out and Peewee Reese on first base. Phelps worked the count to 3 and 2 and then blasted a triple which caromed off the center field wall, scoring Reese with the game-winning tally.

The Boston Bees staged a track meet at the expense of the Cardinals, walloping the Gashouse crew by a score of 12-2.

The sole Card tally came in the sixth inning when Johnny Mize cracked out his 17th home run of the season with Slaughter aboard. Sullivan hurled excellent ball, and except for Mize's homer, never allowed the Cardinals to get into scoring position.

21 BASE HITS

The Bees actually iced the game in the third inning when two successive passes were followed by singles from the bats of Ross, Rowell and Lopez, enough to score four runs and chase Curt Davis from the mound. Duster Shoun replaced him and was pummelled mercilessly. In all the Bees collected a total of 21 basehits.

The New York Giants were rained out in Chicago. No other games were scheduled.

By scoring a touchdown through the air in the second quarter, the fleet-footed Meiji University team defeated Keio University for the championship of the Six-man football tournament Sunday night at the Meiji Jingu stadium.

Meiji defeated the Victor Club, while Keio set down both the Old Boys and Rikkyo to enter the finals.

The championship game was a nip and tuck affair with Meiji University possessing greater speed to conquer the Mita boys. In the second quarter with the ball on Keios' 30-yard line Jimmy Hamasaki faded back and threw a high floating pass into the waiting arms of Jimmy Izumi who had drifted into the end zone to make the catch. It was a well executed play and a nice catch by end Izumi to settle the game.

Keio thereafter threatened only once, in the fourth quarter, when they worked the ball to Meiji's 20-yard line, but the Meiji team intercepted a third down pass to end the threat.

It was a well played game with a clean cut victory for Meiji University.

In the semi-final the Old Boys' nearly upset the Keio six, when they took the lead through some fine line play by center Honda who blocked a punt for a touchdown to give his team a 6-0 lead. In the second half however the speed of the College boys brought about two touchdowns and a 14-8 victory.

The Fleet will begin three weeks of maneuvers on June 10 and later will spend at least two weeks at Pearl Harbor, it was announced.

During the maneuvers the Hawaiian detachment of the Navy will be temporarily abolished. Vessels of this detachment will participate in the maneuvers under the normal Fleet Command.

The maneuvers will be based at Lahaina Roads and will include extensive gunnery trials.

11,000 GERMANS NOW INTERNED IN ENGLAND

Britain Said Negotiating With America on Refugees And Enemy Aliens Issue

Reuter

LONDON, June 13—Replying to a debate in the House of Lords on Government measures to suppress "Fifth Column" activities, the Duke of Devonshire said he had been asked whether an approach had been made to America on the question of taking refugees or enemy aliens.

The Government is in touch with the United States on that and other problems, he said.

SHIPPING QUESTION

Shipping questions are involved, and events may take such a course that shipping may be wanted for other purposes than conveying refugees to America.

Dealing with the recent orders of the Home Office, the Duke of Devonshire declared that 11,000 Germans and Austrians are now interned, against 2,800 on May 11.

It would not be in the interests of the public, he concluded, for him to disclose other steps taken against "Fifth Column" interests.

HOME DEFENSE

Reuter

LONDON, June 13—A striking indication of the large-scale precautionary measures for Home Defense was given by Sir John Anderson, the Home Secretary and Minister of Home Security, in the course of a debate in the House of Commons yesterday.

The issue of the necessary equipment for the civil defense services was, he said, complete.

Over 60,000,000 respirators, including children's respirators, and babies' helmets had been issued, as well as 3,000,000 steel helmets, and 1,500,000 oil-skin suits; while the number of stirrup pumps issued ran into six figures.

The total establishment of civil defense personnel, paid and unpaid, was just short of 1,000,000. Fire services accounted for an additional 200,000, police 60,000, and the personnel, in connection with health and casualty services, numbered over 250,000, while for evacuation services, the total numbers enrolled, and kept available, amounted to 100,000.

CIVIL DEFENSE

Sir John mentioned the whole subject of civil defense had taken a new turn because they had now to consider bombing attacks, invasions and parachute attacks, for which they must be prepared.

There had been the fullest collaboration between the military and civil authorities, and the Home Secretary said that he felt sure the civil defense organization now established would make a notable contribution to the cooperative effort now called for.

The Lord Privy Seal, Major C. R. Attlee, suggested that the debate should be continued in secret, but after various views had been expressed, it was decided to continue the discussion in public.

Canadian Motor Plants To Make War Equipment

Reuter

OTTAWA, June 7—The Minister of Munitions stated the Canadian motor industry is in a position to begin immediate replacement of vast quantities of supplies and mechanized transport lost by the British Expeditionary Force in Flanders, and conversations on the subject are now taking plane with the British Government.

He estimated that Canadian factories could produce equipment like gun carriers, trucks and other vehicles at the rate of 60,000 yearly.

Germany to Slaughter 3,000,000 Dogs for Food

Reuter

LONDON, June 13—Because of the food situation, an order has been issued in Germany for the destruction of all dogs, except those used for military purposes, it is learned in London.

About 3,000,000 dogs will be slaughtered.

Canadian Golf Dates Announced

Reuter

TORONTO, June 6—Dates for the Canadian Open golf championship at the Scarboro Golf and Country Club, Toronto, were announced as August 15 to 17, by the Royal Canadian Golf Association.

The Ontario Open will be played on August the 8 and 9, at Erie Downs, Fort Erie, Ontario.

GERMAN INVASION OF URUGUAY FEARED

Agents Active on Frontier, Reports New York Times

Reuter

NEW YORK, June 6—Framework of a Nazi organization in Uruguay indicates that German leaders are working carefully and efficiently on an international plan for eventual invasion of Uruguay with assistance of Nazi groups in Argentine and Brazil, according to a dispatch from Montevideo to the New York Times.

This is the supposition from comings and goings of Nazi agents across the frontier. Documents, maps and photographs found on several arrested persons are concrete circumstantial evidence.

The Nazi aggregation in Uruguay is based on "stutzpunkts" (supporting points) at highly strategical centers such as railway stations and airdromes in frontier cities facing a parallel set of "stutzpunkts" in the bordering republic.

One of the chief of these is Penaranda, a post outside Montevideo.

Some diplomatic observers consider that seizure of Uruguay is planned for the near future in an effort, to control one of Europe's principal sources of food supplies. Meanwhile, the correspondent concludes, in Santiago, Chile, alarm concerning Fifth Column activities there is rising and Government deputies declare these activities are now obvious.

U.S. Golf Amateurs Must 'Watch Step'

Reuter

NEW YORK, June 6—Harold W. Pierce, president of the United States Golf Association, has warned the nation's amateur golfers that the U.S.G.A. is planning a stricter application of the amateur rule in future.

He stated that the U.S.G.A. would be willing to make an example of any prominent player found overstepping the bounds of amateur conduct. He did not mention any names, but it was assumed that he referred to various amateurs who have made a tour of the summer and winter circuits with the professionals.

He said that the U.S.G.A. did not mean to go out of its way to do any detective work, but, he added, he would welcome the chance to air any flagrant violations by a leading amateur so that such a case would serve as a "horrible example" for the rest of the country's amateurs. The particular section of the amateur code to which he referred was that dealing with the payment of expense money.

U.S. Commodity Index Down

United Press

WASHINGTON, June 1—The Department of Labor's all commodity index of wholesale prices during the week ended May 24, declined 7 percent to 77.8 percent of the 1926 average. This compared to 78.5 percent for the week ended May 11 and 75.2 percent for the corresponding week of 1939.

Brokerage Loans Down

NEW YORK, June 7—The Federal Reserve System announced today that brokerage loans last week totaled $312,000,000 $38,000,000 less than the previous week's total and $241,000,000 less than the total for the corresponding week in 1939.

5TH COLUMN WATCH ORDERED FOR HAWAII

Army and Navy Intelligence Of America Said Enlarged

United Press

WASHINGTON, June 4—Special precautions have been ordered taken in Hawaii, the Philippines, Panama and Puerto Rico in view of the national concern over fifth column activities, it was reliably reported here last night.

Informed sources said the Army and Navy intelligence, including the staff assigned to the off-shore areas, has been enlarged, while the Federal Bureau of Investigation will closely cooperate with the Intelligence Service.

Japanese activities are likely to come under closer scrutiny than ever before, although Senator William King, a member of the Senate Insular Affairs Committee, warned against over-zealous activity in which loyal Japanese-American citizens might suffer.

Meanwhile, naval officials said they had no news regarding any fleet movement or of the reported training flight of naval aircraft from Hawaii to Manila. The Fleet will remain in Honolulu, as far as is known here, it was said.

There was no official statement regarding the reported training flight, but it was expected here that naval planes at Manila would return to Honolulu for a routine overhaul and check-up. Hence, some planes might be sent as replacements, but no increase in Far Eastern forces is contemplated, naval sources said.

Millions Will Perish In Poland Unless Food Sent, Says Hoover

Reuter

NEW YORK, June 6—The starving populace of Poland needs between $30,000,000 and $40,000,000 worth of food immediately, declared Herbert Hoover, at a mass meeting of 3,000 Polish-Americans held in honor of General Josef Haller, minister without portfolio of the exiled Polish Government.

"Slowly the food supplies of Poland diminish. Russia has robbed the supplies from the great agricultural areas around the east of Poland. The great industrial centers must have a start from abroad or millions will perish," Mr. Hoover said. "10 or 15 million persons are in jeopardy of famine at this moment," he went on. "We are hoping that Congress will appropriate some of the surplus foodstuffs which will otherwise rot in this country. Surely it is characteristic of a great and generous people to send it to a starving people rather than sell it in the European market. Be assured we will do all in our power to bring help in this desperate need."

General Haller thanked Mr. Hoover for what he was doing for Poland. In Poland, he said, millions of poor men, women and children blessed his name.

Rothermere in Quebec

United Press

QUEBEC, June 3—Lord Rothermere, British newspaper owner, arrived here on a special Government mission yesterday.

Although the mission is known to be connected with the European War, details of Lord Rothermere's visit are being kept secret.

The purpose of the mission, it is understood, is to speed up the delivery of warplanes to the Allies by Canada and the United States. Lord Rothermere proceeded to New York last night.

Baruch Advocates U.S. Capture Of South American Markets

United Press

NEW YORK, June 4—Bernard M. Baruch, former chairman of the War Industries Board, in a statement to the press yesterday, urged the United States to embark on a program aimed at capturing and holding Latin American markets against prospective inroads by Germany.

The United States should resort to barter agreements, grant credits, or even subsidize exporters if necessary to capture South American markets, he said.

He indicated he did not believe the Allied cause was lost yet. He said the possibility of a German victory must now be reckoned with and warned that the immediate consequences of such a victory would be an economic drive in the Western Hemisphere, which would pave the way later for economic penetration.

Britain Said Unconquerable By The Charlotte Observer

Reuter

LONDON, June 7—An American newspaper, the Charlotte Observer, states: "A Government and people which can do what Great Britain has just accomplished, in extricating a large proportion of a trapped army in Flanders, and transporting it across the English Channel, in spite of the deadly and unrelenting fire of German attackers, must establish itself in the fair mind of the world as being unconquerable," according to a special commentary issued here.

"Nations like this," the paper adds, "are never conquered."

TIGERS MOVING UP RAPIDLY; YANKEES WIN

In National League; New York Giants Threatening Cincinnati

United Press

NEW YORK, June 11—With the season now one-third gone, the Detroit Tigers began making their bid felt today by moving into second place in the American League at the expense of the Cleveland Indians, only a short distance behind the league-leading Boston Red Sox, who thus far have given no signs of cracking under the tremendous strain of this season's hot race—the closest in seven years.

The New York Yankees provided the Tigers with their stepping-stone to the runner-up position, bowing by a score of 6-1, chiefly because of home runs by Dick Bartell, Charlie Gerhinger and Bruce Campbell, all with men on the sacks.

9-2 VICTORY

The Boston Red Sox, meanwhile, were taking the measure of the Cleveland Indians by a convincing 9-2 score. Lou Finney paced the Beantown attack with four hits in five trips scoring three runs himself. Ted Williams was responsible for four more runs with a triple and a homer, while the final two were scored when Joe Cronin connected for a home run with one aboard.

The St. Louis Browns cemented their hold on sixth place by defeating the Washington Senators, 5-2 icing the game in the seventh inning with a rally that produced all five of their runs on a walk, an error, two stolen bases, three singles and a climaxing double by Chet Laabs.

In the National League, the New York Giants moved threateningly close to the second place Cincinnati Reds, who lost to the Philadelphia Phillies while the Giants were bagging both ends of a double header from the Chicago Cubs.

In the opening game, the Giants permitted no Cub to advance past second base with the exception of Nicholson, who got to third in the fourth inning. Ott tripled in the sixth with the bases loaded, scoring a moment later on Moore's single for the only runs of the game. The final score was 4-0.

HOME RUN HIT

A home run in the eighth inning by Moore enabled the Giants to bag the nightcap by 3-1.

The Reds bowed to the Phils, 4-1, in the only other contest, when an error by McCormick was followed by a walk and doubles by May and Bragan which broke up a 1-1 tie and gave the Quakers victory.

Boston at St. Louis and Brooklyn at Pittsburgh were rained out.

Pacific Cable Isle Armed; Was Raided in Last War

Reuter

HONOLULU, June 9—Fanning Island, an important cable station in the Pacific which was raided by a German warship in the last war, now has a defense force of 30 British soldiers, it has been reported here.

The news was brought here by sailors aboard the little cable ship Dickenson, which serves the island with supplies from Honolulu.

The cable station was wrecked by the German raiding party and the cables were cut.

MUST HALT GESTURES, LINDBERGH DECLARES

Allied Request Cannot Be Met, Says Noted Airman

Domei Tsushin

WASHINGTON, June 15—Colonel Charles Lindbergh, in a nationwide radio speech, declared today that the United States must cease "these gestures with an empty gun" which threaten to involve the United States in the European war.

He said the cooperation of all American countries is needed to build up an impregnable defense for the United States. The Government, he said, must "insist on military bases being placed wherever they are needed for the safety of the United States, regardless of who owns the territory involved."

The persistent requests for aid from the Allies cannot be answered because the United States would need months of preparation to train and equip even a small army, he said.

If Germany wins Europe will be dominated by "the strongest military nation the world has ever known," and if the United States should ever enter into war "we must be prepared to attack that nation," he said.

Concluding, he warned that American dabbling in European affairs can only lead to failure as in the past.

King Opens Church House Behind Westminster Abbey

Reuter

LONDON, June 10—The King, as head of the Church of England, opened a new church house in the Dean's yard behind Westminster Abbey this afternoon.

The King wore the uniform of a Field Marshal.

Accompanied by the Queen he was received by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York.

The building cost £55,000.

In declaring it open, the King recalled that the foundation stone was laid three years ago by Queen Mary, and said: "I feel confident that the Church will endeavor in these anxious days to inspire the people with calmness and courage."

In welcoming the King, the Archbishop of Canterbury said: "We pray that Your Majesties may soon, in the providence of God, rejoice in victory, on which the salvation of the whole world depends with the attainment of just and lasting peace."

Information Ministry Denies Duke of Windsor Resigned

United Press

LONDON, June 9—The Ministry of Information yesterday said the report that the Duke of Windsor had resigned his military appointment was unfounded.

The Duke "is paying a visit to French troops on the Italian border and will shortly return to headquarters and the mission to which he is attached," the Ministry said.

The Duke is serving as liaison officer between the British and French forces in France.

F.C.C. Bands Amateur Broadcasting

United Press

WASHINGTON, June 8—The Federal Communications Commission yesterday banned virtually all amateur radio broadcasting from portable stations.

Earlier this week amateur broadcasters were prohibited from talking with foreign radiomen. Both regulations, it was believed, were moves to prevent fifth column activity in the United States.

TWO NEW HIGHWAYS TO LINK KOBE AND OSAKA; SURVEY FINISHED

By SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

KOBE, June 17—The routes for the two new arterial highways to further link Osaka and Kobe in the very near future have been definitely decided, following extensive survey work along the lines last Wednesday. It was simultaneously decided that the highway running along the hills behind Kobe would be an elevated road and that the other running along the Hanshin coast, a highway running on ground level, passing under water in three different sections.

The elevated highway, it is understood, will run from Sannomiya Station of the Government railway line, between the Shosen and Hankyu lines to a point just beyond Kano-cho 3-chome. It will there swerve its otherwise straight course, pass outside the Hankyu line on the hillside, a run through a point near Suita. It will thence run directly into Osaka, terminating at Kita-minato Ohashi on Osaka's highway No. 37.

The highway will present a somewhat "double-decked" effect for the high-speed lane. The low-speed lane and side-walk are to be on the ground directly under the high-speed lane. The total width is to be 58 meters, the widest road ever constructed in Japan. It is understood that the feasibility of running the section of the Hankyu Electric between Nishinomiya-Kitaguchi and Osaka on the speed lane is under serious consideration.

The highway to run along the coastline will be something of a novelty in the way of highways in Japan for it is to run submarine in three sections: under the Bay of Amagasaki, under the Kansaki and Ajikawa rivers. The highway which is to be 40 meters wide will begin on Kobe's highway No. 36 in front of the Commerce and Industry building and will hug the coast into Osaka where it will terminate at Umeda.

Mr. Nakajima, civil engineer of the Home Office says that there are considerable difficulties which will have to be ironed out before actual construction work on the giant projects can begin. He says, however, that in view of the lack of serious complications on the hill highway it will, in most probability, be begun first. The coast highway still presents considerable complications, he says.

It is understood that a number of surveying expeditions will be conducted before the final plans for the highways themselves are to be submitted to the highway committee sometime during the middle part of the coming month.

HITLER'S PEACE TERMS VEILED IN INTERVIEW

'Reciprocal Monroe Doctrine' Aim Of Fuehrer, He Tells Correspondent

The peace terms which Chancellor Adolf Hitler—in concert with Italy's Il Duce,—may lay down to France, may be veiled in the historic interview the Fuehrer gave Karl von Wiegand, International News Correspondent last Friday.

It not only was the first interview Chancellor Hitler granted a newspaperman since World War II began, but the first given to the press in several years.

It can safely be supposed that Chancellor Hitler had other aims in mind than merely satisfying a correspondent's dream when he gave the interview. Reading between the lines one might see outlined the demands which will be imposed on France—and Britain too if Germany succeeds in humbling Britain.

The complete text of the interview follows:

RECIPROCAL MONROE DOCTRINE

"The Americas to the Americans, Europe to the European."

This reciprocal basic Monroe doctrine, mutually observed, declared Adolf Hitler to me today, not only would insure peace for all times between the old and new world, but would be a most ideal foundation, for the peace of the whole world. In a caustic language, with a scorn of indignation, he denounced "the lies," that he has or ever has had in "dream or thought" played with the faintest idea of interfering in the Western Hemisphere by any manner. He characterized Americas fears of him or Germany as most flattering but "childish and grotesque" and the whole idea of the possibility of an invasion of the United States from Europe by sea, air or a "mythical fifth column" as "fantastic."

With his great German war-machine whose amazing perfection of organization, its strength and strategical and technical leadership has startled the world, now at the edge of Paris, Hitler told me he had no intention of attacking the beautiful French capital if it "remains an open city like Brussels was."

WON'T SMASH BRITAIN

Vehemently the Fuehrer denied he ever had or even now has as a war-aim the "smashing of the British Empire," but with bitter anger he declared," We will destroy those men who are destroying that Empire."

He spoke most warmly of Mussolini and welcomed Italy's entrance in "comradeship of arms."

This was the first interview Hitler granted during this war, in fact the first interview in years. It might be more impressive to dateline this "Grand Headquarters of the Fuehrer," but it would not be quite truthful. The Fuehrer's very mobile headquarters behind his fast steamroller armies is kept fairly secret. Our rendezvous was a beautiful little chateau of a Belgian nobleman in a lovely park with birds singing cheerily in the trees. It is an axiom of war that places on the front or near it should not be mentioned.

Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrops personal plane picked me up at the airport of the city where the sirens' deep baying and the anti-aircraft guns' dull explosions, which sounded like bombs, awakened me after midnight, but I was so tired that I did not care what happened and went asleep again. We landed in a field. Then hours of motoring in an open car under the blazing sun. The Foreign Minister received me in a large chateau, the headquarters of a Divisions General with a peppery name, just behind the left wing of the German front. Interesting hours of talk with the Foreign Minister, after lunch with him and general-staffers many miles motoring to the rendevous with the Fuehrer.

HITLER DASHES UP

Hitler dashed-up in a sixwheeler, an open car, sitting by the side of the chauffeur. A second car was following. Clicking heels, salutes, outstretched arms. Von Ribbentrop greeted him in the entrance. His face was smiling, his eyes beaming, uplit with the light of a man who knows he has won a great victory and has gone far, but with certain simplicity in manner he greeted me. Two years since our last talk had gone by. Suntanned, with high color on both cheeks, he looked healthier than for years. His slightly older face appeared somewhat heavier, beginning to show the marking of his character and of that extraordinary strength of will and determination that characterizes him.

With the portraits of Belgian and French beauties of days that never will return looking down on us, we sat in the drawingroom, Foreign-Minister von Ribbentrop, Doctor Dietrich, Minister Schmidt. The Fuehrer had insisted on formulating his replies to my questions in writing. These in hand, he discussed them for nearly one hour. He began with Americas attitude toward Germany. Hitlers attitude toward America:

TELLS ATTITUDE

"Germany is one of the few countries which hitherto refrained from interfering in any way in America." He wanted to remind me: "At no time has Germany had territorial or political interest on the American continent." Then raising his voice Hitler declared "nor has Germany any such interest now. Who ever states anything contrary is lying deliberately for some purpose. How the American continent shapes and leads its life is of no concern of mine and of no interest to Germany. And that, let me say, holds good not only for North America but equally so for South America. But let me observe this. I do not believe that a doctrine such as proclaimed by your President Monroe can be interpreted to have been or to be a unilateral claim to non-intervention. Actually the purpose of the Monroe doctrine, I believe, was not only conceived and proclaimed to prevent European countries from interfering in America's interests—which England with her great territorial and political interests in America keeps doing,—but likewise to restrain America from interfering or mixing in European affairs.

"George Washington's own warnings to the American people confirm the logic and reasonableness of such an interpretation. Therefore I say: 'America for the Americans, Europe for the Europeans.'

NOT INTERESTED

Asked, how he viewed Americas rearmament-program at this time as announced and advocated by Roosevelt, Hitler said:

"In answering that question I shall once more apply the Monroe doctrine and therefore refrain from expressing any opinion or views on the United States armament-program. America's arming is none of my business. I am in no way interested in it. I myself have been compelled to carry out the greatest armament-program the world ever saw so that I for one am in a position to distinguish very well indeed between colorful fabulations and real possibilities or practicabilities. There seem to be some fanciful views on that subject."

I tried to feel out the Fuehrer's opinion on America's war-material sales to the Allies.

"America's intervention in the European war in the way of mass-deliveries of aircraft and other war-materials cannot affect the outcome of this conflict," the Fuehrer declared with emphatic finality. "It is not necessary for me to give my reasons for this in detail. In the end reality will decide."

I touched upon the "fifth column," which seems to have fired the imagination in many countries. With a touch of sarcasm Hitler said:

SCORNS FIFTH COLUMN

"So-called fifth column conveys nothing because it does not exist except in the imagination of fantastic minds or as a phantom created by unscrupulous propaganda for obvious purposes. If incompetent governments drive their peoples into war and then experience pitiable collapse, it is understandable that they prefer to shift the responsibility elsewhere. The main-object of this propaganda-slogan is to find a collective term for an internal opposition which, of course, exists in all countries. That opposition has nothing whatever to do with Germany. On the contrary, it is composed either of extreme nationalists, internationally minded communists, pacifists and others opposed to war. Since the politicians of those countries are unable to deal with their opposition decently, they proceed by accusing those elements of high-treason, cloak illegal methods with patriotic arguments and motivate their action morally in the eyes of the world by applying the hair-raising term 'fifth column.' Our opponents are going to lose the war not because of any fifth column, but because they were led by corrupt, unscrupulous, brainless politicians. They are going to lose the war because their military organization is bad, their leadership and conduct of the war in many instances disastrous."

Again and again Hitler emphasized it was England that declared the war against Germany on "ridiculous stupid pretexts," adding "Germany will win the war because the German people know its cause is just, they know what they are fighting for, and because the German military organization and leadership are better We have the best army and the best equipment."

HARD TO REALIZE

It was indeed difficult for me to realize that I was sitting there with Europe's new Napoleon in statecraft and war and that this man, more simply attired than some of his staff, and who wore no shoulder straps, no insignia of rank, only the Iron Cross and Party Emblem, was changing the course of history and the destiny of this Continent. I asked him, if it was one of his aims to destroy the British Empire.

"It has never been my aim or intention to destroy the British Empire," the Fuehrer vigorously declared, "on the contrary just before the outbreak of this war which—I reiterate—was launched by Britain and France, I submitted proposals to the British Government wherein I went the length of offering the armed assistance of the Reich for safeguarding the British Empire. My offer was scorned. I had asked nothing of England beyond that Germany should be considered and treated as an equal, that England would protect the German coast if Germany became involved in a war and that I be given the German colonies. And I will get them too.

DENOUNCES CAPITALISTS

"It was declared and printed openly in London that National Socialism must be destroyed, Germany itself broken up, utterly disarmed and made powerless. Never have I voiced any such aims or intentions against Britain. When battle after battle went against England the rulers in London appealed to America with tears in their eyes declaring that Germany was menacing or seeking to break up the British Empire. One thing, it is true, is going to be destroyed, that is the capitalistic clique who were and still are prepared to sacrifice millions of human lives for their mean petty personal interests. And that, I am convinced, will not be done by me but by their own people."

The Fuehrer declared that this war will certainly scrap the British system of sea control as now exercised by England and that will be a great blessing to the world in the future.

"The freedom of the seas Germany has in mind is the absolutely indisputable right of all nonbelligerants to use the seas in trade between each other unconditionally and without being subject to any control by warring powers."

Hitler added that the laws of really effective blockade restricted to the coasts of the warring countries would not be affected by such a common sense change. The Fuehrer declared Germany has "neither territorial nor political interests in the Mediterranean. The German nation refuses to accept the conceptions whereby everybody is entitled or even bound to interfere everywhere and with everything.

WON'T INTRUDE

"If certain nations—Britain and France take the lead among them—see it fit to declare that they and they alone have interests all over the world, then this constitutes a claim to world domination. Awakening peoples will not tolerate that in the long run. Germany for one will not tolerate that other powers concern themselves with her living space. In return she will refrain from intruding outside her own vital sphere.

If, as has been the case, a British cabinet minister declares that England's frontier is the Rhine, this is really the limit both as regards stupidity and arrogance. It would hardly be more stupid for me to declare that Germany's frontier is the Mississippi or the Amazon or the Yangtze. Incidentally, we shall now settle this question of the Rhine frontier once and forever so that in future it is to be hoped that British prime ministers will not be liable to such geographical delusions."

DECLINES COMMENT

I asked the Fuehrer if he would not give me an outline or some idea of his concept of the peace to come. I had heard so much about the "revolutionary conception of peace" he had in mind and that the peace treaty would be very short. Hitler was disinclined to commit himself at this time.

He said "there is only one German peace aim and that is the establishment of peace. Let me remind you again that it was not Germany who declared war on England and France but that England and France declared war against Germany on a most ridiculous pretext. The principle on which peace is founded will however always be the realization of the fact that there can be no real peace unless the vital requirements of the great nations be duely respected and that only a perfect fool can believe that a super-Versailles could be an improvement on Versailles.

"In my opinion the most important peace aim is the elimination of those international cliques who live by inciting peoples to hatred and who seek to conceal or even redress the consequences of their inborn political inefficiency or their economic failure by resorting to war. I am aware of the fact that this aim cannot be reached by treaties alone but must come about by the dawning of reason within the nations. Inspite of all the prevailing hysteria and all the attempts to lead the world astray I still believe in this reason regardless of all fairytales, atrocity propaganda, Fifth Columns, 'parachute nuns,' and so forth. If the military defeat of Britain and France should bring about the victory of reason even in these countries the sacrifices of this war will perhaps not have been so futile for the future of the world as may now appear."

PARIS RETURNING TO NORMAL AFTER SHOCK OF NAZI ENTRY

By KEISHIRO IRIYE

Domei Tsushin

PARIS, June 17—Though the spacious boulevards of Paris swarm with new contingents of Nazi troops streaming into the city, life in the French capital is gradually returning to normal after the staggering shock of capitulation. Parisians experienced the initial touch of the German administrator today, when clocks were advanced one hour from yesterday in accordance with German Summer Time and a curfew was imposed between the hours 9 p.m. and 5 a.m.

It is only three days ago that Paris was declared an open city, and German troops began pouring into the city. The first contingent of Nazi forces swept into the streets of the capital at noon last Friday. Standing in the square, where the boulevards of Montparnasse and the Avenue du Maine converge, I saw them pass by—an endless stream composed of infantry, motorcycle, bicycle artillery and supply units.

MARCH IN ORDER

They marched in magnificent order. Some were smiling; others were smoking cigarettes. The soldiers manifested no intention of doing harm. Their attitude and behavior completely dispelled the feeling of tension among the watchers. I heard one of the crowd cry "heil".

Parisians gathered around German soldiers who had stopped to rest and chattered with them. Their conversation was amusing, a mixture of German, French and English given added effect with gestures. Some offered cigarettes to the soldiers, who thanked them cheerfully.

An elderly Frenchman, waving French paper money in his hands, asked a group of Nazi soldiers if the money would continue to remain legal tender. Hampered by language difficulties, neither side could understand each other. After complicated gestures, the soldiers grasped the meaning. Shaking their heads negatively, they gestured for the Frenchman to throw the money on the ground.

HEADQUARTERS FOUND

Leaving the soldiers, I left to ascertain the headquarters of the German Army of occupation. I found it at the Hotel Crillon, which was gaily beflagged with the Hagenkreutz. From the hotel, I entered the streets again and ran into more soldiers. I followed them down La Fayette Rue, past the Opera, through the streets to the Concorde and Invalides. It was a striking sight to see German troops marching around the tomb of Napoleon. At 4 p.m. two German planes landed in the Concorde square, immediately drawing a curious crowd of Parisians.

About an hour later, a Nazi military band goosestepped into position in front of the obelisk, which Napoleon brought back as a spoil from Egypt. With their brass instruments gleaming, they saluted the German commander standing on the reviewing stand. The parade finally ended at 5:35 p.m.

TAKE IT CALMLY

Parisians, amazed at the steady infiltration of German troops, now appear to have resigned themselves to fate. City authorities are giving wholehearted cooperation to the German Command and order is being maintained without a single incident so far. Though telephone service still is being limited to some extent, the majority of department stores now have placed posters on their doors announcing that they will open shortly.

The majority of shops, cafes and restaurants have begun to reopen. The magnificent cabaret and restaurants, Maxeville, on Rue Montmarte, which has been closed since last Tuesday, has reopened. Many German officers, as well as Frenchmen and women, can be seen lunching there.

About sixty Japanese, including Ken Harada, Counselor of the Japanese Embassy, are all safe at the Japanese Embassy here.

PONT LEVEQUE WINS DERBY

Famous English Race Run Off; Aga Khan's Turkan Wins Second

United Press

NEWMARKET, June 12—Fred Darling's Pont LeVeque today won the abbreviated, wartime version of the world famous English Derby from a crack field including some of the best horseflesh in England.

Aga Khan's Turkan was second and the favorite, Lord Derby's Lighthouse, was third. Turkan, three lengths behind Pont LeVeque, beat out Lighthouse for runner-up honors by a short head.

The winner paid off at the totes to the extent of 10-1, Turkan rewarded his backers with a dividend approximating 100-7 and Lighthouse paid 85-40.

Sixteen horses competed in the classic, but most of the field was beaten to a frazzle and strung out by the fast race set and maintained throughout the race. The time was 2 minutes 30.8 seconds. Tantiux led the field of 13 also-rans across the wires, 12 lengths behind the victor. Tantiux paid 11-2.

Romulus, a dark entry, broke away fast from the barrier to assume the lead at the start, followed by Pont LeVeque and Lighthouse. At the halfway mark Pont LeVeque took the lead with Lighthouse still clinging doggedly to his heels. The positions were maintained in this order up to and including the final sprint to the wire, although Turkan came up with a tremendous rush to just nose out Lighthouse by a short head, though never threatening Pont LeVeque.

It is noteworthy that Gordon Richards, who rates with Steve Donoghue as the greatest of English jockeys, was given his choice of mounts in Pont LeVeque and Tantiux. Richards, who has never won the Derby in all his brilliant career, chose Tantiux and gave Pont LeVeque to Sam Wragg.

INDIA STRENGTHENS DEFENSE SYSTEM

53,000 More Men Added To Present Regular Forces

Domei Tsushin

BOMBAY, June 17—The Government, in a communique this afternoon, disclosed that the India defense has been greatly strengthened and that an estimated expenditure of 200,000,000 rupees more than the present defense budget will be used to further augment India's defense.

The communique revealed that 53,000 men had been added to the present force of regulars, territorials and garrison troops at the end of April, while 100,000 more are expected to be raised. The Indian Navy also has been increased two and a half times, with the addition of many vessels. The air force also will be increased by four squadrons.

The purchase of equipment, particularly industrial machinery, machine tools, and airplanes from the United States will be speeded up. An increase will be made in the purchase of Indian products.

Meanwhile, the working committee of the All India Moslem League passed a resolution authorizing its president, Mahomed Ali Jinnah, to discuss with Viceroy Linlithgow how best to mobilize the country's resources for intensified war effort and the defense of India.

The committee is said to view with increasing alarm the growing menace of Nazi aggression and regards the Italian entry into the war as "unwarranted and unmoral."

HSINKING, June 18—Following the exchange of Ministers between Hungary and Manchoukuo, which is expected to be completed soon, it is generally believed here that negotiations will be opened between the two countries for economic cooperation.

Georg De Ghika, Hungarian Minister to Manchoukuo who is now staying in Tokyo, is expected to return to Manchoukuo within this year for conducting trade negotiations.

U.S. MAY DEPORT HARRY BRIDGES

Australian-Born Labor Leader Expulsion Decided By Lower House

United Press

WASHINGTON, June 14—The House of Representatives yesterday overwhelmingly approved a bill providing for the deportation of Harry Bridges, alien west coast labor leader.

Voting 332 to 42, the House gave its approval to the bill which based the deportation move against the Australian-born labor leader on charges that he was an alien unlawfully in the United States and a member of the Communist Party designing to overthrow the American form of Government.

GOING TO SENATE

The bill now goes to the Senate where a bitter debate is expected to precede the final vote. Indications today were that the Senate probably would approve the deportation measure by a small margin.

During the debate in the House yesterday Hamilton Fish, Republican of New York, denounced Bridges as a "symbol of the Fifth Column."

Earlier Vito Marcantonio, American Labor Representative of New York, opposed the bill. He said Congress was "setting itself up against one man" by considering the bill.

CHARGED BY FEDERAL

Bridges was tried by the Federal Government last year on charges of being an active member of the Communist Party. The charges were dismissed, however, after a special court failed to find definite proof that the labor leader was a Communist acting under orders from Moscow.

The Australian-born labor leader was the organizer of the west coast maritime unions which tied up shipping on the Pacific coast on numerous occasions in recent years. He later extended his control over other unions and became west coast leader of the Congress of Industrial Organizations which is headed by John L. Lewis.

Shanghai French Embassy May Go to Peking

Domei Tsushin

SHANGHAI, June 18—A rumor has it that the French Embassy which is now located within the French Consulate-General building here will shortly be removed to Peking.

The narrowness of the French Consulate-General building is said to be the reason for the removal of the French Embassy to Peking, but it is generally believed here that the removal has something to do with the European war situation.

Sir Archibald Kerr Clark Kerr, British Ambassador to China, arrived yesterday in Shanghai from Chungking via Hongkong on his way to Pehtaiho, northern extremity of Hopeh Province, where he is expected to spend his summer holidays. H. E. Henri Cosme, French Ambassador, who is now staying here is also expected to go to North China, following Sir Archibald Kerr.

Anglo-Thai Pact Terms Revealed in London

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, June 17—The text of the non-aggression pact signed between Great Britain and Thailand Wednesday was published tonight. It discloses that in addition to mutual respect for each other's integrity, the two signatories pledge, in case of one of the contracting parties being attacked by a third country, of non-assistance to that third country.

If one of the signatory parties commits an act of war or aggression against a third power, the other nation, according to the terms of the agreement, has the right to terminate without notice.

ANGLO-FRENCH UNION PLAN SAID OFFERED

Sent with Understanding That France Would Continue Present War

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, June 17—With the object of assisting France in her hour of distress and in the hope of encouraging France to continue resistance, the British Government yesterday offered France an opportunity to conclude a solemn act of union between the two countries, it was officially announced tonight. The draft declaration, communicated to the French Government by the British Ambassador, states: "The two governments declare that France and Britain shall no longer be two nations, but one Franco-British union."

Authoritative circles, commenting on the declaration of union, asserted that it was based on the understanding that France would continue the fight. However, as France has now sued for an armistice, it may be assumed that the plan has elapsed for the time being. It is possible, they admit, that if circumstances changed in some future time, consideration might be given to repeating the offer.

The text of the declaration, made public here tonight, read:

"At this most fateful moment in the history of the modern world, the Government of the United Kingdom and the French Republic make this declaration of indissoluble union and unyielding resolution in their common defense of justice and freedom against subjection to a system which reduces mankind to the life of robots and slaves.

"The two Governments declare France and Britain shall not longer be two, but one Franco-British union.

"The constitution of the union will provide for joint organs of defense, financial and economic policies. Every citizen of France will enjoy immediately the citizenship of Great Britain. Every British subject will become a citizen of France.

"Both countries will share the responsibility for the repair of devastation of war wherever it occurs in their territories and resources of both will be equally and as one applied to that purpose.

"During the war there shall be a single war cabinet and all the forces of Great Britain and France, whether of land, sea or air, shall be placed at its direction. It will govern from where it best can be used.

"The two parliaments will be formally associated. Nations of the British Empire are already forming new armies. France will keep her available forces in the field, on the sea and in the air.

"The Union appeals to the United States to fortify the economic resources of the Allies and bring her powerful material aid to a common cause. The Union will concentrate the whole of its energy against the power of the enemy no matter where the battle may be. And thus we shall conquer."

American Labor Leader Urges Aid to Allies

United Press

INDIANOPOLIS, June 13—William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor, here yesterday said American Labor would avoid strikes and do their utmost to increase production to aid the Allies.

Labor, he said, will "demand that the United States Government give the Allies all the help they need, even though materials are shipped without compensation.

"If Hitler takes Britain and secures the British Fleet," he warned, "the United States will be in the fight with Canada against Germany."

Italy's entry into the European war, he said, was "a dirty, reprehensible blow."

War Has Become Purely Anglo-Saxon, Says Gayda

Domei Tsushin

ROME, June 18—With the military collapse of France and with the British fighting with American material assistance the war has become "purely an Anglo-Saxon struggle against a large part of the world," Virginio Gayda declares editorially in the Giornale d'Italia.

England now remains alone to fight with its Imperial forces and with the aid of American materials and finances promised by the United States. The editorial says that the question now is how long and in what form will the war be carried on.

Anglo-American resistance, he writes, now assumes in substance the form of "Anglo-Saxon character against other parts of the world."

Washington Crew Wins Poughkeepsie Regatta

Domei Tsushin

POUGHKEEPSIE, New York, June 18—The University of Washington crew today won the National collegiate rowing championship at the annual Poughkeepsie regatta over the four-mile course in 22 minutes 42 seconds.

Coached by Al Ulbrickson, the Huskies' crew, Pacific Coast champions by virtue of a two-length victory over the California Bears at Lake Washington in April, swept the Hudson course with smooth, powerful strokes to defeat Cornell University by a half length.

Syracuse University's eight finished third ahead of the Navy carsmen from Annapolis, while California finished a poor fifth.

RED SOX UP LEAGUE LEAD

Cincinnati Reds Continue Leaderships in National League; Athletics Down

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, June 17—While the Boston Red Sox continued to increase their lead in the American League, the nip and tuck struggle between the Brooklyn Dodgers and the Cincinnati Reds in the National League for leadership continued. The Dodgers by winning four of their last six starts ousted the Reds from the top position. The Reds divided even in the six games played during the week.

The St. Louis Cardinals by winning four out of five games climbed into fifth place in the National League by displacing the Pirates who won two games and lost four and the Phillies who won only one game in six starts.

In the junior circuit, the Red Sox in a winning streak won five straight games in as many played, strengthened their hold on the coveted position. The Detroit Tigers, winning three out of five games, overtook the Indians who won four out of seven games played and climbed into second position. The Browns, playing an improved brand of ball, climbed into the fifth place just behind the Yankees who divided even in six games played, by winning four games in seven starts.

The Athletics losing six games of their seven starts sank into the cellar position.

The standings of teams in the National and American Leagues, including the results of today's games follow:

AMERICAS MAY NEED UNRIVALED U.S. NAVY, IF WORST COMES Uncle Sam Will Have to Carry Load If Trouble Breaks, Writer Thinks

By JOSEPH DRISCOLL

N.Y. Herald Tribune

WASHINGTON—When President Roosevelt told the Pan-American Union that the 21 Americas must be prepared to "meet force with force" if their peace should ever be challenged from abroad, he discreetly omitted to specify how the all-American force could be mobilized.

Nevertheless, the President, in his capacity as commander in chief of the United States Army and Navy, knows the answer to that question much better than most Americans—North, South and Central. For the obvious truth is that the United States military and naval forces would have to supply the lion's share of any successful defense if European or Asiatic warmongers should seek a trial of strength in the New World.

WORLD'S LARGEST NAVY IS AIM

Two days after the President envisioned meeting force with force, his friend and adviser, Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations, asked Congress to build the world's largest navy. He proposed that the American Navy, now second in tonnage to the British Navy, should be expanded by 25 per cent at a cost of $3,486,000,000. With completion of such an expansion, the fighting fleet could boast a total tonnage of close to 2,000,000.

Tangible evidence of the naval expansion already under way will come June 13 with the launching of the $65,000,000 U.S.S. North Carolina, the first American dreadnaught to be launched among ten new battleships projected to augment the nation's collection of aging capital ships which date from the World War and earlier.

No one denies that the world is witnessing its greatest naval construction. This competition was controlled by treaty during most of the years between the World War and the present conflict. In the last few years all these naval treaties have been torn up or allowed to expire painlessly under escape clauses. Most important to the United States was the abrogation of the 5-5-3 ratio which formerly prevailed among the navies of the United States, Great Britain and Japan. Japan, too proud to continue acceptance of her inferior rating, wants to match the Americans and British ship for ship if he resources permit.

EUROPE IS BUILDING FURIOUSLY

The leading naval powers of Europe—Britain, France, Italy and Germany—are building warships as fast as their yards can turn them out. On the other hand, they are trying to sink enemy ships even faster.

While the European powers engage in building and sinking, the United States is concentrating on the constructive side. Her only naval loss in recent years was an insignificant one, the sinking of the American gunboat Panay by the Japanese forces in China, an act which did not detract materially from the superiority of the American fleet over the Japanese. If the world naval race continues for several years, there appears to be no reason why the United States, with all its material and financial resources, should not achieve unquestioned supremacy on the seas, something it was about to do after the World War until naval building was halted by treaty.

Some may ask why the United States should have the largest navy in the world. Others may ask why it shouldn't. In the last war, part of the American Navy was used to convoy the transports bearing the men of the American Expeditionary Force to France. Part of it also was used to patrol the North Sea and the Irish Sea against German submarines.

AN EYE TO THE SOUTH

It is no secret that the American naval staff, in asking Congress for bigger and bigger fleets, is thinking about South America as well as Europe and Asia. There can be no doubt that any attempt by Germany, Japan or Italy to take over and colonize an inch of the Americas would be resisted to the best ability of the United States Navy and Air Corps.

Such resistance is implied in the terms of the Monroe Doctrine, which President Roosevelt has interpreted to protect all British, French and Dutch possessions in the Western Hemisphere. Since the United States is committed to the defense of all America against outside aggression, the problem arises as to whether she is to assume this burden all by herself or merely as the chief unit in an international navy or police force.

Winston Churchill, British Premier, is a great champion of international defense forces. The League of Nations' failure to enforce effective sanctions against aggressors was due, as Mr. Churchill saw it, to its lack of an army of its own and its independence upon the defense forces of various League members who found it difficult to agree. Being out of office then, Mr. Churchill employed his leisure to promote an organization which crusaded for an international police force to back up the League. Now that he is back in office, he is imposing "sanctions" against Germany with the assistance of the Anglo-French fleets.

Creation of a Pan-American navy has been suggested from time to time. President Lazaro Cardenas of Mexico, a country which long has been resentful of the Monroe Doctrine and the United States Navy, recommended a Pan-American navy in a speech delivered to the World Congress Against War in 1938. Nothing came from this, but the suggestion may be revived in view of President Roosevelt's fighting speech to the Pan-American Union and the disclosure of the Administration's ambition for a navy second to none.

If the United States Navy, either by itself or in association with the lesser fleets to the south, must defend the whole America, then it could very well use more naval bases. The nation's relations with Brazil, for example, are so friendly that, in the event of aggression from abroad, the United States and Brazilian navies probably would cooperate as closely as do the British and French navies, even to the use of ports and bases. Unfortunately, not all South American countries are as cordial to Washington as is Brazil.

When President Roosevelt cruised on the Tuscaloosa through the Panama Canal and out into the Pacific recently, there were rumors that he was interested in possible island naval bases off Costa Rica and Ecuador. The President afterward denied that the United States was interested in acquiring additional territory. This did not necessarily rule out the possibility that the country might make a friendly arrangement for development of naval bases for mutual protection. The position seems to be that if Central and South America will supply the bases, the United States will supply the ships, most of them, anyway.

The naval strength of the twenty-one Americas plus Canada, according to latest figures, is:

Battleships	24
Cruisers	54
Destroyers	283
Submarines	126

The United States has seven fighting vessels for every one possessed by her American neighbors. Two-thirds of the Latin-American countries have no navy. Others have antique warships, of the vintage of the Spanish-American war.

In the matter of warplanes, the United States ratio is nearly ten to one, although exact figures are unavailable.

From all this it may be seen that the United States Navy and Air Corps will have a lot of territory to cover if ever the nation should have to "meet force with force."

U. S. AUTO FATALITIES RISING SINCE JANUARY

N.Y. Times

Automobile fatalities, which reached a peak of 39,643 in 1937 and were reduced to 32,100 last year, show a "general upward trend" in the first quarter of this year, the Federated Safety Councils of America pointed out recently in an appeal to the police and courts throughout the country to "stiffen up on traffic enforcement."

The call for nation-wide traffic law enforcement was issued following a session of the councils, made up of twenty-five city and State safety council managers, which met concurrently with the annual convention of the Greater New York Safety Council in the Hotel Pennsylvania.

The federation called attention to the increase in traffic deaths, "particularly in urban areas," and made a point of the need for "greater control at crossing." It also suggested courses in courtesy for "impatient motorists."

Carl L. Smith, president of the federation and managing director of the Cleveland Safety Council, reported to the managers that a three-year survey in one large American city showed that 27 per cent of all the motor vehicle accidents were caused by less than 1 per cent of the drivers involved in all traffic accidents. He stressed the importance of the problem of the "accident-prone" or "repeater" driver.

FOUR-POINT PROGRAM ADOPTED

A four-point program was adopted calling for more regional conferences on safety, clinics for training safety council managers, more intensive educational campaigns for safety and special courses in accident-prevention methods for city and State officials.

Regulation of pedestrians on a scale equal to that of automobile drivers was urged in a session on pedestrian safety. Pedestrian regulation is being conducted in sixty-five cities, R. Earle Leonard, chief clerk of the Motor Vehicle Department of New Jersey, told the gathering.

Dallas, Texas, cut fatalities among Mexicans in that city 58 per cent in one year, Mr. Leonard said, by printing traffic signs in Spanish and enforcing rules strictly. On a national scale, he estimated, this would mean fewer than 6,000 pedestrian deaths annually instead of 12,600. He recommended a pedestrian control week simultaneously in every State.

ARGENTINA MAKING 'FLIVVER' PLANE FOR CIVILIANS; CHEAPER THAN AUTO

By ALFRED A. FRANTZ

N.Y. Times

BUENOS AIRES—The Fabrica Militar de Aviones, or Argentine Military Aircraft Factory, at Cordoba will put on the market within the next few months a "flivver" plane which will be sold to civilians for less than the cost of a light American automobile here, according to the Ministry of War.

The new type will retail for about 5,000 pesos, or $1,150, which is slightly less than the current cash price in Argentina of a two-door de luxe Ford with standard equipment. A similar plane imported from the United States would retail for about 9,000 pesos, or nearly double the new figure.

Two of the new machines were tested in March and actual production is expected to start this month. The first craft for sale to the general public will be ready in July or August according to army officials.

50-HORSEPOWER ENGINE

The new plane will be a two-place touring type, powered with a 50 h. p. engine and capable of a speed of about 87 miles an hour. It will use about 4¾ gallons of gasoline an hour and will have a cruising range of about 350 miles. In addition to the types it is making for military use, the Fabrica Militar plans eventually to turn out about ten such "flivver" planes a month, for it is taking an active interest in the promotion of civil aviation.

"Civil aviation in Argentina has been retarded markedly by the lack of inexpensive flying equipment," declares a leading amateur here. "Just as the government of the United States is now training 20,000 pilots a year through its colleges, Argentina is likewise anxious to create a large civil aviation reserve.

"The production of a small low-priced plane will be a great step in that direction," he continues. "Today only about 250 persons in the entire country own planes, while tens of thousands have automobiles. Amateur flyers in the past have had to depend upon air clubs for their equipment, but with cheap planes on the market many will buy their own, and civil aviation in Argentina will thus be given a decided impetus."

The army's interest in lowering the cost of planes and of flying for civilians is not new. One of its early projects in that field was the retailing of a Focke Wulf type plane to flyers at a price of 12,000 pesos, or about $2,750, even though the machine cost about 20,000 pesos to manufacture at Cordoba.

WILL BE USED FOR TRAINING

This price proving too high for Argentine amateurs, the army then supplied the Direccion General de Aeronautica Civil, corresponding to the CAA in the United States, with a number of Focke Wulfs for civilian use. These were produced at the Fabrica Militar and distributed by the Direccion to air clubs throughout Argentina. More than seventy planes were thus given to various clubs for use in training pilots.

These gifts led, however, to a serious dilemma. Many young men of small income joined the clubs, learned to fly with free government equipment, and as soon as they became pilots found themselves handicapped by the lack of planes. They could use the club equipment only a limited amount of time, and they could not possibly afford to buy machines of their own. As a consequence, an American aviator here believes that between 30 and 40 per cent of the pilots, considered reservists today, are inactive and would need further training before flying again. The manufacture of a cheap plane will, in part, it is believed, remedy this situation.

WIDOW OF FAMED SURGEON NAMED 'AMERICAN MOTHER' FOR 1940

N.Y. Times

Mrs. Edith Graham Mayo of Rochester, Minn., widow of the famous surgeon, Dr. Charles H. Mayo, who founded the Mayo Clinic, was selected recently by the American Mothers' Committee of the Golden Rule Foundation as "The American Mother for 1940."

Mrs. Mayo, who was formerly a nurse, has five living children, two foster children and twelve grandchildren. She was the first president of the Civic League in Rochester and active in promotion of the Young Women's Christian Association in that city.

She participated in a program of the Golden Rule Foundation on May 12 in celebration of Mother's Day in New York City.

The selection of Mrs. Mayo was announced by the American Mothers Committee of the Golden Rule Foundation. The committee, which is composed of about fifty men and women, adopted a resolution suggesting that the celebration of Mother's Day this year be used to direct the attention of the public to the sufferings of under-privileged mothers and children in this country and "to the privations and sufferings of millions of war orphans, mothers and other children who have been rendered homeless and destitute by the vicissitudes of wars."

Mrs. Mayo was born in Calmar Township, six and a half miles northwest of Rochester, and studied nursing at the Woman's Hospital in Chicago. She was married to Dr. Mayo in 1893, four years after the founding of the Mayo Clinic by Dr. Mayo with his father and brother. As the clinic became established Mrs. Mayo founded the Rochester Magazine Club for the wives of doctors at the clinic and the Mayo Clinic Women's Club for girls employed at the clinic.

Mrs. Mayo's husband died in 1939. A son, Dr. Charles W. Mayo, is now a practicing physician and surgeon at the clinic, and two daughters are married to surgeons. A sixth child, Dr. Joseph G. Mayo, who was a consultant in medicine at the clinic, was killed in an accident in 1936.

Candidates for the American Mother are nominated each year on the qualifications of being a successful mother, embodying "traits most highly regarded in mothers" and possessing "a sense of social and world relationships."

TIGERS TAKE DOUBLE HEADER; BEHIND BOSTON

St. Louis Browns Beat Red Sox, 6-4; Chicago White Sox Defeat Yankees

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, June 19—The Detroit Tigers began making the weight of their menace really felt today by sweeping both ends of a double header from the Philadelphia Athletics as the pace-setting Boston Red Sox dropped a game to the lowly St. Louis Browns.

The Tigers now trail the Beantowners by only a half game.

Sheer power won each game for the Tigers. In the opener, Hank Greenberg came through with his sixth home run of the season to win the game in the tenth inning after Pinky Higgins had blasted a home run with McCosky on base in the ninth to tie the score.

TIGER VICTORY

In the nightcap, McCosky was again prominent in the Tiger victory, along with Tebbetts. Each registered three hits to pace a 12-hit attack and lead the Bengals to a 9-4 victory.

Hal Trosky took hold of one of Chase's fast balls in the third inning to clout a home run with two aboard and set the state for a 4-1 victory for the Cleveland Indians over the Washington Senators, now decorating the cellar, the Nats have apparently completely disintegrated after a strong start.

The St. Louis Browns, outhit and outfielded, nevertheless managed to keep pace with the Chicago White Sox by flattening the Boston Red Sox, 6-4, when successive singles in the eighth inning by Berardino, Heffner and Swift drove the two winning runs across the plate.

BEAT N.Y. YANKEES

The Chicago White Sox defeated the New York Yankees by 1-0 in what was easily the best game of the day. A pitcher's duel for eight innings, the game finally went to the Hose in the ninth when Joe Kuhel walked, stole second and scored on Luke Appling's sharp single to center.

In the National League, the Pittsburgh Pirates regained sixth place by defeating the Boston Bees, 5-1. Three runs came across the rubber in the second inning when two singles and a walk were followed by a double to left center.

Brooklyn and St. Louis will play tonight. Other teams were not scheduled.

BALKANS CONCERNED OVER AXIS VICTORY

Imminent Turn-About Seen By Turkey, Rumania, Jugoslavia

Domei Tsushin

ROME, June 20—Prospects of a possible Italo-German victory in the European war is causing confusion among the Balkan countries, especially Turkey, Rumania and Jugoslavia, which had been given huge gold loans by Great Britain and France to build up their defenses against the Axis powers, it is reported here tonight. An imminent turn-about in the political stand of the three Powers is predicted here.

Turkey assertedly now considers her commitments to the Allies as a "dead letter" because France has sued for peace without consulting Turkey, and now is anxious to harmonize Turkish policy with the Soviet Union.

In Jugoslavia where the present Government had imprisoned and then released the pro-Axis former Premier Milan Stoyadinovitch, there are strong rumors that a Cabinet reshuffle is imminent, which means popular sentiment wants the Government to be lined up on the winning side.

Public opinion in Rumania is said to favor a critical change in the Government's attitude.

Germany and Italy are now concentrating all their political and diplomatic activities elsewhere now but the time is coming when those with anti-Axis sympathies will be called to account.

Bridges Friends Complain

United Press

SAN FRANCISCO, June 15—The Bridges Defense Committee, organized to defend Harry Bridges, alien labor leader, issued a statement last night charging that the deportation bill passed by the House of Representatives in Washington on Thursday was a revival of the Bill of Attainder.

Referring to the House bill, which provides for the deportation of Bridges, the secretary of the defense group, E. E. Ward, said the House of Representatives "leaped backward to 17th Century England" in approving the bill.

Roosevelt Approves Basis For Pan-American Unity

Domei Tsushin

WASHINGTON, June 20—President Roosevelt, bringing closer to realization his plan of setting up economic solidarity among the American republics, today approved a report designed to provide a working basis for Pan-American economic unity.

The report provides for a broad program to centralize exports of the Western Hemisphere in one agency representing all countries.

Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, meanwhile, commenting on reports that Mexico had asked the United States to provide credits and to sent army officers to build up Mexican defense, said that the United States is ready to give all possible aid. However he revealed that such a request had not yet been received by the State Department.

U.S. CITIZENS READY TO FIGHT FIFTH COLUMN

Private Organizations Start Campaign Against Sabotage of Industries

By JOE ALEX MORRIS

United Press

NEW YORK, June 17—Preparedness against Fifth Column penetration of the United States and sabotage of its vital industries and utilities has been undertaken on a large and growing scale by private organizations, Great War Veterans' groups, States and Municipalities, a United Press survey disclosed today.

The national trend indicated increasing surveillance of aliens. There were isolated instances of hysteria, primarily among activities of private, unofficial groups.

A survey showed the following developments in several states:

Pennsylvania—Activity appeared greatest in this mining, industrial state. Special guards watch some industrial plants, particularly steel mills, railroad bridges and tunnels. Loitering and use of cameras around railroad property is forbidden, one official said. At Uniontown, the district attorney, Vance Cottom, asked residents to provide him with "a list of known radicals." Duquesne City authorities guarded their water supply.

Major-General Edward Martin, adjutant general of Pennsylvania and commander of the 28th Division, National Guard, said Guardsmen plan no unusual activity but reported that the G-2 Intelligence Section, whose personnel and activities are known only to him and the War Department, have subversive activities under surveillance the year around.

Dr. Arthur P. Keegan, chief police surgeon of Philadelphia, said he would submit to the War Department and the Dies Committee a proposal of organization of a "Sixth Column" composed of war veterans, second grade police and firemen under supervision of retired high ranking Army, Navy and Marine Corps officers.

STUDY DEFENSES

The One Hundred Club started study of defense needs in the Philadelphia area. The president, William B. F. Koelle, named a committee to confer with authorities on highways, aviation, and mobilization for evacuation and protection of industry.

Two anti-parachutist legions, including the first organized in the United States, were formed in the Pittsburgh district.

The Pittsburgh chapter of the Veterans of Foreign Wars organized a "Minute Man" division to prevent sabotage.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation surveyed industry in the Pittsburgh steel district to plan the guarding of objectives of saboteurs and to spot possible trouble makers. The F. B. I. asked industrialists what points in their plants were most vulnerable, what were the bottlenecks of production whose disruption would suspend operations, the possibility of poisoning the plant's water supply, whether inflammables were stored, and whether they employed persons whose tendencies are inimical to the interests of the country. Manufacturers denied that internal espionage systems have been set up but admitted that possibly dangerous employes are being watched.

PROBING FIFTH COLUMNS

Edward R. Stirling, state commander of the American Legion, said war veterans are investigating Fifth Column activities in Pennsylvania and are relaying their information to the F. B. I. He denied a "witch hunt" was in progress.

New York—The most extraordinary of the precautionary measures was undertaken here. New York and New Jersey representatives of the National Legion of the Mothers of America planned to have 10,000,000 rifle-toting mothers ready by July 1 "to combat any parachutist invasion."

Revelation of Christian Front activity in the National Guard has caused a "general tightening up," Adjutant General Ames I. Brown reported. The Guard's intelligence service, which normally functions only in wartime, has been working to smoke out subversive elements.

Glenn H. McClellan, Buffalo police commissioner, has ordered his detective department to make an immediate survey to prevent sabotage of industrial plants.

In the Syracuse area all industrial plants reported tightening or restrictions on visitors. Two critical steel plants have barred press photographers since September.

George Monagan, Monroe County Legion Commander, has called a series of special meetings of the Legion executive committe to map defense plans against Fifth Column operations.

GUARD VITAL POINTS

In the first days of the war New York City police put into operation their emergency plan for guarding vital points, such as power plants and transportation centers.

California—The California legislature memorialized Congress to study means of "stamping out the traitorous Communist Party and Nazi groups in the United States and all other subversive organizations."

Airplane factories are guarded by squads of private police, F. B. I. men, Army officers and soldiers. The F. B. I. increased the guard at Los Angeles harbor and at the Mexican border and San Diego.

The California section of the National League of District Postmasters asked postal employes to notify postoffice inspectors of Fifth Column activities in their district.

District Attorney Buron Fitts of Los Angeles announced a meeting of Southern California peace officers would be held to perfect an organization against Fifth Column movements. He invited movie studio and airplane factory police chiefs as well as city, county and Federal officers.

The N.A.P.A. Rifle and Pistol Club organized an anti-parachute legion to protect vital spots like Mare Island Navy Yard in the northern San Francisco Bay area.

Three Los Angeles residents incorporated as "Erase the Fifth Column Inc."

Michigan—Detroit armed itself against sabotage in power and light plants. The city council allotted $10,000 to light the water intake plant at Belle Isle and the Detroit river docks of the Water Department.

Most motor and related plants manufacturing war materials are well guarded and precautions have been taken against sabotage, though particulars were not revealed. It was pointed out that War Department regulations require factories accepting Government orders to submit lists of alien employes for approval. The Bohn Aluminum and Brass Corp., has dismissed more than 50 aliens in the past year.

U.S. CATHOLIC POPULATION OVER 21 MILLION

Church Growth Requires 39 More Pages in Annual Directory, 1,100 Lines

N.Y. Times

The Catholic population of the United States, Alaska and the Hawaiian Islands is 21,403,136 persons, who are served by 134 members of the hierarchy and 33,912 other priests, according to the Official Catholic Directory for 1940, released recently by its publishers, P. J. Kenedy & Sons, 12 Barclay Street.

The 1940 Catholic population figures show a net loss of 3,371 persons since 1939. This loss was accounted for, however, by the revision of the census figures submitted by the Diocess of Brooklyn, which included in its 1940 report only church-going Catholics and did not include many persons who claim allegiance to the church but are not active affiliates.

As result, the Diocese of Brooklyn listed its Catholic population for 1940 at 943,126 persons, compared with a total of 1,169,054 for the preceding year—a net loss of 225,928. Each of the other dioceses reported a gain approximating 222,558 persons.

CHURCH GROWTH INDICATED

Indicating the growth of the Catholic Church in this country, the directory required thirty-nine more pages this year than in 1939 to record the personnel and institutions of the church. A total of 1,100 pages of fine print were necessary to list the members of the hierarchy and general priesthood, the number of archdioceses, dioceses, churches, missions, universities, colleges, schools, hospitals, homes for the aged, orphanages and other institutions maintained.

According to the directory there are nineteen archdioceses and ninety-seven dioceses, an increase of one over last year, in this country. The number of diocesan and religious order priests reported for 1940 represents an increase of 372 over 1939, when 33,540 were listed. The combined total of churches and missions was put at 18,733, a loss of twenty-four, accounted for by the consolidation of many missions with churches.

There were 73,677 converts to the Catholic Church in this country during 1939, which is the largest number ever recorded. This represented an increase of 7,734 converts over 1939.

The 202 Catholic seminaries in the United States were listed as having a combined enrollment of 17,087 students, an increase of 341 over last year. The directory also recorded a total of 143 universities and colleges for men, 683 colleges and academies for young women, and 1,411 high schools for boys and girls conducted under Catholic auspices. Their combined enrollment was placed at 480,483, an increase of 39,210 in twelve months.

The total number of Catholic elementary schools was listed at 7,597, an increase of thirty-six, with an enrollment of 2,108,892 pupils. The latter figure represents an increase of 1,922 over 1939.

FEWER ORPHANAGES

There are, according to the directory, 303 Catholic orphanages housing 33,624. The number of orphanages decreased by eight during the past year in line with the church's efforts to place orphans with private families.

One hundred and seventy-one homes for the aged and 703 hospitals, an increase of twenty-four, were listed by the directory as being under Catholic auspices.

Important changes during 1939 among the American hierarchy listed by the directory included the appointment of the Most Rev. Francis J. Spellman, formerly Auxiliary Bishop of Boston, to be Archbishop of New York as the direct successor of the late Patrick Cardinal Hayes; the transfer of the Most Rev. Samuel A. Stritch, Archbishop of Milwaukee, Wis., to be Archbishop of Chicago in place of the late William Cardinal Mundelein, and the elevation of the Most Rev. Joseph Schrembs, Bishop of Cleveland, Ohio, to be Archbishop of Cleveland.

New editorial features in the directory included the alphabetical cross index under 120 headings covering all information and data contained in the book; further clarification of the religious orders section, with a more detailed cross index of both this and the missionary order section, and the expansion by more than 30 per cent of the classified buyers guide and index.

Blind Soldiers' Pool Bids Due

With approach of the fourth anniversary of the China Affair, construction of a swimming pool for blind soldiers will begin today after bids have been accepted at the blind soldiers' home in Otsukacho, Koishikawa.

Being the first of its kind in Japan, the pool was planned by the Soldiers' Relief and Protective Society, a foundation created by Imperial bounty, for providing means of exercising the entire body of the soldiers who have been handicapped by blindness. The pool is to have a length of 25 meters and a breadth of 12 meters with a depth of 4 meters, the shallowest part being one meter. Unlike the ordinary pool it is to be built on low level ground surrounded by a wooden fence and provided with a turf resting place.

No spring-board is to be provided but a groove to eliminate the danger of falling into the pool will be made with steps built in instead of protruding from the sides of the pool to avoid collision with them.

DODGERS MOVE BACK INTO TOP POSITION

Detroit Tigers Drop Into Third Place in American League

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, June 20—The Brooklyn Dodgers moved back into the National League lead today though idle following last night's stormy victory over the St. Louis Cardinals, when the Cincinnati Reds went down in defeat before the Philadelphia Athletics.

Another change was witnessed in the American League, where the Detroit Tigers dropped into third and the Cleveland Indians regained possession of second.

ONLY EIGHT HITS

The Reds were unable to garner more than eight hits of the deliveries of Higbe and Atwood. The Phillies' hurlers bore down in the clutch to keep the Reds well in check and gave the Quakers a 4-3 victory.

Chuck Klein was the big noise for the Phils, driving in all four of the team's runs with three hits, including a home run.

A trio of doubles by Fletcher drove four runs across the plate and enabled the Pittsburgh Pirates, who are rallying strongly, to nose out the Boston Braves, 8-7.

In the only other National League game, Harry Danning paced the New York Giants to a 6-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs with three hits in three times at bat.

In the American League, the Chicago White Sox shut out the New York Yankees for the second straight day and by an identical score, 1-0. Bill Rigney, hurling for the Chisox, gave only five hits. But although the Sox collected 11 safeties from Pearson, they were forced to 11 innings before Kennedy singled Tresh home with the only run of the game. The clash was played under protest owing to a disputed catch by Solters of the White Sox in the second inning.

HOME RUNS HELP

Home runs by Brancato and McCoy provided the Philadelphia Athletics with the margin of victory over the Detroit Tigers, 6-4, while the Cleveland Indians, meanwhile, blasted out a 12-1 victory over the Washington Senators. Mack's triple with the bases loaded followed by Bob Feller's double iced the game for the Tribe in the third frame.

The St. Louis Browns continued to win, defeating the Boston Red Sox by a score of 2-1 when Harlan Clift clouted a home run in the ninth inning.

LOOK TOWARD PENNANT

United Press

NEW YORK, June 17—Something has come over the Cleveland Indians. They've lost that old defeatist complex they used to wear and are talking pennant this season. What's more, they're talking it in a way that makes the listener believe they mean business.

In the past the Indians have had the reputation of being a club that wilts under fire and just plays out the schedule after mid-season. Last year, though, they finished up like a ball of fire, winning something like 21 out of 23 games.

The big improvement this year is in their infield where Ray Mack and Lou Boudreau have plugged up the gaping holes at second and short and made the Cleveland inner cordon perhaps the classiest in the league.

Mack is a big Bohemian boy (his real name is Ray Mackovsky) who seems to have made good in his home town. Mack was a fullback at Case and was so good that two Chicago Bears wanted to sign him to a professional football contract.

It was Mack's good fortune to team up at Buffalo last year with another collegian—Boudreau, of the University of Illinois. The two clicked together like a Tinker-Ever combination and the Indians brought them up together.

Boudreau is the Indians' sparkplug. This spring when he hurt his leg in training he was out on the field every day with it in a cast, getting his batting and fielding practice even though he couldn't run.

NOT DRAWING CROWDS

United Press

NEW YORK, June 17—The Yankees aren't drawing any too well and what's worse a good percentage of the crowd at the Yankee Stadium these days is against the home team—the section behind first base has a nest of anti-Yankee rooters—one of their favorite taunts is, "Back to Newark, you bums."

The Yanks are doing a thing almost unheard of . . . they're watching the big scoreboard in centerfield to see what the Red Sox and Indians are doing . . . the other day when the Browns made four runs on the Red Sox in the seventh and then repeated with four more in the eighth Charlie Keller snickered out loud in right field . . . then Taft Wright of the White Sox whistled a double past him. . . . right now that second year jinx, to say nothing of southpaws, has Keller hanging on the ropes. . . . He's made only two hits in his last 35 times at bat against lefties for a southpaw average of .054.

The grapevine circuit says Dizzy Dean will become a member of the Dodgers . . . if he does he'll earn his salary the first Sunday he pitches at Ebbets Field.

Dick Bartell isn't covering the ground he used to with the Giants but he's the life and soul of the Detroit infield—Manager Del Baker says he's won four games for the Tigers by working pincers for walks in the clutch.

Jimmy Dykes is the only major league manager who thinks the Yankees are a cinch to win again . . . he calls the Red Sox crazy to think they have a chance.

U.S. FIRST LADY DENIES YOUTH GROUP IS RED

Thinks a Small Section Of It Is 'Intellectually' Interested in Communism

N.Y. Times

NEW YORK,—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt came to the defense of the American Youth Congress again recently, denying it was a Communist organization and urging a policy of cooperation rather than of hostility toward it.

The First Lady expressed this opinion at a luncheon given in her honor by the Association of Foreign Press Correspondents at the Hotel St. Moritz, 50 Central Park South, when she submitted to questions from the floor on a variety of subjects concerning foreign and domestic affairs.

Asked whether she thought it wise to encourage Communist tendencies through her Congress, Mrs. Roosevelt replied, "I do not consider it wise to encourage Communist tendencies anywhere, but I do not consider the American Youth Congress as a whole has Communist tendencies."

According to Mrs. Roosevelt, there is a "small group" in the organization that has an "intellectual interest" in communism, a group speaking for youths in large cities, but its views are not representative of the congress as such.

"As most of you know, the Communist party is well organized, with trained leaders, and their point of view is well put and can appeal to youth if youth is made to feel that it can get more from communism than from democracy," Mrs. Roosevelt said. "The only way to fight communism is to give youth something vital to solve their problems."

FACES QUESTIONERS WITH A SMILE

Wearing a tailored navy blue dress, trimmed with a white satin bow, and a navy blue jockey styled hat, Mrs. Roosevelt smilingly faced 150 correspondents and guests, representing thirty nations.

She answered without qualification the question whether the United States would find itself in an "unhappy position for upholding democracy" in the event the Allies lost the war.

"I believe it would," she replied.

Asked to explain the contradiction between the present strong isolationist attitude of the American people and their "cry of 'Stop Hitler!'" before the outbreak of the war, Mrs. Roosevelt said:

"I don't know what the answer to this question is, and if I did it would be very unwise to talk about it. I am perfectly willing to criticize myself and my own country but I believe it is unwise to critize others, don't you?"

To the request that she comment on the address delivered in Toronto by James H. R. Cromwell, the American Minister, in which he upheld the cause of the Allies against Germany, Mrs. Roosevelt said she had "no comment whatsoever," adding, "that will come from someone else."

"Not under any circumstances," was her reply to the question whether she would accept a nomination for the Presidency.

One question suggested the possibility that Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles had been sent to Europe by President Roosevelt to groom Mr. Welles for the Presidency.

"I should think that would be going a little too far," Mrs. Roosevelt replied. "We have nominating conventions in this country and those who nominate might feel they had not been included in the preparations."

THE U. S. AND PEACE

Asked whether she thought the United States should keep out of the peace conference at the end of the war in view of the fact that it was not a participant in the conflict, Mrs. Roosevelt replied, "Yes, if the belligerents wanted it do."

"If there is any way in which the United States could be helpful, we should be willing to do so," she added. "But it is up to those who fought the war to determine their own course. Having fought the war, the belligerents might well feel they want to make the peace. But a little larger outlook makes one feel that the more peoples can be interested in making the peace, the better it will be for the stability of the future.

Replying to another question, Mrs. Roosevelt said any proposal to bring children from belligerent countries to the United States for the duration of the war would be feasible "under proper guarantees," but would require Congressional approval.

Asked whether she thought Mayor La Guardia would make a good Vice Presidential candidate, she replied: "I think Mayor La Guardia would do almost anything he wants."

Mrs. Roosevelt decared, in response to a question, that she approved of press conferences as a part of democratic procedure and said she enjoyed yesterday's mass interview "very much."

Robert Waithman, correspondent of The News Chronicle of London, and president of the Association of Foreign Correspondents, presided at the luncheon. He said the foreign newsmen working in this country had a profound admiration for the statesmanship of President Roosevelt and a great regard for Mrs. Roosevelt.

According to Mr. Waithman the foreign correspondents here send about 200,000,000 words annually by cable and radio to their newspapers.

"Whether all these words are wise is a matter for solemn meditation," he added.

SEA BLOCKADE IS ENGLAND'S ONLY CHANCE

Must Starve Reich or Lose War; French Fleet Causes Britain's Biggest Problem

By J. W. T. MASON

United Press

NEW YORK, June 18—The French capitulation to Germany caused the Allied war against the Reich to revert today to its original strategy of a starvation sea blockade as the only way possible for an Allied victory.

At the outset of hostilities the Allies had no expectation of winning the war on land because they were not prepared for open field fighting. They counted on the strangulation efforts their fleets could exert against Germany, and on the supposed impregnability of France's Maginot Line.

The disposition to be made of the French Fleet must have the greatest influence on the future course of the war. Should France surrender her warships to the Germans, the power of any blockade continued by the British Navy alone would be weakened—although not necessarily fatally weakened.

The primary weakness in the British blockade will consist of the long French seacoast which offers new ports of entry for German goods. This will have to be added to the limited nature of the present British blockade in the North Sea.

If the Germans take over the French Fleet, it would require a considerable time before Germany could effectively operate the French warships.

The union of the French and Italian fleets, and a challenge to the British Navy for a decisive battle, must be considered a possibility, however.

In such an event, however, the Italians probably would have to risk sending their warships past Gibraltar into the Atlantic. In addition, many of France's naval units are now based in the Mediterranean and the difficulty of getting them into the Atlantic, if they fall into German hands, is the same as that confronting the Italians.

These facts account for the British expressions of confidence that they can continue the war at sea against Germany and Italy single handedly.

Soviets Deny Purported Aim of Baltic Occupation

Domei Tsushin

MOSCOW, June 22—Reports that the Soviet Union had concentrated from 100 to 150 divisions on the Lithuanian-German frontier because of fears resulting from German successes on the Western Front and also to check the growing military power of the Third Reich were denied by Tass, official Soviet news agency, tonight.

NORWAY SHOWS IMPROVEMENT

Lumber Orders, Electric Power Demands, Furnish Considerable Employment

D.N.B.

OSLO, June 20—Norway's industry continues to show signs of brisk activity. Due to large German orders, the wood industry is working full time. Orders for building timber amounting to 100 million Kroners have given work to thousands of workers in the woods and in saw-mills

Beyond this, attention is being directed to a further expansion of the domestic economic power. In Oslo a committee for staple fiber questions has been founded which will take up all questions dealing with the production of this material so important for modern industries.

The electric power production from waterways is also being promoted with the result that a great demand for workers is in evidence.

The demand for labor, generally speaking, may be found in all fields. During the last few years, Norway had a large number of unemployed. Exact figures are not available since the registration of the unemployed at the labor offices is voluntary but according to reports in January, 1939, 27.9 per cent., i. e. more than one fourth of all registered Norwegian workers and employes had no jobs.

This high percentage is all the more surprising in view of the fact that employment in the industries during the last few years was considered rather satisfactory. The explanation lies in the fact that the majority of these unemployed voluntarily chose unemployment because they could get along without working.

This chronic unemployment was one of Norway's most difficult social problems. Already in 1939 the responsible authorities realized that the best plan to improve the situation was a voluntary labor service patterned on the German model. This plan is now being realized. In the first days of its introduction, the registration of voluntary workers was most satisfactory. The service first turned its attention to work on highways.

The compulsory labor service for young people will devote its energies to reconstruction work in the areas affected by the war and to the increase of wood and foodstuff-production. Those who are employed were advised to spend part of all of their school and university vacations in the labor service. The work in Norway is thus placed in the service of national reconstruction.

U.S. EDITORS DENOUNCE PRESS CURB

Say Some Judges Extend 'Contempt Power' to Bill of Rights Assault

WASHINGTON—After hearing an editor's demand for a curb on court contempt powers, the American Society of Newspaper Editors deplored today "the tendency of some judges to extend the conception of contempt of court into an unwarranted assault on the Bill of Rights."

Passage of the resolution followed a suggestion by Ralph Coghlan, editorial page editor of The St. Louis Post-Dispatch, that judges be stripped of the right to punish summarily for contempt, except for offenses committed in the presence of the court.

The editors also saluted American foreign correspondents who, they declared, are giving newspaper readers "the best information on world affairs available to any people anywhere," in spite of handicaps, hardships and censoring.

While the society warned against a judicial trend which, it said, might expose citizens to arrest for even commenting on court decisions, Mr. Coghlan said that the "sweeping powers of punishment" asserted by Missouri and California courts in recent contempt actions against The Post-Dispatch and Los Angeles Times were based not on the Constitution but "on the outmoded European doctrine of the divine right of kings."

He said these two principles should be incorporated into the law:

"First * * * judges should not assert the power of contempt in regard to comment on cases which are past the jury stage.

"And, second, they should not have the power of summary contempt at all, except for offenses committed in the physical presence of the court. If there is to be such a thing as contempt for publication, the method of procedure must be by indictment and trial by jury, as for other crimes, to the end that editors and publishers, like all other citizens, may be protected against deprivation of liberty or property without due process of law."

WARNS OF NATION-WIDE DRIVE

Mr. Coghlan was held in contempt and sentenced to twenty days' imprisonment because of The Post-Dispatch's criticism of the decision of Judge Thomas J. Rowe Jr., dismissing an extortion charge against Edward M. Brady, Missouri State Representative. Mr. Coghlan's appeal now is pending.

He told the editor that if his conviction were upheld, it might "prove to be only preliminary to a concerted, nation-wide campaign to infringe upon the freedom of the press."

Mr. Coghlan declared that "it is manifest that if the legal profession as a whole had exercised itself in behalf of reform of the judiciary and of criminal law, there would be no occasion for most of the newspaper criticisms which are piously deplored as undermining respect for the courts."

From James M. Thomson, publisher of The New Orleans Item-Tribune, the editors heard the story of the Huey Long dictatorship recounted, along with the observation that it could just as well have happened in New York, Illinois or any other State, and finally collapsed only because of a free press.

Huey Long, said Mr. Thomson, was building "a dictatorship as ironclad and air-tight as those of Stalin, Hitler or Mussolini," and his ultimate purpose was "to do to the United States what he had done to Louisiana."

TAX DECISION RECALLED

The Senator, Mr. Thomson added, "solved every problem relating to the building of a dictatorship except press control."

Senator Long attempted to control the press, the publisher said, by a gross advertising tax, but the statute was invalidated by the Supreme Court.

"Perhaps this decision may one day be worth all the grief, labor and expense that the Long dictatorship cost the Louisiana press," Mr. Thomson added.

The convention was closed tonight with an off-the-record debate on the third term and 1940 issues between Secretary Ickes and Senator Pepper of Florida on the one hand, and Wendell Willkie, utility head, and Glenn Frank, chairman of the Republican program committee, on the other.

Tom Wallace, editor of The Louisville (Ky.) Times, was elected president of the society, succeeding Donald J. Sterling of The Oregon Journal, Portland, Ore.

The board of directors also elected these other officers:

M. V. Atwood, associate editor of the Gannett newspapers, Rochester, N. Y., first vice-president; Dwight Marvin, editor of The Troy (N. Y.) Record, second vice-president; Nathaniel Howard, editor of The Cleveland News, secretary; E. S. Beck, assistant editor-in-chief, Chicago Tribune, treasurer.

POOR FRENCH POLICY CAUSE OF COLLAPSE

Decomposed Leadership Cited As Reason for Weak Army, Government

By SUSUMU EJIRI

Domei Tsushin

BERLIN, June 22—Blame for the weakness of France's vaunted military might in the face of the German juggernaut was laid by observers in Berlin today squarely at the door of the men who were at the helm of the French Government prior to and during the trampling Nazi drive on France.

Basically, it was incompetent leadership that left France "rotten both in the political and military organization."

NO PREPARATION

It was the general impression of newspapermen who inspected the scenes of the recent battles that France had made no adequate preparation for war against Germany.

Every possible effort and skill had gone into the construction of the Maginot Line directly facing Germany. It was believed impregnable, and justly so. Yet the Belgian border from where a German sweep would naturally be expected, had almost no defenses against modern military tactics.

On this northern extension of the Maginot Line, concrete pillboxes jutting up at regular intervals of 200 to 300 meters were reinforced in front and in the rear by barbed-wire entanglements. Unlike the Western front, this sector had no lines of zigzagging trenches or elaborate obstruction against the German tanks.

Further south, in the secondary line of defenses, the Weygand Line on the South bank of the Somme, had no trench defenses, and little of anything else. Near Paris, the only obstacles to the German advance were a number of carriages, weighted with heavy stones, laid crosswise across the highways.

LACKED CONFIDENCE

And as it was in the army, so it was in the Government itself, in the opinions here. The leaders of the state lacked the confidence of the people. The Government declared its readiness to protect Paris to the last. It issued an order prohibiting citizens from fleeing the capital. Yet, the Government stole secretly to Tours and did not announce this move until ten days later.

The administration was demoralized, according to commentators. In fact, when it issued the order against fleeing from Paris, the Colonial Ministry secretary prepared a special train for its hurried departure. Only the intervention of the French army authorities is reputed to have prevented this act.

The Cabinet did not inform the foreign diplomatic corps in Paris of its transfer to Tours until 10 days had elapsed after the act. And at the time it did, the Foreign Ministry was vacant of every responsible official capable of carrying on its functions.

Both the Government and the people of France suffer when compared with the self-sacrificing spirit which Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler has made to prevail in Germany, it was pointed out.

COVERING THE WORLD

From British Sources

U. S. TO AID

WASHINGTON, June 24—Diplomatic quarters here have predicted that the United States will give unhesitating recognition to a French provisional Government in exile, should it mobilize the French Navy and colonial Empire in carrying on the war alongside Britain. The State Department officials reserved comment on the rupture of Britain with the Petain Government and the formation in London of a French Committee to establish a new regime. Commitments by the Department officials said, must await study of the situation by President Roosevelt, Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, and the military and diplomatic advisers.

Precedents were established in the cases of two nations previously conquered by Germany,—Czechoslovakia and Poland, diplomats recalled.

President Roosevelt returned today without immediate comment on the armistice terms imposed on France by Germany and Italy. Shortly before leaving for Washington last night he was apprised of the British version of the conditions, including surrender of the French fleet. Another German condition particularly noted was that directing the recall of all possible French merchant ships.

Malta Raided Again

CAIRO, June 24—Malta was raided by more than 60 Italian planes yesterday, a Royal Air Force communique reports. Five civilians were injured, but the damage caused was slight. Two of the planes were brought down. One was a fighter, whose pilot was rescued from the sea, and the other a bomber, from which two of the crew of seven were rescued but the rest are missing.

The resolute defense of Malta is the subject of a message from Winston Churchill to the acting Governors: "The Cabinet watch with constant attention the resolute defense your garrison and the people of Malta are making. I have the conviction that you will make that defense glorious in British military history and also in the history of Malta itself."

FOOD SUPPLY ADEQUATE

LONDON, June 24—The Minister of Food, Lord Woolton, again gave an assurance today that we have adequate stocks of food in this country. Some of the most vital stocks are greater than ever they had been in our history.

I have been asked, he said, whether I will disclose the amount of stocks we have in this country and in sight. Food is second in importance only to our stocks of munitions, and we would not dream of disclosing those. No more will we disclose the amounts of our stocks of food.

AXIS POWERS WARNED

MONTEVIDEO, June 24—The United States Government has given clear warning to the Axis Powers against attempting to intervene in the affairs of the Latin American republics, to which immediate assistance will be given by the United States in crushing such activities.

The United States Minister to Uruguay yesterday in a speech said: "I am authorized to state that my Government intends to cooperate fully with all the other American Governments in crushing all activities arising from non-American sources, imperilling our political and economic liberties. We have abundant resources and abundant manpower to cope with the task. We are confident of our power to meet and repel any attack."

From German Sources

Issues Proclamation

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, June 24—The Fuehrer tonight addressed the German people by means of a proclamation. "German People, your soldiers within barely six weeks after heroic fight have terminated the war in the West against a brave enemy," says the proclamation.

"Their deeds will go down in history as the most glorious victory of all times. We humbly thank God for his blessings. I order the flags of the Reich to be hoisted for 10 days and the churchbells to be rang for seven days."

SERVICE HELD

GENEVA, June 24—A divine service called by the Government will be held in the Bordeaux Cathedral this morning on the occasion of the cessation of hostilities. The divine service will be attended by all members of the Petain Cabinet as well as the President of the Republic, Albert Lebrun.

PEOPLE, GOVERNMENT TOGETHER

GENEVA, June 24—None in the world will ever be able to separate the French Government from the French people, declared the French radio stations today in commenting on the formation of the "French National Committee" in London and the British accusations against the Petain Cabinet.

TRIBUNAL PLANNED

GENEVA, June 24—General de Gaulle who Sunday night formed in London the "French National Committee" will be placed before a French war tribunal, says the Journal de Geneve in a message from Bordeaux.

He is accused of having left his post and of having addressed an appeal to the French soldiers over the heads of his superior officers.

BRITISH EFFORTS HIT

NEW YORK, June 24—The efforts of the British Government to minimize the defeat of Great Britain and France are being criticized by the New York Times in a special report from London today.

England has looked upon the collapse of Poland, Norway, Holland, Belgium and France as an audience would do which is following interestedly the pitiful course of some Greek tragedy. Even now when the final act is coming, England apparently still rejects the idea of being dragged into this tragedy, writes the correspondent.

When Poland collapsed, it was said in England that Germany was now weakened, to say the least. Holland's capitulation was welcomed by the British propaganda with the remark that it was good because it prevented the Western Powers from undertaking a "desperate adventure."

After the collapse of Norway, they said "See, how many planes the Nazis have lost." The conquest of Belgium evoked the remark that Germany had now to do with a hostile people which it could not supply with food and which in the long run would help bringing about Germany's defeat.

The British representation of the consequences of the French fiasco was illogical and "picturesque."

It is admitted in London, continues the correspondent, that the French defeat is bad but England anyhow could now concentrate at last on its own defense and needed not scatter its own strength. Particularly "alarming," according to the American report, is the fact a large proportion of the British people are believing in these subterfuges.

Raeder Inspects

BERLIN, June 24—The following official communique was issued here today: "The Commander-in-Chief of the Navy, Admiral Raeder, inspected from June 17 to 21 naval units and establishments in the region of the Dutch, Belgian and Northern French coasts, in order to convince himself of their preparedness for operation against England."

NO LANDING CHANCE

BERLIN, June 24—The German troops are in possession of all important French Atlantic ports. The English have thus to all practical purposes lost the last chance of a surprise landing.

TREASON CHARGED

OSLO, June 24—Charges of high treason are openly levelled against the fugitive Norwegian King Haakon and his Ministers Nygaardsvold and Koht by the Norwegian publicist Victor Mogens in his periodical "Utenriks Kronik." Mogens submits documentary proof of the events accompanying the King's and his Government's flight and adds that the same day when Premier Chamberlain in Parliament announced the retreat of the English troops from Southern and Central Norway, Minister Koht over the English radio dared to ask the Norwegians to continue the resistance. What Koht did, says Mogens, was a policy of madness. Mogens states that if sacrificing the country's interests for personal interests is high treason, then the Nygaardsvold Government wilfully and on purpose committed such treason.

BELGRADE UPSET

BELGRADE, June 24—England which still claims the control of the seas is unable to keep contracted shipments of British goods and is no longer able to supply neutral countries, says the Belgrade paper Politika. The paper writes that Jugoslav business and trade circles have been stirred to greatest anxiety and disappointment because England had demanded advance payments on many contracts for British goods amounting to as much as 200 million Dinar, and now declares to be unable to make the shipments, simultaneously refusing to refund the advance payments.

REFUGEES RETURNING

BERNE, June 24—Many French refugees who crossed the border into Switzerland are returning home again, reports the Basle National-Zeitung. Since Saturday, many French families, especially from the districts of Les Verrieres and Pontarlier have returned to France when the latest refugees told them that the German troops were keeping order and were doing their utmost to restore normal conditions.

The municipal authorities of Pontarlier and the neighboring villages as well as the French gendarmes are doing their duty undisturbed under German supervision. Requirements and supplies which the German garrison has to requisition is promptly and well paid for in cash. The population frankly admits that they get along well with the German troops, states the Swiss paper.

BUECKERBERG BOMBED

HANOVER, June 24—British airmen last night bombed the Bueckerberg where every year the German harvest Thanksgiving Day is celebrated. One bomb slightly damaged the grandstand while a number of incendiary bombs fell into the water. A small workers cottage was also slightly damaged. The Bueckerberg is without military importance and entirely free from military objectives.

American Ship Damaged By Chinese at Ichang

Domei Tsushin

UNDISCLOSED PLACE, June 24—An American steamer was damaged by bomb fragment s, while 16 Chinese citizens were killed and 40 injured when 8 Chinese military planes flew over Ichang at about 3 p.m. yesterday and dropped several bombs near the Standard-Vacuum Oil Company's gasoline tanks on the northwestern outskirts

U.S. Said Buying Crude Rubber from Great Britain

Reuter

NEW YORK, June 22—The United States has virtually agreed to buy 100,000 tons of crude rubber from Great Britain, it was intimated in trade circles here yesterday.

The purchase, it was added, would be a cash transaction, involving about £11,000,000.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT" - by Ripley

BRITISH SOLDIERS HOLDING LINE ON LIBYAN FRONT, SAYS REUTER

Reuter

FROM REUTER'S SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT WITH BRITISH FORCES SOMEWHERE IN THE WESTERN EGPYTIAN DESERT, June 21—Living like human moles, British soldiers are holding the line on the Libyan frontier and are constantly harassing the enemy with patrols in the coastal region, in the vicinity of Sollum.

I saw them among scrub beside trenches, into which they scramble when enemy aircraft appear over the Sollum escarpment from Libya on their regular, twice-daily, bombing and machine-gunning excursions.

Some machines, flying high, drop high-explosive bombs in the sand, and others fly at about 100 feet and try and machine-gun troops crouching in trenches, who return their fire with Bren guns.

SMALL BOMBS USED

At the same time, these low-flying planes throw out small hard bombs.

Apart from the Royal Air Force, the main brunt of the fighting in the western desert has fallen on British armored units and thanks to them, British troops at present dominate 3,500 square miles of Italian territory.

Already there are many stories of bravery and initiative which have won for them striking successes with very few losses. An audacious series of coups and captures have been effected by four British armored cars on the Bardia-Tobruk coastal road, deep in enemy territory. The total haul of these four cars was: 34 lorries, three staff cars, three civilian cars destroyed, one Italian officer and 20 men killed, ten Italian officers, including a general, and 61 Italian and 17 native soldiers captured.

A tour of the Anglo-Italian battlefront revealed very trying conditions under which one of the strangest wars of modern times is being waged. Both sides face the same inexorable enemy—the desert. Thousands of miles of communications must be maintained, rations distributed to distant outposts, troops transported, casualties evacuated, under a tropical sun, across waterless wastes constantly swept by scorching sand storms.

NOT WASHED

I sat with troops gathered outside a wireless van, listening to news broadcast from London. They had not washed for days, they were bearded and caked with congealed sweat and sand, but they listened with cheerful faces, and when the broadcast ended, and they left for war stations, an Irish soldier remarked, "We will show them at home how to win the war."

These British soldiers, including Dominion and Indian troops are magnificent, and their spirits are high. The great difference between the British and Italian forces fighting on the Libyan border is that the British have got their spirits up, whereas the enemy have not.

Even captured Italian officers entertained in the British Field Headquarters Officers' mess do not attempt to hide their feelings of relief now that they are in "friendly hands." From conversations with prisoners, it appears that the Italians and the natives under them are equally anxious, and have not got their hearts in the war.

Italian air raids have so far caused very little damage and are regarded by British troops as merely exciting interludes.

Italian tanks are of inferior material. Even our small arms penetrate their armor and kill the crews inside. There have been several cases of Italians hoisting the white flag and then firing on advancing British tanks, which are not now taking any chances. On one occasion an Italian officer held a white flag in one hand, and a hand grenade in the other.

JEALOUSIES PROTECT EAST INDIES, FABULOUSLY RICH, FOR HOLLAND

U.S., Japan, Britain All Interested in Keeping Islands from Each Other and Germany—Lucky Dutch

By HARRY W. BAEHR JR.

N.Y. Herald Tribune

Between the Malay Peninsula and Australia lie the Dutch East Indies, an island empire half the size of Europe and rich in the raw materials that civilization must have. It was acquired by little Holland in the days of her strength, and now, after three centuries, finds its chief safeguard in her weakness.

None of the great Pacific powers—the United States, Great Britain or Japan—willingly would permit these islands to pass into the hands of a nation whose might would be sufficient to prevent free access to their treasures, as the Japanese Foreign Minister, Hachiro Arita, and Secretary of State Cordell Hull have made plain. Should the Netherlands, therefore, fall temporary prey to German aggression, the jealousy of the Pacific powers may well insure the security of the Dutch East Indies until the mother country is able to reassert her authority. Something very like this did occur in the Napoleonic wars, when Holland was seized by France. Then Great Britain captured the Dutch possessions and held them until Napoleon was safe in St. Helena, after which she returned them, with some significant exceptions, to Holland.

TEMPTING ISLES

There is sufficient substance in the islands to tempt the predatory. Holland's Pacific empire is the second largest producer of rubber in the world, the fourth largest producer of petroleum. Sugar, coffee, quinine, tobacco, copra, spices, cattle, timber, coal, tin, gold and silver also figure on the export lists while enough food is raised there to feed a teeming population of more than 60,000,000 persons. Moreover great tracts still remain undeveloped.

The islands of the Dutch East Indies—Java, Madura, Sumatra, Celebes, Borneo (shared with Great Britain, like New Guinea); Timor (shared with Portugal); the Moluccа Islands, Bali and many others—were, like British India, not acquired by Government action, but by a great trading company. And it was not the modern products, rubber, petroleum and the like, that drew the company's attention, but the spices of the Moluccas, so necessary to a world that was little acquainted with refrigeration and needed something to conceal the taste of its meats.

THE ARCHIPELAGO

The fruitful Malay Archipelago has received the impact of many cultures. Apparently most of its native inhabitants sprang originally from what is now French Indo-China, though the wild Papuans of New Guinea and the Alfurs of the Moluccas do not seem to fit easily into this classification. A wave of Hinduism washed over the islands from India, leaving a marked impress on their ways of life. Later Arab leaders and Mahometans from the Coromandel coast of India converted most of the islanders to Islam. Buddhism had also made its mark.

While Mahometanism and Hinduism were striving for mastery, the Portuguese appeared. The islands were on the main sea route from Europe to the Far East, and the navigators from Portugal set up trading posts at Goa in India, Malacca on the Malayan mainland, and Timor and Ternate in the Moluccas.

The Dutch first appeared in the East Indies in 1596. The Netherlands was then the first nautical nation in Europe; it had 30,000 sailors—twice as many as England—and as many ships as England and France combined.

TRADE WITH SPAIN

Much of the Dutch trade was with Spain, which, like the Netherlands, was part of the Holy Roman Empire. In 1568 the Dutch began their long revolt from the power of the empire, and their trade with Spain waned rapidly.

In 1580 Portugal was annexed by Spain, and the Dutch began to follow the Portuguese of attacking their enemy as well as by desire for gain.

The first Dutch fleet set out for the Indies in 1595, and arrived at Banten in Java fifteen months later. The sailors were not tactful in their handling of the natives; the Portuguese used their influence against them, and the fleet arrived back in Holland in August, 1597, with sadly depleted strength and cargoes that barely paid expenses. Nevertheless other fleets set out with better fortune. One, sent out in 1598, reaped a profit of 400 per cent.

To prevent competition among the various Dutch companies and to provide organized defense, a consolidated company was chartered in 1602 as the Vereenigde Oost-Indische Compagnie (United East India Company) or the V. O. C. A. Large capital was raised by popular subscription; boards of directors were appointed for the various communities and provinces represented in the company, and a general board of seventeen members—the Honorable Seventeen—was given wide powers of administration and a monopoly of East Indian trade.

COMPANY FLOURISHES

The V. O. C. flourished. In 1619 it founded Batavia in Java, still the capital of Netherlands India. It expelled the Portuguese from Ceylon and Malacca and in 1652 founded a colony at the Cape of Good Hope. By 1669 it was at the peak of its prosperity. It paid a dividend of 40 per cent; had 150 trading ships—the great high-sterned, heavily ornamented Indiamen—forty ships of war and 10,000 soldiers.

Eight governments were set up under the rule of the Honorable Seventeen: Amboyna on Ceram; the near-by island of Banda; Ternate; Macassar on Celebes; Malacca; Ceylon, and the Cape of Good Hope. These tapped vast Indonesian, Asiatic and African riches and sent them back to the little motherland on the North Sea.

The seventeenth century was the great period of the V.O.C. With the opening of the eighteenth, difficulties began to arise. More and more problems of administration arose with which the commercial company was poorly fitted to cope. It was compelled to carry its operations further into the dangerous hinterland of the coasts on which it had established itself. Moreover, corruption was rife; expensive perquisites, buildings and yachts for the directors cut into the profits.

Meanwhile, the power of England was making itself increasingly felt in the East. Dutch strength received an almost fatal blow during the war of the American Revolution, when many of the Indies posts were captured and the rest saved only through the intervention of the French fleet.

THE DEATH OF THE V.O.C.

The final blow to the V.O.C. came with the French Revolution. Its principles spread to Holland, and caused a revolt against the Stadtholder, William V of Orange, a sort of hereditary president of the Dutch Republic. The new government, the Batavian Republic, was set up in 1795 under French influence, and the company was dissolved in 1798. In 1810 Napoleon incorporated Holland in his empire. The British espoused the cause of the Stadtholder, and proceeded to capture the Dutch colonies to hold them in trust until the old regime was re-established. Before long the Dutch were clinging only to the tiny island of Deshima, in Japan.

In 1816 most of the Dutch posts were returned, but England retained its hold on Ceylon and the Cape of Good Hope. In 1824, after some difficulties had arisen over the terms of the transfer, a new treaty was made with England wereby the Dutch Indian posts and those on the mainland of the Malay peninsula were exchanged for British possessions in Sumatra, thus giving the Netherlands the well rounded block of islands it now owns.

The total population of the Netherlands Indies is more than 60,000,000 persons. The bulk of these are natives; there are more than a million Chinese, 250,000 white persons and perhaps 100,000 non-Chinese Orientals, chiefly Arabs.

COVERING THE WORLD

From German Sources

French Navy Intact

BERLIN, June 25—In the armistice terms now published the Reich Government solemnly declares that it does not intend to put forward any claims to the French Navy after the conclusion of peace. All warships which are not in France are to be recalled to France, except such units which are representing the French interests in the colonial Empire. The German high command is to be given detailed information about all mines laid by the French.

The French Government pledges itself not to commit any hostile actions against the Reich and to prevent members of the French armed forces from leaving the country, and taking away arms, equipment, ships, and planes to foreign countries.

'ENEMY NO. 2'

STOCKHOLM, June 25—France has now been declared "Enemy No. 2" by the British Government owing to the conclusion of an armistice with Germany and Italy, it is reported from London.

An Order in Council issued this morning states that the territory of England's former ally will henceforth serve as an attacking base for Germany against England and must be treated accordingly. France will therefore be included in the area blockaded by Great Britain. Under the terms of regulation published by the Ministry of Blockade, all exports to French territory in Europe, including Corsica, are prohibited.

JASPAR DISMISSED

GENEVA, June 25—Belgian Public Health Minister Jaspar who on Sunday night announced over the English shortwave station that the Belgian Government together with the English Government will continue the war against Germany, has been dismissed by the Belgian Government in Bordeaux. Mr. Jaspar's prerogative has been taken over by the Belgian Home Minister, it is reported from Bordeaux. It is also reported that the Belgian Government at Bordeaux will continue to remain in close contact with the Petain Government in order to care for the Belgian refugees in France.

DE GAULLE DISMISSED

GENEVA, June 25—The French Government Gazette published a decree dated June 22, canceling the promotion to Major-General of the former Colonel de Gaulle who has fled to England. At the same time, Colonel de Gaulle is placed on the retired officers list with immediate effect.

ARREST PLOTTERS

MADRID, June 25—The Spanish frontier police discovered a high treason plot of French Popular Frontists Sunday afternoon when arresting three suspicious persons on the international bridge in Irun who arrived in three motorcars loaded with many trunks and carrying with them millions of French francs in gold as well as important secret French state documents all of which they tried to smuggle into Spain without having made the proper customs declarations.

The arrested persons had obtained the permission to enter Spain as alleged secretaries of former Premier Reynaud. Their trunks were inspected as those of any other traveler. The investigation revealed that the documents found in the trunks contained important political and economic data on France's relations to other countries, taken away from various Ministries.

The gold was from the Finance Ministry. The investigation further revealed that the action involved high collaborators of Mr. Reynaud, who with the aid of these agents was trying to send important material into the hands of the so-called "National Committee" in London in order to bring about the fall of French Premier Marshal Petain.

The French Ambassador in Madrid has been informed by the Spanish Government of these unusual disclosures and it is generally assumed in Spanish political circles that the French Ambassador fully agrees with the actions so far taken by the Spanish authorities against these traitors. The gold has been temporarily desposited with the Bank of Spain.

Campeador Sunk

STOCKHOLM, June 25—The loss of the auxiliary war vessel Campeador by a mine was announced by the British Admiralty, according to a report from London. Three officers and 16 sailors were killed when the ship sank.

From British Sources

ADDRESSES COMMONS

LONDON, June 25—Prime Minister Winston Churchill, addressed the House of Commons this afternoon.

The House will feel profound sorrow, he said, at the fate of the great French nation and people, with whom we have been joined in war and in peace and whom we regarded as trustees with ourselves for the safety of liberal culture in Europe.

There is no use or advantage in wasting time on hard words and reproaches, Mr. Churchill continued, and said he hoped that the French Empire still protected by sea power would continue the struggle and that it might become the seat of the French Government. . . These were matters that Frenchmen alone could decide.

DELEGATES LEAVE

BORDEAUX, June 25—The Italo-French armistice was signed at 7:15 on Monday evening near Rome. Twenty minutes later Rome notified Berlin. Up to the very moment of the cease firing order the battle continued, although an official Italian communique said that the end of the war in continental Europe followed an evening of steadily reduced activity.

The French plenipotentiaries left Italy for Bordeaux soon after midday today. The Cabinet here has met to discuss the final agreement between Germany, France and Italy and to ratify the armistice terms. When the text is published the French nation will be presented for the first time with the full details of the armistice terms.

Terms Said Ruthless

LONDON, June 25—The German terms are authoritatively described here as "ruthless, avaricious and humiliating." The Italian terms may be deceptively mild. If the terms are relatively mild, they must have been dictated by Germany with the idea of lulling French people throughout the Empire with a false sense of security. It seems clear that the German terms were not published by the Petain Government because they feared a violent reaction by Frenchmen all over the world. This is in fact the case. Frenchmen are not deceived into thinking that the Italian terms will represent the last sacrifice France will be called upon to make.

The Board of Trade has made a new export control order taking effect as from June 24, under which the export of all classes of goods to French territories in Europe, including Corsica, is prohibited. Revocation of outstanding licences for exports to the territories in question has been issued at the same time.

NOT CONFIRMED

NEW YORK, June 25—Dispatches received here from Budapest reporting Soviet-Rumanian clashes in the Bessarabian frontier region found no confirmation today at the Rumanian Embassy in London.

The reports that the Russians had invaded Rumanian territory across the Dniester River frontier could not be confirmed elsewhere, and the Embassy in London had not heard of any such report.

It is reported here that Bulgaria has taken swift steps to introduce totalitarian methods. All demonstrations are banned and the civilian population has been placed under military control.

RUHR, HOLLAND BOMBED

LONDON, June 25—The Royal Air Force yesterday carried out raids over the Ruhr and Holland and last night made bombing attacks over the Ruhr and northwest Belgium. All our machines returned safely from both these raids.

The Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security announced today that attacks over widespread areas of England were made by enemy aircraft during the hours of darkness last night. Airraid warnings were sounded in London and anti-aircraft defenses and searchlights were in action. A number of bombs were dropped in the eastern counties and the midlands and in the outskirts of London. Most of the bombs fell in open country. Five people are believed to have been killed and at least 14 injured.

German mercantile losses to June 23 total about 847,000 tons, and Italian losses about 224,000 tons, the Admiralty has announced.

Up to the middle of this month more than 25,000 ships had been in convoy and only one in 708 had been lost.

LANDON BARES NEXT STEP BY ROOSEVELT

President Must Have Given Assurance Not To Run for 3rd Term

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent

United Press

PHILADELPHIA, June 21—News of President Roosevelt's appointment of two loyal Republicans to serve in his reorganized Cabinet was interpreted by Republicans gathering for the national convention here last night as an indication that the President does not intend to run for a third term in office.

Alfred Landon, Mr. Roosevelt's opponent in the 1936 presidential race, told the United Press the President must have given Colonel Frank Knox and Colonel Henry Stimson assurances he would not be a third term candidate in order to include the two Republicans in his Cabinet. Colonel Knox and Colonel Stimson were nominated Secretary of the Navy and War respectively.

WON'T RUN AGAIN

Other Republican leaders here told the United Press Mr. Roosevelt accompanied original proposals for the formation of a coalition government three weeks ago with a promise not to run for the Presidency again.

News of the appointments of Colonel Knox and Colonel Stimson, however, astonished G.O.P. leaders assembling for the national convention here. But the flurry of surprised statements uniformly congratulated the President on placing two good men in his Cabinet.

Mr. Landon, who earlier refused to enter a coalition government, said, "I hope Colonel Stimson and Colonel Knox were not misled in such assurances as must have been given them regarding a third term movement. The country is to be congratulated that President Roosevelt has taken action to repair two weak vital positions in national defense."

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., urged Colonel Knox and Colonel Stimson to reject their appointments.

Charles Halleck, Republican Representative of Indiana, who will nominate Wendell Willkie, public utilities executive, for the Presidency, said the appointment of the two Republicans "makes Willkie the outstanding candidate." Col. Knox formerly was considered a possible Republican candidate.

I AM GLAD

Henry Fletcher, former chairman of the Republican National Committee, said, "I am glad the President has found two good Cabinet Members in our party, which will not be found in the Democratic Party."

"The appointments indicate Roosevelt is leading the nation into war," some quarters said. "A coalition government is impossible under the two-party system in peace time."

War developments delayed, for 24 hours at least, a showdown within the resolutions committee, which is divided on the issue of committing the United States to give the Allies all aid short of war.

DEMOCRATIC KEYNOTER

United Press

CHICAGO, June 21—The arrangements committee of the Demoratic National Convention yesterday chose Senator John H. Bankhead, of Alabama, Democratic keynoter and to act as temporary chairman of the convention when it opens here July 14.

Senator Bankhead will sound the keynote of the Democratic campaign to continue in power in Washington.

The arrangements committee also recommended that the convention elect Senator Alben Barkley, of Kentucky, permanent chairman of the convention; which will meet here July 14 to select the "Democratic nominee for the Presidency.

CLEVELAND STILL TOP

United Press

NEW YORK, June 21—The Cleveland Indians, after pressing for several weeks and finally moving into first place yesterday, cemented their grip on the lead today by pounding out a victory over their arch-rivals, the Red Sox.

The Tribe won, 7-4, chiefly because of a home run by Beau Bell with two aboard in the eighth frame. Up to that point it had been a seesaw struggle, with the score knotted when Bell drove the pellet over the wall to chase three runs across the plate.

The Yankees revealed old time power in cracking down on the Detroit Tigers, 12-7, collecting 17 hits in the process. Home runs by Frank Crosetti and Charlie Keller in the ninth inning proved the outstanding notes in an otherwise dull game.

2 HOME RUNS

Two home runs by Johnson and one by Chapman paved the way for a 12-1 victory for the Philadelphia Athletics over the Chicago White Sox. The defeat caused the Hose to slide into sixth place and give up undisputed possession of fifth to the St. Louis Browns.

In the National League, the Brooklyn Dodgers strengthened their position, the New York Giants moved into second and the Cincinnati Reds fell to third in a day marked by a jumble in the standings.

The Giants nosed out the Reds in the opening game of an important series, 4-3. Bill Jurges was the sparkplug of the terry attack, bagging a single in the sixth to score the tying run and adding another in the eighth to drive the winning run across the plate.

PHILLIES IN TIE

The Philadelphia Phillies moved into a tie for sixth place with the Pittsburgh Pirates by defeating the Chicago Cubs, 6-5, while the Pirates were bowing to the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Schulte's triple in the sixth with two aboard won the game for the Phils.

The Dodgers emerged triumphant over the Pirates in a loosely-played game more aptly classified as a pitcher's parade. The Bucs employed no less than four pitchers while the Dodgers used three. Peewee Reese won the game for the Dodgers by clouting a triple, a double and a single. Home runs were added by Phelps, Fletcher and Vince DiMaggio.

St. Louis at Boston was postponed owing to inclement weather.

COVERING THE WORLD

From British Sources

AIR RAIDS CONTINUE

LONDON, June 26—An Air Ministry communique issued this afternoon states that during yesterday offensive patrols were flown over enemy airdromes near the French coast. One patrol encountered a large formation of the enemy and shot down three of them without loss. A daylight attack was made yesterday at Wolhafen, near Rotterdam, from which all our aircraft returned safely.

Early this morning the recently completed airdrome near Bergen was attacked and heavy damage inflicted. All our aircraft returned. Later an Air Ministry commentary revealed that when the attack was made this morning, the new airdrome near Bergen was left in flames. Constant watch kept over Norway had revealed the construction of this fresh landing ground. The Coastal Command bombers waited till the work was almost finished. Explosives wrecked the runways with direct hits, and barrack huts and nearby woods were set ablaze.

In the air battle over northern France nine Spitfires shot down three out of 17 Messerschmidt 109 fighters. Three more of the German fighters were seriously damaged and believed destroyed. Several others were hit. All the British fighters returned safely.

PETAIN ANNOUNCES

BORDEAUX, June 26—Marshal Petain announced the armistice terms last night to his people and argued that no one has the use of the fleet or air force.

Under the armistice terms French frontier areas ranging in depth from 30 miles in France to 120 miles in Algeria are to be demilitarized, Italian troops are to remain in occupation of the areas to be taken in the Riviera till the end of the war against Britain. The entire coast of French Somaliland is to be demilitarized under Italian supervision as well as regions of Algeria and Tunisia. Italy also requires constant right to the use of Djibouti and the French section of the Djibouti-Addis Ababa railway. Djibouti is the gateway, the only practicable entrance to Abyssinia.

Naval bases and harbor works at Toulon on the French coast and Bizerta in Tunisia, Ajaccio, the capital of Corsica, and Oran in Algeria are to be stripped of their armaments and have their fortifications reduced.

To Move Capital

MADRID, June 26—According to the official Spanish news agency the Petain Government is to be moved from Bordeaux to Clermont Ferrand before the end of the week. Clermont Férrand is in the middle of France, 95 miles due west of Lyons.

MOROCCO OPPOSES

LONDON, June 26—The terms of the Italian armistice demand the end of resistance throughout the French Empire, but reports are still being received from that Empire of determination to continue resistance. The High Commissioner for Morocco announced last night that the troops there would not abandon any part of the French territory under their protection without fighting. No part of French northern Africa has been occupied by the enemy nor will be occupied.

WILL REPULSE RAIDERS

LONDON, June 26—Broadcasting tonight, Anthony Eden, Secretary of State for War, said that the time was approaching when the enemy, having overrun all the outlying forts of liberty, would launch his assault on the main citadel—our own land. Enemy bombing attacks at night will be continued and possibly other forms of attack will be attempted also. "They will be repulsed and we shall subject the enemy in his own country to a constant and heavy counter attack from the air. We are confident that the enemy will be beaten off."

From German Sources

Bombs Miss Target

COLOGNE, June 26—The Westdeutscher Beobachter today published some details about the indiscriminate dropping of bombs of British planes in Western Germany Tuesday night.

Some of the bombs dropped at random by the British planes fell in meadows and gardens near Merkstein and Finkenrath in the district of Aachen. In the village of Geronsweiler near Linning in the district of Juelich which was likewise attacked by British bombers two persons were killed and three seriously wounded, according to the paper which points out that in this case the British planes were as usual flying at such a great altitude that it was absolutely impossible for the British airmen to identify their target. Three farmhouses were completely destroyed by bombs.

BRITISH DESTROY LOUVAIN

BERLIN, June 26—That the British troops destroyed the university library of Louvain in Belgium has been confirmed by careful investigations of the German and Belgian authorities, it is reported by the 'Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung'. Immediately after the German troops had entered Louvain, they found that the library was gutted by fire and investigation was opened and Professor Kellermann from Aachen was called in as an expert. The chemical analysis proved that the doors and doorframes were coated with inflammable material. The arcades at the front of the library showed three different places where explosions occurred.

GERMAN CONDUCT PRAISED

GENEVA, June 26—The correct attitude of the German forces of occupation is recognized by the French population, according to the special correspondent of the Tribune de Geneve who proceeded from Geneva to Aix les Bains in France.

After crossing the Swiss frontier, he drove to this famous French spa which he was able to enter without any difficulties. French shopkeepers told him that the conduct of the German soldiers was beyond praise. All these soldiers had money and it seemed as if they could buy anything. They never tried to force down the prices. They bought and paid generously.

The German officers whom the correspondent met were all dressed extraordinarily well and their field uniforms no longer showed any traces of the previous fighting. Tribune de Geneve believes that calm and peace had returned to the towns of Savoie after the German troops had marched in while a few days previously there had been much excitement as the French troops had fled.

Slovaks Happy

BRATISLAVA, June 26—The Slovak people noted with gratification that the success of the German armed forces for Germany's victory in the West also guaranteed Slovakia's happy future, President Dr. Tiso declared in a speech today. The Slovak people looked with gratitude and confidence to Adolf Hitler who was building a new Europe according to just principles.

FEARS INVASION

STOCKHOLM, June 26—The eyes of official England turned to Ireland as soon as it became known that Admiral Raeder had examined Dutch, Belgian and French ports regarding their usefulness for an attack on England, it is reported here.

The fear of a German invasion of England is greater than ever, particularly as it is still fresh in the memory that the German fleet operated more speedily than the British Navy in Norway.

Takarazuka Scheduled To Be Municipality

By STAFF CORRESPONDENT

OSAKA, June 24—Takarazuka, famous for its girls' opera and as an ideal residential resort in Kansai, will become a municipality in the very near future, according to a recent decision reached at a joint committee meeting of the Takarazuka town and the Yoshimoto and Kohama villages held at the Takarazuka Hotel.

The establishment of Takarazuka Municipality with Takarazuka as its center and amalgamating the neighboring Yoshimoto, Kohama and Shiose villages, has long been talked about by all the people concerned. Though the total population of Takarazuka and these three villages is not more than 35,000 at present, the rate of its increase is quite marvellous, showing an increase of over 5,000 a year. Taking this and other developments of the place into consideration, proclamation of city system will be realized very soon, now that all the village people expressed their satisfaction to be amalgamated with Takarazuka.

Horyuji Preservation Group Chooses Artists to Work

In order to preserve the arts of the seventh century depicted in the paintings on the walls of Horyuji Temple, Nara, a meeting of the Horyuji Preservation Society was held in the Ministry of Education Monday to discuss plans for the reproduction of the wall paintings.

Four artists and their 12 assistants were selected to work on this Masterpiece which is considered one of the greatest in the history of Japanese arts and will require two full years to complete. The work is to be divided into four separate parts each to be assigned to the four artists but some minor parts have not yet been assigned.

Argentine Warships Will Strengthen Vigil

Domei Tsushin

BUENOS AIRES, June 25—The Ministry of Marine today ordered the fleet to patrol the entire coast of Argentina and especially to strengthen its vigilance on the Atlantic coast in compliance with the international obligations contracted at the 1939 Panama conference.

The order resulted in a last-minute cancellation of the fleet's plans to visit here to take part in celebrations marking the anniversary of Argentina's declaration of independence.

AMERICAN MARINES GUARD ROADS IN BURMA, TAKATOYO CREW SAYS

By SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

KOBE, June 27—The Takatoyo Maru—on N.Y.K.'s Kobe and Bombay run—returned to Kobe Monday afternoon with numerous stories of the pro-Chiang situation in Burma. The 6,189-ton cargo ship had entered Rangoon on May 28 and departed on May 30 for Kobe.

Members of the crew said in an interview to this correspondent that it was to their utmost surprise to learn, upon their landing, from the public that American marines were on guard duty along the highways linking Rangoon and Yunnan. The British forces had left for home some time ago, they explained that they had been told. There are two principal highways running between the two cities. Both of them having been brought up-to-date directly following the outbreak of the Sino-Japanese hostilities and are used extensively in trucking munitions to the Chiang Kai-shek regime, it was explained.

The members of the crew, recalling the sensation caused by King Leopold of Belgium's declaration to stop hostilities against the Reich forces, said that the whole of the town was thrown into literal pandemonium. "An independence movement is gradually getting under way—anti-Ally sentiment gaining impetus," they said.

They expressed utmost skepticism over just how far the Burmese would carry on their independence movement in view of the fact that the natives apparently lack almost completely any national sentiment. The movement, howevr, seems to be stronger than that in India, they said.

The crew members said that they had noticed considerable numbers of Chinese pro-Chiang elements still conducting their so called "propaganda war" tenaciously. "Though their influence in the country is nothing of what it was formerly, it is still enough to cause authorities there considerable trouble," they said. The repeated defeats of the Chiang forces, however, are tending to dampen their ardor toward Chiang Kai-shek considerably and confidence with the Chungking regime is rapidly dwindling," they said.

Considerably heated resentment was voiced by the members of the crew toward the attitude of the authorities taken toward Japanese nationals and Japanese sympathizers. "The precautions" the authorities consider necessary to take are unwarranted and many Japanese pressmen and men of the Japanese Legation there are actually "shadowed" under suspicion of espionage, they concluded.

MEN AND ISSUES IN DOUBT IN U.S. AS POLITICAL CONVENTIONS NEAR Uncertainty Over Roosevelt Still Clouds Democratic Picture; Deadlock Faces G. O. P.

By TURNER CATLEDGE

N.Y. Times

WASHINGTON—The newest turn of the war in Europe—has served to increase the uncertainties of the domestic political situation. That it will have any material effect is itself subject to question at this time, for Hitler's new blitzkrieg was no surprise.

The one outstanding fact in the political situation is now perhaps more certain than before. It is that President Roosevelt can have the Democratic nomination for a third term if he wants it and, further, that he will be encouraged with renewed vigor to accept.

But with this single exception, everything else is where it was before the first German plane flew across the Netherlands border. All is still in the making for both conventions and for the election itself.

Will the Republicans nominate Dewey or Taft or Vandenberg or Willkie or Gannet or Bridges or Bricker or some utterly dark horse? Will the Democrats turn to Hull or Wheeler or whom else if Mr. Roosevelt turns down the nomination? Will the ardent New Dealers be able to put Attorney General Jackson on the ticket in either place? Will Postmaster General Farley sacrifice his personal ambition and go along with the President or his handpicked slate? Can Paul V. McNutt pick up the pieces of his shattered boom?

THE NEW DEAL ISSUE

Such questions as these could be repeated endlessly, for there is less mystery in the matter of probable issues in the Fall campaign, but hardly more definiteness.

It is assumed, for instance, that the Republicans will go far in their platform, and their candidates may go even farther, in condemning the New Deal and its works. But will the condemnation be a broadside, or will it be divided between principle and method? What will be the issues revolving around the subjects of agriculture, labor, social security business regulation and transportation?

The war already had put the Republicans to no little trouble in framing a party policy on international affairs, and the newest manifestations in Europe cannot but increase that difficulty. The party is traditionally isolationist, but many of its present-day leaders, including some who help finance campaigns, favor the more dynamic foreign policy conducted by President Roosevelt.

As to the "big three" of the present candidates—Dewey, Taft and Vandenberg—all have recently been critical of the Administration's conduct of international relations. Mr. Taft, it is true, voted to repeal the arms embargo and Mr. Dewey has said he would have voted the same way had he been in the Senate, but both have taken the occasion in their later speeches to lash out at the Administration's international program.

UP TO REPUBLICANS

The issues, of course, must be made largely by the Republicans. The Democrats, no matter who their candidate may be, will be compelled to stand on the record made since March 4, 1933. Whether Mr. Roosevelt stands for re-election or not, he will be in the campaign as the most vital issue of all, and if he does run he will furnish virtually the sole issue.

The present situation in the Democratic party is without adequate parallel in the history of the organization.

Such active movement as there was to remove the possibility of a third-term nomination, or even to question its probability, collapsed with the successive defeats of Vice-President John Nance Garner in the preferential primaries.

The answer to the question of whether the President will accept the nomination is known no more to the pro-third-termers than to the anti-third-termers.

To more than one politician the President has lately said that he simply could not bring himself to accept another nomination or another term. He mentioned his personal desire to retire to Hyde Park and live a more leisurely life and do some writing, and suggested as well his own disinclination to have any one attempt to break the anti-third-term tradition. He listed other talent in the Democratic party and, to a few of the more politically minded visitors, suggested that at the proper time he, they and other party wheelhorses would get together and agree upon a ticket that would be agreeable to all concerned with the selection.

ROOSEVELT'S SUGGESTION

Strangely enough, Mr. Roosevelt failed to convince very many of those to whom he made such remarks that he would not accept renomination or, if necessary, seek it. The reason for this was that he invariably ended by sketching the deplorable international picture and suggesting that every one should hold himself ready for sacrifice to duty in such circumstances.

So the feeling grows in Washington that the President has not made up his mind whether to stand for a third term. There is a corollary that he will not make the determination, or at least not announce it, until near, or possibly during, the Democratic convention at Chicago.

By keeping his personal intentions a mystery, the President daily increases his chances to control the forthcoming convention. Every day he withholds his decision from the public, he decreases the independent chances of other aspirants for the nomination; he hampers their pre-convention campaigns. If he should go to the extent of allowing the convention actually to offer him the honor, he would be in a position then to accept it or, in all probability, to pass it on in fee simple to some one of his choice.

HULL SLATE READY ON 'HUNCH'

It is on the "hunch" that he will do just such a thing that some observers have already picked a slate headed by Secretary of State Hull.

Mr. Hull's stature in the Democratic fold by no means depends upon Mr. Roosevelt. He was one of the party's main props long before the President came upon the national scene. In fact, his selection for the No. 1 Cabinet post in 1933 was largely in recognition of his services to the organization in the past.

Nevertheless, Mr. Hull has made no bid for the nomination. On the contrary, he has said publicly, and recently, that he is not a candidate for any political office. There has been little independent organizing for him out in the country. If he received the nomination, therefore, it would have to come from a ground swell within the party, such as Mr. Roosevelt, with his increasing one-man control, would have to start participation in. There is little question, furthermore, that Mr. Hull would accept the honor if it were handed to him in this way.

The turn of affairs in Europe makes it even more possible that the Democrats will lean more heavily on Mr. Roosevelt's advice in making their nomination, for there is little division in the party's high command over the proposition that his foreign policies must be projected into the next Administration. Furthermore, the world situation makes it increasingly natural for the President to turn to Mr. Hull if he decided eventually not to accept renomination.

CANDIDATES MARKING TIME

Meanwhile, other Democratic possibilities are virtually compelled to mark time—Farley, Wheeler, Jackson, Clark, etc.—and the one who tried to march—Garner—suffered immeasurably for his trouble.

On the Republican side the talk of a "dark horse" has increased with each new claim of delegate strength by backers of Thomas E. Dewey of New York and Senator Robert A. Taft. The names of Governor Bricker of Ohio, Wendell L. Willkie, Herbert Hoover and Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg are heard with increasing frequency.

Up Connecticut way this week the friends of Governor Baldwin were attempting to work up a boom for him, and at least two other Republicans, Senator H. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire and Frank E. Gannett, Rochester publisher, have long since signified their willingness.

The condition which prompts observers to look beyond the avowed candidates for Republican possibilities is created largely by the remarkable showing of Mr. Dewey in the few preconvention primaries in which he entered, and the determined effort of many party leaders to prevent his nomination.

The "stop Dewey" movement occupies at this time the center of attention in Republican quarters. It is centering at present around Senator Taft, himself a perfectly legitimate candidate for the nomination. The chances for its success or failure will be known better after Mr. Taft has made a swing next week which will take him into the farm belt.

Pursuing entirely different types of campaigns—Mr. Dewey appeals directly to the public and Mr. Taft to old-line political leaders—these two, on the basis of their own claims, will divide rather evenly about 650 of the 1,000 Republican convention delegates. Inasmuch as it takes 501 to nominate, the chance of a deadlock between these two is not remote. And if the Republican decision is cast in the end by a large bloc of "uninstructed" and "favorite son" delegates, anything might happen.

As of today, however, Messrs. Dewey and Taft stand out as the two leading Republican contenders. They are expected at this juncture to go into the Philadelphia convention with the largest blocs of delegates. Whether either can so handle himself in these next weeks as to attract a majority, or even a commanding lead, is a question which lends a great deal of zest to this particular period of the preconvention campaign.

COVERING THE WORLD

From British Sources

MINOR CLASHES

LONDON, June 27—The brief announcement yesterday, which stated that parties of British forces had clashed with German troops at various points on the enemy coastline and killed some of them, has been confirmed today by the German communique which said that reconnoitrings by weaker enemy naval forces on the northern coast of France on the night of June 25 were repulsed.

It is pointed out here that the British forces were merely small scouting units seeking information, and they got it without a single casualty. This has driven home the lesson that Germany has to defend a vast coastline without command of the sea. It also shows that this country is also prepared to attack.

No further official indication of the offensive action against German held bases on the Channel coast has been given, but military experts believe that the raiders were assigned to demolition jobs along the Channel, possibly to destroy oil depots or shipping concentrations prepared for the invasion of Britain.

Italians Use Tanks

CAIRO, June 27—The first report of the use of tanks by Italians in Ethiopia during the present hostilities is given in an army communique issued here. A strong detachment of Italians supported by tanks was held up by a garrison in British Somaliland. The post was manned by a British officer and a handful of native soldiers, and after holding up the Italians for four hours they retired without loss.

Royal Air Force planes carried out further bombing operations on enemy objectives in Ethiopia. Gore airdrome was attacked and heavily damaged. One enemy fighter was definitely shot down and another was seen diving away out of control.

MOYOLE ATTACKED

NAIROBI, June 27—An official communique issued here today states: "Three enemy aircraft yesterday attacked British Moyale on the border of Kenya and Ethiopia. Fifteen bombs were dropped but there was no damage or casualties. Two more planes attacked Wajir today, when again 15 bombs were dropped without damage or casualties."

Reports are continually being received here of Ethiopians who have been pressed into service by the Italians deserting to us.

GERMAN LOSSES HEAVY

BASLE, June 27—Reports received here from Germany indicate that there is intensive propaganda among the Hitler Youth for volunteers for the German air force, which is regarded here as evidence that the recent German losses have been heavy. Men belonging to the 1904 to 1920 classes who have not yet been called have been told to present themselves immediately to their local authorities.

The German newspapers are full of announcements of soldiers killed in action. The Swiss newspaper Bund reports that German wounded soldiers are housed in hotels and hospitals all along the Rhine from Basle to the shores of Lake Constance.

TASK IS HARDER

WELLINGTON, June 27—"As Britain's task becomes harder and her peril greater, we in New Zealand are increasingly strengthened in our determination to stand by her and to give all the aid in our power," said Prime Minister, Fraser in a statement in the House of Representatives on the war situation.

Daylight Raid

LONDON, June 27—The Air Ministry announces tonight: "Yesterday, R.A.F. bombers made daylight raids into Germany. Despite enemy fighter attacks, an oil plant at Gelsenkirchen and railway sidings at Soest were bombed. One of our aircraft is missing. During last night, further bombing operations were carried out. Our aircraft attacked seaplane bases at Texel and Helger and airdromes at Schipol, Waalhaven and De Kooy in Holland. Airdromes at Dortmund and Bonn and at Handorf, near Munster and Langehagen near Hanover were also bombed. Attacks were made on an oil refinery at Cologne and on an explosives factory at Ludwigshaven near Mannheim."

TO AID FACTORIES

OTTAWA, June 27—The British Supply Board has assumed the capital cost of factory construction on behalf of 35 Canadian companies, according to the Canadian Department of Munitions Supply. The Board made commitments of well over £12,500,000. These expenditures will, it is estimated, produce war materials of a value exceeding £62,500,000 annually. In addition to financing the factories, the Board has placed orders for a year's supply of their output.

OUTPUT INCREASED

LONDON, June 27—Herbert Morrison, Minister of Supply, speaking in the House of Commons before the House went into secret session, gave an account of his seven weeks' effort on his task of "great and vital importance to the nation and, indeed, to the world," and reported representative figures of increased output, which he described as encouraging if not yet wholly satisfactory. The supply situation however, was coming nearer and nearer to a point of satisfaction each day.

"Munitions orders totalling £5,000,000 had been placed in Canada in the last few weeks. Australia was sending large quantities of small arms and ammunition. Requirements from America, including rifles and machine-guns were being obtained with increasing speed, with ready cooperation of the American authorities."

From German Sources

'EMIGRANTS PLAGUE'

IRUN, June 27—The French paper Petite Gironde today turns against the "emigrants plague." For a long time, says the journal, doubtful elements from all countries of Europe held a rendezvous in France, and now, in the hour of misfortune, it became apparent how undesirable these elements were. Like a wild horde they carried with them gold, diamonds and other objects of value and had no other desire but to leave France which could no longer offer them a profitable asylum. Despite all misfortune, the French people are glad to be freed of this international plague.

ARMS SHORTAGE

STOCKHOLM, June 27—The secret sitting of the House of Commons fixed for this afternoon has become necessary, according to London reports to Stockholm newspapers, because of the loss of the entire mobilized and mechanized equipment of 10 British divisions and the loss of the French armament industry.

The House of Commons will be confronted with the situation that England at present does not possess sufficient arms to equip its semi-military and volunteers organizations. For this reason, a collection had taken place recently of all hunting rifles to which also the King contributed.

To Arrest Daladier

ROME, June 27—The Popolo di Roma learns that the Resident General of Morocco, General Nogues, has given orders to arrest Mr. Daladier on entering Morocco.

PIERLOT SPEAKS

BORDEAUX, June 27—Belgian Premier Hubert Pierlot in a speech addressed to the Belgians, announced the commencement of Belgian-German political discussions. He declared, "In carrying out the unanimous order of the Belgian nation; we went to France to continue the war on the side of our Allies. The fate of arms turned against us. The French army after courageous defense has renounced further fighting. Our foremost task therefore is to secure the return home of the Belgian officers, soldiers, officials and civilians and to take care that the unity of all Belgians may become ever closer in distress.

"With this in view, we have established contact with the occupation authorities and with the authorities that remained in Belgium."

MORE BOMBS DROPPED

COLOGNE, June 27—The Westdeutscher Beobachter reports today that in the night of June 26 enemy airmen dropped explosive bombs near the village of Hemmerich, near the town of Bruehl and near Wuerseln. At the latter place, also incendiary bombs were dropped. All bombs fell upon open fields. The same night, enemy airmen dropped one bomb on a hospital in Reeding in the district of Juelich. The bomb caused a fire which was, however, soon extinguished. Additional incendiary bombs were dropped near Reeding but caused no damage.

FOR U.S. ONLY

NEW YORK, June 27—Henry Ford declared today that he was standing by his offer to build airplane motors and airplanes for the defense of the United States but not for England. Mr. Ford's refusal was commented upon by Stephen Early, secretary of the White House, who said that Mr. Ford was fully entitled to decline. The Government of the United States had no possibility of forcing orders on manufacturers except in times of war. It is learned from Montreal that the Canadian Parliament is demanding reprisals against Mr. Ford. One Senator requested the Canadian Government to cancel all orders for Ford motorcars and to prohibit their sale in Canada altogether. In the House of Commons, another deputy demanded the seizure of all industrial plants of the Ford company in Canada.

AUTHORITY SPEAKS

OSLO, June 27—The well-known Norwegian scholar of international law, Hermann Harris Aall, declared in a radio address that Norway like all other European nations had the greatest interest in an international law which would also apply to the seas. England, he declared, was the only country which always inconsiderately opposed the introduction of such a legal status for the seas. Only with the aid of suppressing international maritime rights had England been able to maintain the domination of the seas.

The speaker in conclusion said, "If efforts are now being made to liberate the nations from the ridiculous and criminal British insolence of the domination of the seas which even dared to proclaim an inconsiderate blockade against the civilian population and neutral shipping, it means that the fight is being waged for the future legal status of the seas."

Browns Beat Macks With Four Homers

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, June 28—The St. Louis Browns, in the throes of a winning streak and giving indications of undergoing the same sensations as a youngster with growing pains, made more secure their slim margin over the Chicago White Sox today by routing the Philadelphia Athletics in the only major league game of the day, 9-4.

Two home runs by Judnisch and one each by Clift and Heffner led the Browns to victory and paced a 12-hit attack.

The New York Yankees and Cleveland Indians are to play an owl game tonight in Cleveland.

All the other games in both leagues were rained out.

COVERING THE WORLD

From German Sources

BELGIANS, DUTCH AROUSED

WASHINGTON, June 28—The American film operator Norman Alley described the attitude of the population in the territories occupied by the Germans in a story published by the Washington Herald today.

The Dutch as well as the Belgians and French, declared Mr. Alley, are thoroughly aroused about England's attitude and feel that England left them in the lurch. Mr. Alley who returned to the United States only three days ago by air and is therefore able to give a firsthand account, denied all allegations spread by the Western Powers that the German air force bombed or shot at refugees, emphasizing that he had never witnessed any such occurrence despite numerous trips right into the territory involved in the war.

Such attacks, in his opinion, were only possible if refugees mixed with retreating soldiers of the Western Powers. Furthermore, Mr. Alley stated that the discipline of the German troops in Paris had set the best example.

NO DISSENSIONS

MADRID, June 28—The French paper Figaro denies rumors circulating abroad about dissensions within the French Empire. The paper writes that the heavy shock inflicted on the French people had temporarily disturbed the balance but that this state had now been overcome. France was now serving her own interests and not those of other nations.

Civilians Killed

COLOGNE, June 28—Two civilians were killed and three wounded by British bombs dropped near Geronsweiler on Tuesday night, reports the Westdeutscher Beobachter. "As usual," states the paper, "the British planes flew at such a high altitude that they were unable to aim at any military objectives, dropping their bombs at random wherever they happened to be.

NO REVOLT BREWING

MADRID, June 28—The political situation in French Northern Africa has undergone no change during the last 24 hours, which might justify the assumption of a revolt against the Petain Cabinet or the expectation that an attempt is being made to continue the war at the side of England, according to reports from Rabat.

General Nogues and the military commanders in French Northern Africa, these reports point out, appear to be cognizant of the responsibility which rests on them regarding the fate of the territories under their control. A tangible success of Britain's persuasive efforts is therefore not noticeable in this territory, according to reports available from French Morocco.

ENGLAND ISOLATED

NEW YORK, June 28—"England's isolation on an island—once Great Britain's best bet in any war—will probably prove to be her greatest disadvantage," stated the foreign political editor of the New York Sun in an editorial on the offensive against England which he considers to be imminent.

The American journalist continues that the island position does not offer protection against air raids nor advantages in warding off submarines. On the other hand, the island position involved enormous disadvantages. England's population could not leave their country. They had to remain in cities, villages or the open country in dense crowds and mixed with soldiers. Ireland was the only retreat but still too distant while in order to reach Canada or other parts of the British Empire thousands of miles had to be covered.

The American publicist Raymond Clapper declared in the New York Telegram that the opinion of Senator Key Pittman according to which England was totally unprepared for a German attack, was being shared by high Washington Government circles.

NOT FROM GERMANY

BERLIN, June 28—Competent German quarters today commented on rumors alleging peace soundings and declared that Germany sees no reason why any importance should be attached to such uncontrollable reports which contrary to some enemy newspaper assertions did not originate from Germany but from other sources.

It is added that to all appearance such rumors are spread in order to give Mr. Churchill and other responsible British politicians a chance of declaring that while Germany was talking of peace, England did not dream of discussing peace. As far as Germany is concerned, the only statement of importance was the official British announcement that the British Government is determined to continue the fight against the Reich to the very last.

The spokesman of the German Foreign Office, answering questions asked by foreign correspondents today declared that he was not authorized to make an official statement but that he did not expect the German Government would take any notice of such unauthorized peace soundings. Asked whether a change of government in England would change the situation, the spokesman replied that this question could hardly be judged by Germany. He recalled that very similar rumors had been current also in France until fighting had ended in France's complete defeat. In all probability, such rumors would continue in England until England had reached the same condition as her former ally. The German spokesman then turned down the suggestion that a lull in the fighting operations had set in, emphasizing that the guns were still speaking. Asked whether by this statement the peace offensive had been settled, the German spokesman replied "I have no peace offensive to settle because I know of no peace offensive."

From British Sources

Russians Get Oil

LONDON June 28—The Soviet Union has obtained possession of Bessarabia and northern Bucovina from Rumania, according to reports from Moscow. Other Russian demands on Rumania include concessions in the port of Constanza, dominance over the Danube and revision of the Rumanian political system. Under these terms valuable wheatfields and oil wells would fall into Russian hands.

British guarantees given to Rumania last summer now are inoperative, it was officially stated last night. A spokesman explained that, since Rumania has decided not to resist, the British guarantee does not come into operation.

RUSSIA POURS TROOPS

BUDAPEST, June 28—Russia began moving troops into the two provinces of Bessarabia and Bucovina immediately after Rumania accepted Moscow's demands, according to reports received here today. Soviet mechanized forces and infantry protected by warplanes began the occupation at dawn today. Specific objectives of the troops were the cities of Czernowitz, Iasi and Tiraspol. It ran smoothly and without incident, as the Rumanians apparently were under orders to withdraw without offering resistance.

GERMAN TRANSPORT SUNK

LONDON, June 28—A British submarine has claimed another German victim off the south coast of Norway. The Admiralty announces that the submarine Tetrarch sent two torpedoes into a transport which was of about 8,000 tons and deeply laden. The four torpedo boats escorting the transport tried to destroy the submarine by depth charges but failed. Enemy aircraft which came on the scene also tried to get her but without success.

During the night enemy aircraft carried out bombing raids on several districts in Great Britain. Reports so far indicate that casualties were very small and the damage done slight. The Ministry for Home Security in a statement issued this evening warned the public that the enemy is dropping delayed action bombs on this country and that people should keep away from them.

FOUR AIR RAIDS

MALTA, June 28.—There were four airraids here yesterday, three in the morning and one in the evening. No bombs were dropped, but there was heavy antiaircraft fire. One enemy plane is believed to have been hit and it is considered unlikely that it reached its base.

COLONY TO BE FREE

BORDEAUX, June 28—Not a single French colony will be subjected to foreign occupation and none of the American made airplanes shipped here will fall into German hands, Foreign Minister Paul Baudouin said in a statement yesterday.

Recognize de Gaulle

LONDON, June 28—Great Britain has decided to recognize General de Gaulle. This was officially announced tonight in the following terms: "His Majesty's Government recognizes General de Gaulle as the leader of all free Frenchmen wherever they may be and who rally to him in support of the Allied cause."

RECONNAISSANCE CONDUCTED

LONDON, June 28—The Air Ministry communique this evening stated: "During yesterday, in addition to their routine convoy escorts, aircraft of the Coastal Command carried out extensive reconnaissances over the North Sea, the English Channel and the coasts of Scandinavia and Holland. In the course of these operations, which were continued during the night, extensive damage was done to enemy shipping. Seaplane bases at Helder and Texel were bombed and a Heinkel bomber was destroyed. Five of our aircraft failed to return.

SITUATION UNCHANGED

BEYRUTH, June 28—General Mittelhauser and Gabriel Puaux, the French High Commissioner in Syria, have issued a proclamation stating that the armistice conditions signed by France do not change the situation of the mandated territories and consequently they have ordered the cessation of hostilities. The French flag will remain flying and France will continue her mission in the Levant. It is understood that the French administration of the two mandated teerritories of Syria and Lebanon will be continued as before. French forces are remaining in the country.

CANADIAN DESTROYER LOST

OTTAWA, June 28—The loss of the Canadian destroyer Fraser 1,375 tons, was announced in the House of Commons by MacKenzie King, the Prime Minister of Canada who said that the ship had sunk off Bordeaux. MacKenzie King read out a cable conveying the condolences of the Admiralty to the Chief of the Canadian Naval Staff and praising the Royal Canadian Navy "for the splendid contribution they are making to the work of His Majesty's Fleet in the common cause."

CLYDE ATTACKED SCHARNHORST

LONDON, June 28—It is now revealed that it was the submarine Clyde, 1,850 tons, which sighted the German battlecruiser Scharnhorst off the Trondheim fjord and later resulted in the successful air attacks on the enemy warship.

Defense Proclamation Lifted in Lithuania

Domei Tsushin

KOVNO, June 28—Conditions are gradually returning to normal here following the Lithuanian Government's recent acceptance of the Soviet ultimatum demanding the right to station additional Red Army troops in the Baltic states.

The so-called state of defense, proclaimed for the whole of Lithuania when the Soviet troops marched in, was lifted on June 23.

Turkish Fleet Reportedly Moving Toward Black Sea

NEW YORK, June 28—The Associated Press reports from Istanbul that the Turkish Fleet, fully loaded with fuel and ammunition, is moving into the Black Sea ready to defend the Dardenelles against any possible attack.

ECONOMIC DISASTER FOR U.S. PRESAGED BY ALLIED DEFEAT

Writer Thinks England, France, Only Buffers; Markets Would Disappear

By CONSTANTINE BROWN

S. L. Tribune

WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt has asked Congress for new and substantial appropriations for the army, navy and air force. The tragedy of the western democratic states in Europe has made the White House, the state department and the majority of the members of Congress realize that wars are no longer waged with swords and pistols, and that manpower is only cannon fodder unless backed by the most up-to-date war paraphernalia.

The truth is that Washington leaders believe we are facing Hitler and his partners. While the prospect that the totalitarians may actually attack the United States is still remote, there is a strong feeling that the defeat of the allies would mean, in the end, a defeat for the United States, and we must be prepared for any eventuality.

Those who are worrying about the unfortunate developments in Europe—for the allies—are not sentimentalists. Few among them talk about making the world safe for democracy. If we are drawn into the present holocaust, it won't be for sentimental reasons. Nor will it be for the sake of billions the allies may owe the United States in the future

Here, in brief, is the thesis put forth by the moulders of our national policies. If the French and the British are defeated, a "Roman peace" will be dictated by the totalitarians. Whichever side is defeated will be downed for many years to come. As things are now, it is not unthinkable that the British and the French may have the short end of the stick. Under such circumstances, Europe, parts of Asia and a major part of Africa would be in the hands of the totalitarians, with the master brain in Berlin.

READJUSTMENT NECESSARY

The economic system of Germany, Russia, Italy and Japan is based on state socialism. The individual is a wheel in the machinery—the state is supreme. All the rich possessions of the British, French, Dutch and Belgian colonies would be transferred to the powers of the axis. These governments, then owning vast resources and all kinds of raw materials, could produce far more cheaply than we can in this country. Hence, unless we change our form of government and follow the totalitarians economically—and by inference politically—American manufacturers and farmers will be out of luck. As it is, we have been having a hard time competing with the Germans and Italians in South America and in southeastern Europe, and have had to erect powerful economic barriers—sometimes unsuccessfully—to compete with the Japanese in our own country. But since they had to buy from the United States the oil, cotton, copper and other raw materials needed for their industries, the competition of the totalitarians without our own borders was tolerable.

If the British and the French are defeated our cotton and oil will choke us. We shall not be able to sell it abroad. The totalitarian governments having all these materials free, will be able to produce and sell at prices with which the United States cannot compete. Hence, an increase in unemployment and a rapid drop in our standard of living.

WOULD LOSE MARKETS

The South American markets will taken away from us within a short time after a Roman peace has been dictated. For the time being the governments of the South American republics are playing along with us, but there may come a time when the pro-axis elements in those countries will have the upper hand and will prefer to deal with Berlin and Rome rather than with their comparatively new friend—Washington. Nations more frequently than individuals fraternize with countries offering more profitable economic dealings; they are not bound by such ideologies as democracy and economic individualism.

These, in short, are the considerations which worry the leaders in Washington when they read the disconcerting news from the western European front. The paramount thought in their minds at the moment is to facilitate supplying the allies with all the material they lack. The democracies do not lack man power. But they are sadly deficient in airplanes and, up to a point, in anti-aircraft guns, artillery and mechanized forces.

Their most serious lack, however, is airplanes. The Germans have managed to build an air force of incredible strength. Even if the figures of the German Government—60,000 machines—are exaggerated, it is believed here that they have between 18,000 and 30,000 pursuit and bombing planes. Some 30 per cent of these must be used for training purposes—some are slower than others. But there is no doubt that the Germans, in the last six years, have been able to build an aerial fleet incomparably superior to that of the allies.

The United States, says Washington, must not be niggardly in providing the allies as rapidly as possible so as to enable them to offset the German superiority. This will be no easy task, for our factories are not equipped for mass production and the output is still slow. After January 1, 1941, it is probable that American factories will be able to produce as many as 40,000 airplanes a year. But January is still a long way off.

Lack of gasoline is one element on which the allies have been reckoning to defeat the axis. Yet the restricted amount of gas owned by Germany and Italy is sufficient to wage a relentless was for about five months.

A gloomy picture—but it is the picture as seen from Washington. It is based on irrefutable facts and reliable information. To try to minimize Germany's ability to cause the allies irreparable harm, and to glorify the preparedness of the allies would be following an ostrich policy.

The principal hope of Washington officials is that the allies may be able to hold off the Germans until the somewhat clumsy American war industry can be put on a more efficient basis and can export sufficient materials—especially airplanes. Should the German blitzkrieg be so effective as to make French-British resistance impossible for more than three or four months, the general belief here is that we shall be "face to face with Hitler."

What policy this country will be compelled to adopt in the event that the allies weaken to the point of crumbling, is a question which will be decided in Washington in accordance with future developments. The one paramount thought of the administration today seems to be: Great Britain, France and their allies MUST remain the buffer between us and the totalitarians.

COVERING THE WORLD

From British Sources

R.A.F. Active

CAIRO, June 30—Royal Air Force bombers again raided Elgibbu in Libya yesterday, scoring direct hits on huts, tents and ground aircraft and causing severe damage. A large number of Italian aircraft went up, one of them being shot down in flames and another seriously damaged. Two British planes were lost.

SUDAN OPERATIONS

KHARTOUM, June 30—British troops operating from Sudan have added to the list of successes against the Italians, it is learned here. Two British light armored fighting units yesterday routed Italian cavalry at a point in Eritrea just off the Red Sea. There were two encounters and in the second the British patrol advanced against the Italian cavalry with machine-guns blazing. The Italians broke in panic and scattered, leaving fifty wounded and dead. In this area British patrols have repeatedly penetrated into Eritrea and inflicted casualties without sustaining any losses to themselves.

Only a week ago an Italian battalion of African troops was routed in his area.

BALBO DEATH MYSTERY

LONDON, June 30—Something of a mystery is developing over the death of Air Marshal Italo Balbo, Governor-General of Libya. The Rome official announcement said that his machine was brought down in flames during a British raid on Terbruk. An Italian broadcast this morning, however, says that there were eight people in the plane with Marshal Balbo, and others killed included the Governor of Tripoli and other important officials. From this it is obvious that Marshal Balbo could not have been in a fighter plane.

The Italian report that he was killed in action over Terbruk has surprised Royal Air Force men in Cairo. The R.A.F. men concerned in an attack on Terbruk on Friday did not encounter any such planes as the one Marshal Balbo appears to have been using.

ITALIAN SUBS SUNK

LONDON, June 30—The Admiralty issued the following announcement this morning: "The Commander-in-Chief of the East. Indies reports further successes by his forces. Two more Italian submarines have been destroyed."

The Air Ministry announces: "Coastal Command aircraft carried out routine reconnaissance patrols and convoy duties round Britain and over the North Sea as far as Scandinavia yesterday. One of our aircraft failed to return. Our bombers continued night operations over France, Holland and Germany. Much damage was done to chemical factories, marshalling yards, canal traffic and airdromes. This morning, Coastal Command aircraft again attacked Willemsoord harbor in Holland, setting afire a supply depot and the lighting installation. All our aircraft returned safely from both these night and day operations."

MILITARY FORCES WITHDRAWN

BERLIN, June 30—It was admitted over the radio today that all military forces had been withdrawn from the British Channel Islands before the German air-raids over the islands on Friday night. The earlier official communiqué, however, had contained the following words: "Raids were particularly effective on the Channel Islands where troops and transports were attacked."

WANTS ROOSEVELT

WASHINGTON, June 30—A nationwide pool of public opinion conducted by the Gallup Institute shows that 92 per cent of the Democrat Party want President Roosevelt to run again for office. Only a year ago it was only 57 per cent of the Party which favored Roosevelt. The latest figure of 92 per cent shows that no other candidate can be considered if he stands.

EXPENDITURES DOUBLE

LONDON, June 30—Since April 1, British Government expenditure has totaled £700,000,000, it was learned today. This is two and a half times that for the same period last year. The public have already subscribed more than £40,000,000 for the national war fund, first offered only a week ago.

The Ministry of Munitions has appointed Sir William Beveridge to survey manpower. The British armed forces now include one million volunteers. There have been registered to date for military service about two and three quarter million men and it is expected that by the end of July this total will have reached nearly four millions. The figures of the fighting forces give a very incomplete picture of the war effort when it is remembered that at least 14 men in industry are required to keep one man in the field.

From German Sources

ENGLISH UNEASY

MADRID, June 30—Dealing with recent statements made in the London Daily Express, the London correspondents of the Spanish papers "ABC" and "Ya" criticize the British attitude in strong words. England, they declare, loses face and manners. The papers add that the British lost all composure and behave as if the British islands were to be turned into a volcano at any moment. The time of quiet weekends is definitely over. Instead of solving crossword puzzles, every Englishman nowadays tried to guess when the attack on England will begin.

GOERING WIRES DUCE

BERLIN, June 30—Field Marshal Goering addressed the following telegram to the Duce: "The news of the heroic death of my friend Balbo has profoundly shocked me. It is difficult for me to realize that a man charged with such dynamic energy is no longer at the head of his field of activities. In this hour I convey to you, Duce, my own and my air force's profoundest sympathy."

Treatment Inhuman

ISTANBUL, June 30—Italians who returned from Syria complain about the inhuman treatment of Germans and Italians interned there. Most of the interned people are kept in the village of Miemie, 60 kilometers off the road from Beirut to Haifa. The accommodation is absolutely insufficient and the food is not enough. One cup of coffee in the morning, rice at noon and a cup of coffee at night is all the interned get.

The Swiss Consul is trying to help by supplying food. While at the beginning of the war only men were interned, by orders from Paris on June 10 also women and children were locked up.

BELGIANS EXHAUSTED

BRUSSELS, June 30—Reports of the chief of the Belgian general staff, General Michiels, and liaison officers between the Belgian and British-French armies which are now published in the Belgian press, clearly show that the Belgian troops had exhausted all possibilities and that the capitulation alone prevented their complete annihilation.

The reports further reveal that the British and French army chiefs were constantly kept informed on the developments and that they failed to send the requested reinforcements. The British assertion that the retreat and embarkation of the troops was the inevitable result of the Belgian capitulation is completely off the track, according to these official reports.

SWISS BOMBED

BERNE, June 30—The Swiss army staff issued a suplementary report concerning the bombing of Swiss soil by British planes last night. "Observation stations ascertained that two foreign planes flew over the northern part of Switzerland at a great altitude last night," states the report. "Bombs were dropped in Central Switzerland. It has so far been ascertained that eight bombs were dropped near Weissenbacj and 14 or 16 near Altmatt. They were British 25 pound incendiary bombs. Only negligible damage was done because several of the bombs dropped were duds."

UNFAIR NOTICE

SHANGHAI, June 30—The scheme drafted by the British authorities of Hongkong sounds a characteristic note in providing for evacuation firstly of the families of the British military authorities, secondly of the families of British civilian authorities, and thirdly of families of British subjects of "pure European descent." It seems that families of mixed descent as well as hundred thousands of natives who are also British subjects if born in Hongkong, are not taken into consideration. The evacuation scheme states that only a six hours notice will be given which makes it appear that an emergency is expected.

ONLY ONE GOVERNMENT

WASHINGTON, June 30—The French Ambassador at Washington, Count de St. Quentin declared, according to a report in The Washington Post, that only one French Government, located in France, existed for him as heretofore. He had nothing to do with de Gaulle's so-called National Committee in London.

TENSION IN GREECE

ATHENS, June 30—Serious tension which has arisen between the British and French Legations in Athens has aroused considerable interest among the Greek public.

According to well-informed circles this tension was caused by the fact that the British Legation tried to establish political connections with French citizens living in Greece. Since these efforts may lead to the formation of hostile camps among the Frenchmen, the French Legation reacted accordingly to these British efforts. It is furthermore learned from well-informed circles that the British diplomatic representatives abroad have been undertaking similar action also in other capitals.

SWISS VALAIS RAISES MOUNTAIN WALL AGAINST FOREIGN INVASION

In terms of military geography, the Swiss canton of Valais (whose Italian border has been reported closed) is a striking example of mountains against men, says a special war bulletin from the National Geographic Society. "All but one small corner of the province's entire area of more than 2,000 square miles is raised in an almost solid wall of high mountain ranges.

"Along its southern frontier against Italy the towering peaks of the Pennine and Lepontin Alps extend for 150 miles, broken only at two important points, through the Simplon Pass (and Tunnel) on the east and the Great Saint Bernard Pass on the west. It was through the pass of Great Saint Bernard that Napoleon swept down from Switzerland, in 1800, for his conquest of the Italians.

"Locked in by mountain ranges of the north as well as of the south, the great Rhone River flows across the length of Valais to empty into Lake Geneva at the northwest tip of the canton. Just south of this point is the third and last break in the Valais mountain chain, a bit of lowland leading into France over the northernmost stretch of the otherwise mountainous French-Swiss border.

"Along with its cloud-nudging snow ranges reaching heights of thirteen to fifteen thousand feet, Valais holds Switzerland's greatest expanse of glaciers. Together with about 40 square miles of lakes, these glaciers exclude from production more than one-fifth of the canton's area. Extensive forest stands, too, on the lower slopes of the mountains, reduce farming regions still more.

"Valais, therefore, is one of the least densely settled provinces of the nation. Third in size among all 25 cantons, it has a population of only 68 to the square mile, compared with an average of 255 for the country as a whole. About two-thirds of the 137,000 or so inhabitants of Valais speak a French dialect; less than one-third a German dialect; while a few thousands use the Italian tongue. Struggles between the French and German elements there long marked the history of the province.

"Never very well to do, the people of Valais have suffered keenly from the European war which has destroyed a normally important tourist trade attracted by the winter sports and the magnificent scenery. The war also has affected the wine-making industry, which although small in scope was of growing importance because of the excellent quality of its product."

'BLITZKRIEG' 2,000 YEARS AGO ACCOMPLISHED WITH STONE AX

Metal Weapon Enabled Invaders from Russia to Conquer Balkans, Germany

By JOHN J. O'NEILL

N.Y. Herald Tribune

PHILADELPHIA — About 2,000 B.C., Europe was invaded from Russia by a conqueror who overran the Balkans and then Germany, using a new "blitzkrieg" weapon, the metal battle ax, which ushered in the bronze age in southern and western Europe, Dr. James H. Gaul, fellow of the American School of Prehistoric Research at Harvard University, revealed recently at the closing session of the 217th annual meeting of the American Philosophical Society. The metal battle axes, he said, overcame the stone axes of earlier inhabitants of the region.

This unrecorded war of the second millennium B. C. left its records in the form of bronze battle axes, which archeologists have only recently discovered in digging throughout the Danube Valley, in what is now the Balkan area and on the roads leading to Germany. The bronze axes were so widely distributed that it was indicated they were carried to the area by a conquering horde led by an early prototype of Ghengis Khan, Dr. Gaul said the researches in the Balkans demonstrate.

Even older archeological records unearthed in settlement mounds throughout the Balkan area, Dr. Gaul said, revealed the course of an earlier "new stone age" culture which brought the dawn of civilization to Europe. The route of the earlier, peaceful invasion, he said, started in the Aegean Peninsula, wound up the Danube Valley, reached Russia, and from the Ukraine extended to Germany.

CASTS DOUBT ON THEORIES

This new scientific research into the archeological records of the Balkan region, which has until recently been largely neglected, has thrown new light on the early history of Europe and casts doubt upon the theories of an origin among the Nordic people of the cultures which gave Europe the foundations of its civilization.

The new stone age civilization, neolithic culture, came to the Aegean Peninsula from the Near East, Dr. Gaul said, about 4000 B.C. and was brought by peoples speaking what are now known as the Indo-Urasian languages. In other words, said Dr. Gaul, this was the first "Aryan" invasion of Europe.

The bronze age invasion came from northeastern Europe. Its course, as traced by present researches, started at the Ukraine but may have had its origin farther to the north and west, in which case it would have followed the same general routes as that taken later by Ghengis Khan.

REPORTS ON FATHERLESS RABBIT

Dr. Herbert Shapiro, instructor in physiology at Vassar College, reported to the society further details concerning the birth early in February of his now famous fatherless rabbit. The animal's birth was a laboratory accomplishment made possible by inserting in the mother rabbit a metal device which refrigerated the fallopian tube and brought about a temperature "fertilization" of the egg, which was caused to be deposited by treatment of the mother with pituitary gland extract.

In previously reported such parthenogenetic births the egg was taken from one rabbit, fertilized, then transplanted into a second rabbit, where it grew to maturity. Dr. Gregory Pincus, visiting professor of biology at Clark University, who was a joint author with Dr. Shapiro of the paper, reported on this process.

Dr. Shapiro reported that the work of the two laboratories had resulted in the production of four living parthenogenetic daughters of rabbits. One of the artifically fertilized families has reached the third generation. A rabbit artificially fertilized in Dr. Pincus's laboratory gave birth to a daughter, and this daughter produced apparently normal eggs which were artificially fertilized and gave birth to a litter of nine young, all of which are still living.

NEW MICROSCOPE DEMONSTRATED

A new electron microscope capable of producing magnifications up to 100,000 diameters was demonstrated to members of the society at the Radio Corporation of America laboratories in Camden that afternoon. The instrument stands about ten feet high and will be made available commercially at a cost of $17,500. It is expected to reveal disease viruses which are too small to be seen with present microscopes using light as a medium, and which were declared to have an upper effective range of 2,500 diameters.

Members of the society were entertained that afternoon at the Widener Art Gallery, and a reception followed at the home of Dr. Thomas S. Gates, president of the University of Pennsylvania, and Mrs. Gates. The annual dinner of the society was held in the night at the Bellevue Stratford Hotel. The John F. Lewis Prize was awarded to Dr. Earl Radcliffe Caley, assistant professor of chemistry at Princeton University, for his studies of the composition of ancient Greek bronze coins. Speakers were Dr. A. V. Hill, Fouleron professor and secretary of the Royal Society; Dr. Phillip C. Jessup, professor of international law at Columbia University, and Dr. Gates.

ROME, June 30—With the exchange of Italian and British evacuees completed, the Italian liner, Conte Rosso, sailed today from Lisbon for an undislosed port.

The Italian evacuees from London on board the Conte Rosso included the former Ambassador to London, Guiseppe Bastianini, members of Italian diplomatic staffs in Great Britain and news correspondents.

FIVE WORLD RECORDS FALL IN U.S. MEET

California Athlete Sets New Pole Vault Mark Over 15 Feet; Track Times Beaten

Domei Tsushin

FRESNO, California, June 30—The world's pole vault record and four other American and Amateur Athletic Union records were bettered last night when the curtain fell on the 52nd annual A.A.U. junior and senior track and field championships.

Returning once more to familiar haunts, Cornelius Warmerdam, former Frensno State College track star from the nearby town of Tuolomne, bettered his own unofficial world's record in the pole vault by 1⅛ inches when he won the event, clearihg the bar at 15 feet 1⅞ inches.

The height of 15 feet, long considered the ultimate "ceiling" of pole vaulting, was cleared by Warmerdam this year on April 13 in a triangular meet at the University of California track stadium.

TRACK RECORD

In the 1,500-meter run, walter Mehl, University of Wisconsin runner, winning in 3 minutes 47.9 seconds, bettered by a half second the American record established in 1938 by Glenn Cunningham.

An American record was equalled when Carl McBain, of the University of California at Los Angeles, winner of the junior 400-meter hurdles Friday, came back to nip the senior competitors in the same event in 51.6 seconds.

A.A.U. records were bettered also in the 100-meter dash and the 110-meter hurdles. Harold Davis, Salinas Junior College star, running under the colors of the San Francisco Olympic Club, won the former event from a fast field in 10.3 seconds, while Fred Wolcott, of Rice Institute, Texas, skimmed the hurdles to a 13.9-second victory.

OLYMPEANS WIN

Massing a total of 159 points, the San Francisco Olympic Club won the senior team championships as well as annexing the junior team title on the first night. The New York Athletic Club was second in the senior division with 108 points.

Results of other track and field events:

400-meter run—Grover Klemmer, Olympic Club. Time: 47 seconds.

3,000-meter steeplechase—Joe. McCluskey, New York A.C. Time: 9 minutes 16.6 seconds.

JUNIOR RECORDS TOPPLE

Domei Tsushin

FRESNO, California, June 29—Seven National Amateur Athletic Union track and field records were bettered and one was tied last night as hundreds of the country's finest athletes touched off the 52nd annual championships of the American version of the war-wrecked Olympic Games.

The junior competitors, non-winners of any previous A.A.U. events, took over the stage in a prelude to the senior competition which will wind-up the huge athletic carnival tomorrow night.

Outstanding performance of the opening night was credited Eddie Morris, of the Southern California Athletic Association, who dominated the sprint events by winning both the 100 and 200-meter dashes in record time.

MORRIS SHINES

Morris easily outclassed the junior field winning his heat in the 200-meter event in 21 seconds, .5 seconds better than the existing mark. He came back to win the finals in the still better time of 20.6, but the judges did not allow the time because of a 5-mile per hour tail-wind. The Southern Californian won the 100-meter finals in 10.4 seconds equalling the existing junior mark.

New junior A.A.U. records were also hung up in the following events:

400-meter run (final)—Cliff Bourland, Southern California A.A. Time: 47.4 seconds.

800-meter run—James Kehoe, Washington (D.C.) A.A. Time: 1 minute 51.2 seconds.

5,000-meter run (final)—Bobby Madrid, San Francisco Olympic Club. Time: 15 minutes 32.8 seconds.

200-meter hurdles—Dick Browning, of Visalia, California. Time: 23.4 seconds.

400-meter hurdles (final)—Carl McBain, San Francisco O.C. Time: 52.3 seconds.

Shot put—Stan Anderson, San Francisco O.C. Distance: 53 feet 6 inches.

The final result of the remaining events in the junior competition were:

56-pound weight throw—Tom Montgomery, Olympic Club. Distance: 34 feet 3-8 inches.

Broad jump—Pat Turner, Olympic Club. Distance: 24 feet 7 5-8 inches.

Discus throw—Alfred Morro, Boston A.A. Distance: 153 feet 8 5-8 inches.

High jump—William Wakefield, Southern California A.A. Height: 6 feet 5 inches.

Pole vault—George Hoffman, Olympic Club. Height 13 feet 6 inches.

Javelin throw—George Salisbury, of Georgia. Distance: 216 feet 6 3-4 inches.

Hop, step and jump—Ray Atzet, Southern California A.A. Distance: 48 feet 4 inches.

1,500-meter run—Froggie Lovvorn, George Pepperdine College, Los Angeles. Time: 4 minutes 4.4 seconds.

3,000-meter walk—Joe Wehrly, California A.C. Time: 16 minutes 1-5 second.

110-meter hurdles—Don Hommel, Southern California A.A. Time: 14.7 seconds.

3,000-meter steeplechase—Aldridge Rice, unattached. Time: 10 minutes 15.3 seconds.

U.S. SHIPPING INDUSTRY HAS BIGGEST BOOM IN YEARS

Neutrality Did Not Hurt Business; Volume Increased 33 Per Cent

By FRANK L. KLUCKHOHN

N.Y. Times

WASHINGTON —Despite gloomy forebodings in many quarters that the Neutrality Act would be a body blow to American shipping, the shipping industry is now enjoying its greatest boom in years.

Officials give three principal factors in the remarkable comeback in the seven months since the Neutrality proclamation of Nov. 4 removed 86 United States flag vessels from their normal runs when it closed much of Europe and the Canadian East Coast to them.

First, they say, American overseas commerce, instead of being reduced by the war as widely feared, actually increased 33 per cent in the first half-year of hostilities. Second, wartime sinkings to date have eliminated about 1,750,000 tons of world shipping, or more than the estimated 1,500,000 world excess tonnage which existed on September 1. Finally, German merchant ships have been driven from the seas, and the British and French shipping has been disrupted to an extent for military reasons.

A SHIP MARKET REVIVAL

At the time war began, the market was dull and ships often sold for whatever the buyer was willing to pay, usually not over $35 a ton. There is now a brisk market at $60 to $70 a ton. While this is far from the last World War peak of $550, it indicates tht growing demand for vessels. So, too, does a bill backed by the Maritime Commission now before Congress which would permit sale to buyers at home and abroad of 120 laid-up, over-age vessels. The Allies are said to be anxious to get some of these ships.

Of seventy-eight ships removed from European routes by the Neutrality Act, most have found their way into service to other parts of the world, officials say.

Some are hauling nitrates from Chile, and some have been put on other South American runs or sent on Asiatic trips. The liners Washington and Manhattan are traveling regularly to the Mediterranean and doing a thriving business.

Not only have exports to South America increased 57 per cent in the first six months of the war, but trade also has increased with the Orient and Africa, while tourist travel to Latin America and the Pacific islands has advanced sharply. Liners running to the South American East Coast are said by officials to have their cabins more than 80 per cent filled each trip and bookings for Honolulu are reported to be difficult to obtain.

SIZE OF MERCHANT FLEET

The American merchant fleet, the fourth largest in the world, consists of about 1,100 ships of 7,000,000 gross tons. Of these, only about 330 are at present engaged in overseas trade, the rest operating in coastwise traffic.

American ships are now carrying the flag to every quarter of the globe except the two areas from which they are barred by neutrality legislation. The American President Line maintains a round-the-world service, and other ships operate to the Orient and Australia.

The government, through the Maritime Commission, has embarked on a program of building 500 ships over a ten-year period. Over-age vessels or those nearing the age limit are to be replaced.

In this connection, officials say frankly that the war has been a God-send. The demand for shipping, they remark, has made possible the disposal at unexpectedly good prices of older vessls, thus contributing to the American merchant marine program. Most of our present fleet, they note, was constructed during the last war and is fast becoming obsolete.

In all 160 vessels of 586,758 gross tons have been sold to foreign buyers and transferred to foreign registry since the war started. Buyers have been of many nationalities. Ships have been transferred to Brazil, Panama, Latvia, Uruguay, Philippine Islands, Greece, Italy and China among other countries. British and colonial companies and individuals have bought fifty-eight of the vessels and French buyers obtained twenty-two.

Of the ships transferred to foreign ownership, six were sailing vessels totaling 9,138 gross tons with an average age of 25 years. Nine were tugs and barges totaling 9,001 gross tons and averaging 26.5 years. Yachts and pleasure vessels numbering nineteen and totaling 7,903 tons, with an age average of 18 years, have been transferred, in addition to four tankers of 22,030 tons and 25 years' age. Freighters and combination vessels of more than 1,000 tons sold abroad number 102. They total 531,781 gross tons and average 22.71 years in age. Twenty fishing and motor boats of 6,910 tons complete the list.

Sale of old merchant vessels permits the owners to pay for new Maritime Commission ships, and in some instances, to make a profit. Thus far the Maritime Commission has let contracts on 152 new ships of 1,250,000 gross tons. Most of these are cargo vesseis of about 8,000 gross tons.

The America, the largest liner ever built in this country, will be commissioned by the United States Lines about July 1. In all, forty-six ships have been launched and thirty-five of these have been completed and placed in service.

COMPLAINT OF UNIONS

The Maritime unions have complained bitterly about the sale of so many vessels, charging that American seamen are thrown out of work. These complaints continue.

The Maritime Commission says, however, that the public welfare is being served, and the government's program executed, by the sales. Only about 1,000 sailors were left jobless as a result of the Neutrality Act, officials insist, adding that plans for relief through expanded government-financed training and through WPA have failed for lack of applicants.

Commission spokesmen assert that every new cargo ship put in service means 30 to 50 jobs and note that 639 seamen will be taken on in one fell swoop when the America is put in service shortly.

ONE LONE GIRL IN PETER LORRE'S 'DOOMED MEN ISLE'

Miss Rochelle Hudson Starred in Second Film With All Male Cast

Thirteen men and a girl.

That was the ominous condition under which Rochelle Hudson began work in Columbia's "Island of Doomed Men."

As the only feminine member of a large, all-male cast which features Peter Lorre, Miss Hudson declared that instead of being frightened by her role, she had looked forward to her part in the picture.

TOO MANY MEN

"This is the second time," she said, "that I have worked with a cast consisting of men only. But never did I expect to act with such a large number of them.

"The script calls for me to be imprisoned with a hundred or more ex-convicts on a desert isle 'somewhere in the Pacific.' It was a good part and I gave it all I had. As for the superstitious implications of working with thirteen featured players—well, that sort of thing stopped bothering me long ago. I think it means good luck, if anything."

TEN MASSIVE SETS

Ten massive sets, all of them authentic to the last detail, was Art Director Lionel Banks' contribution to Columbia's, "Island of Doomed Men."

Two of them, utilizing the largest stages in Hollywood, occupied more than 160 x 300-feet, Banks declared. They represented both interiors and exteriors of prisoners' compounds and barracks, as well as large sections of a dense jungle.

One of the largest sets showed in detail an extensive diamond mine, complete with narrow-gauge railways, "practical" cars to run thereon and complete mining equipment, all constructed with telling exactitude from drawings obtained from the Kimberly mines of South Africa.

Other sets included interiors and exteriors of police headquarters, airports, customs offices and other settings necessary to the picture's plot.

U.S. QUAKERS TO EXPAND RELIEF WORK

Respond at Once To Reynaud's Plea For More Assistance

N.Y. Times

PHILADELPHIA, June 3—In response to a direct appeal to American Quakers from Premier Reynaud, the American Friends Service Committee announced today an immediate expansion of its program for dealing with large-scale relief among 5,000,000 war refugees in France.

Clarence E. Pickett, executive secretary of the committee, said that an additional unit of ten American workers would be sent to France at once. The hope was voiced that a consolidation of fund-raising efforts shared in by all interested agencies might be developed to finance future work.

The Quaker unit now in France has been enabled to meet the emergency temporarily through a grant of 3,000,000 francs (about $60,000), but a preliminary survey has indicated that the committee must have $50,000 a week at the minimum to cover its share of the relief program even in outline, he said.

The Quakers, through Mr. Pickett, offered to aid in unifying relief efforts by becoming an administrative channel, since the American Friends Service Committee is not a big fund-raising organization. In view of the urgent need, however, he and other officials called for donations of cash, clothing and food to the committee and other agencies engaged in refugee relief work.

REYNAUD EXPRESSES GRATITUDE

Premier Reynaud's cabled message was addressed to Howard E. Kershner, director of Quaker field operations in France, who now is in New York. It read as follows:

"I thank you for the evidence which you have sent me on the important work accomplished by the International Commission in these tragic days. The admittance of millions of refugees of all nationalities on the soil of France and the effort to shelter them from the horrors of war, to nourish them and to care for them has imposed upon us an enormous burden and responsibility.

"We are very grateful to all those who wish to help us and I entreat you to be the interpreter to our American benefactors of our high appreciation of their generous collaboration. I entreat you to appeal immediately for the greatest possible financial assistance to your commission, which renders very valuable help to the authorities responsible for the care of the unfortunate refugees."

The following reply was sent by Mr. Kershner to the French Prime Minister:

'With reference to your cablegram, the American public is deeply stirred on behalf of the refugees in France. Every effort being made to secure large resources for their care."

QUAKERS IN FIELD 16 MONTHS

The American Friends Service Committee has been requested to assume the responsibility for relief needs in ten departments along the southern border of France. For sixteen months it has been operating there, beginning with relief work among Spanish refugees. At the outset of the European war refugees from Alsace-Lorraine poured into that region and now it is receiving the third group, that from Belgium and the war-torn areas of Northern France.

In a statement issued here, Mr. Kershner who returned recently from France, said that the generosity of the French people toward refugees was without parallel in history. As an example of kindness and human sympathy, he declared, it had made the whole world a debtor of France.

"Five million refugees from Belgium and Northern France are filling the roads to the central and southern portion of that country, streaming endlessly away from the terror behind them," he said. "The need is most urgent at this moment for shoes, clothing, flour, sugar, milk, chocolate and staple foods of all kinds. Money for immediate needs in France before food shipments can arrive is of the utmost importance.

GENEROUS RESPONSE IS URGED

"Every dollar that can be spared from other needs by rich and poor alike is urgently required for relief work in France. May the response be immediate and generous both in money and in large donations of food and clothing of all kinds. Checks should be made payable to the American Friends Service Committee and sent to 20 South Twelfth Street, Philadelphia, or to 165 West Forty-sixth Street, New York.

"All donations of clothing and food should be well packed in boxes weighing not over 200 pounds, marked. "For the Quakers" and sent to the French and British Relief Fund. 543 West Forty-sixth Street, New York, for immediate free transportation to France.

"All funds and commodities received in answer to this urgent appeal will be used for refugee relief in France and will be administered by the Quakers. The organization for distribution is already set up and has been functioning for months. All that is needed now is the means with which to greatly expand and continue the work."

Mr. Kershner said that 4,000 refugees were cared for every night in the Paris center of the Friends Service Committee alone, and that shelters had been improvised all along the route, where refugees might obtain food and rest on their way to the south and west.

Miss Margaret Frawley, formerly of Boston and now connected with the Quaker unit in France, cabled on Saturday that refugee needs were still critical and that the Red Cross grant had been exhausted.

HAVERFORD, Pennsylvania, July 2—Don McNeill, up and coming player from Kenyon College, won the national intercollegiate tennis crown today by knocking over veteran Joe Hunt of the United States Naval Academy, 7-5, 6-1, 6-1, on the Haverford courts.

SEWICKLEY, Pennsylvania, July 1—1939 clay court champion Frankie Parker took the starring role today in the 37th renewal of the annual East-West tennis tournament, easily taking Frank Kovacs into camp, 6-3, 6-4, 6-1. His victory gave the East the meet, 3-1.

Progressive Demobilization Said Ordered in France

Domei Tsushin

GENEVA, July 1—Progressive demobilization of the French Army has been ordered by the French War Minister, General Leon Colson, it was reliably learned from Clermont Ferrand.

General Colson was said to have emphasized that the demobilization be carried out in complete order to avoid difficulties in observing the military clauses of the Armistice agreement and to prevent traffic congestion and inadequate provisioning of certain areas because of a sudden influx of former soldiers.

Demobilized soldiers who cannot find work reportedly will be employed by the State for public work.

WOMEN MUCH COOLER THAN MEN, SKIN TEMPERATURE TESTS SHOW

Scientific 'Masquerade; in Which Garments Of Opposite Sex Are Worn, Held at Harvard

In seeking a solution to the vexing problem of how to provide an indoor temperature that would satisfy both men and women, the Harvard School of Public Health has conducted a scientific masquerade, with men "disguised" in the garments of women, while women strutted about in the accoutrements of the male.

The experiments were described by Dr. C. P. Yaglou of Harvard before the joint meeting of the American Industrial Hygiene Association and the American Association of Industrial Physicians and Surgeons at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

TEMPERATURES TAKEN

Comparative measurements of skin temperatures, Dr. Yaglou reported, first established that the female of the species is much cooler than the male. Women's feet and hands were found to average 5 degrees cooler than the masculine extremities, their arms were 4 degrees cooler, their legs and head 3 degrees less, with their trunks half a degree cooler than that of the male.

This is one reason, Dr. Yaglou pointed out, why men fume at air-conditioning engineers when they provide an indoor temperature that women find just right. But the chief reason why the sexes cannot agree as to what constitutes a comfortable indoor temperature, he said, was that women's clothes were about a third the weight of men's, both in Winter and Summer, and thus much cooler.

The answer to the knotty problem how to provide an indoor temperature in which men and women would be equally comfortable, according to the Harvard studies, would therefore be found by equalizing the weight of their clothes, with men wearing lighter clothes in Summer and women adopting heavier attire in Winter. However, men and women attending the meeting seemed to agree that such an answer was tantamount to no answer at all, leaving the problem just where it was before the experiments.

Here are some of the Harvard findings as reported by Dr. Yaglou:

"Men dressed in women's Summer clothing (weighing 1.8 pounds, including shoes, as compared with men's Summer wear of 5 pounds) demanded a temperature of 80 degrees Fahrenheit, which was about the same as that preferred by women (79.5 degrees) similarly dressed.

WEIGHS MORE

"Reversely, when women wore men's Winter clothes (8.3 pounds instead of 2.6 pounds, the average of women's Winter garb) the comfortable air temperature was just as low (70.5 degrees) as that preferred by men wearing the same clothes."

If men would shed their coats and vests, and wear only the lightest underwear in hot Summer weather, Dr. Yaglou said, rooms would not have to be cooled below 85 degrees for comfort, whereas the present standard is from 76 to 80 degrees. With men dressed for temperatures of 85 degrees in Summer, they would not be exposed, as at present, to the sharp contrasts between the chilly air conditioned buildings and the heat outdoors.

Similarly, he said, if women wore more and more warmer clothes in the Winter, a room temperature of about 70 degrees would be comfortable for both sexes in the coldest weather.

MOST COMFORTABLE

To prove that it is possible to reconcile the temperature differences of the sexes, Dr. Yaglou pointed out that both men and women agreed they were most comfortable with a mean skin temperature of 91.5 to 93.

Studies of Negro and white share-croppers in Mississippi prove the Negro's superior ability to do physical work, whether in industry, sports, or war, at high temperature and humidity, according to a report presented at the meeting by Professor D. B. Dill of the Harvard Fatigue Laboratory.

The crucial experiment was a two-hour walk on a treadmill in which each man covered seven miles and climbed about 3,000 feet at a temperature of 87 degrees Fahrenheit and a humidity of about 80 per cent. During this test, Dr. Dill reported, the Negroes lost less salt and water from their bodies in sweat than the whites, did not get quite as hot as the whites as shown by body temperature readings, and in consequence did not come as near exhaustion as measured by the heart rate.

Under conditions such as this experiment, when the heart rate reaches 180 beats per minute, the man is "usually on the verge of exhaustion," Dr. Dill explained. At the end of two hours the mean heart rate value for twenty negroes was 152, while it rose to 173 for the seven whites.

STUDIES VALUABLE

The studies, Dr. Dill said, should prove valuable in the national defense program, as they show that the Negro would be more efficient in tanks and submarines and other branches of the service where high temperatures and humidity prevail.

The A. A. I. P. & S. notified Surgeon General Thomas Parran of the United States Public Health Service that a committee of seven to cooperate with the government in developing a program for coordinating the health needs of industry had been appointed in compliance with Dr. Parran's telegraphic request.

Warren A. Cook of Chicago, president-elect of the A.I.H.A., was inducted into office as president. Donald E. Cummings of the University of Colorado was chosen president-elect of that organization.

GERMANS START LABOR SERVICE IN NEW LANDS

New Work Discusses Progress Made in Areas Taken over by Reich

D.N.B.

BERLIN, July 2—Since 1933 the greatest capital of German economy is German work. The successful use of this capital is expressed in the economic achievements of the last few years, and its climax may be seen in the smooth transformation of peace time economy in Germany to war time economy. All the occupied territories were quickly fitted into the German economic system.

One of its most important organizations, the German labor service, has been confronted with new tasks since the Eastern territories, which had been a part of Poland after the world war, have again become part of the Reich.

A territory as large as one-fifth of the old Reich had to be put into a well established German economy. This territory, which includes the districts of Danzig, West Prussia, Warthe and Zichenau was seriously neglected for a long time.

During the last twenty years no extensive soil cultivation had been undertaken in this area, highways were neglected and schools were lacking. The task of the labor service arose out of this and new roads had to be constructed, land had to be cultivated and the economic structure of this area had to be developed, so that farmers can settle in these districts.

RECONSTRUCTION STARTS

Outside of Germany the economic reconstruction of Norway, Holland, Belgium and France is in full swing. These countries are quite aware of the inner change, which is taking place in the economic structure of their countries. The Norwegian newspaper Nationen states that Norwegian people have again learned how to rely principally on its own strength. This is clearly shown by the introduction of labor service in Norway, which was considered impossible a short while ago.

In the Dutch province of Northern Brabant large public works are being planned. These mainly consist of the development of agriculture and the extension of the food supply of the Dutch people. Eleven thousand workers were employed in these tasks.

BELGIANS INCREASE FOOD

The extension of Belgium's food supply has also been undertaken and the works of reconstruction have been planned under close cooperation with the German authorities. The towns of Liege and Antwerp have drawn up plans for new work. The new Belgian commissioner for reconstruction of the country and the secretary general of the Belgian ministry of labor, Vervilghen, is entrusted with the reconstruction of highways and the organization of agriculture and industry.

The French reconstruction commissioner, General Doumenc, is in charge of all traffic problems, which have been caused by the change from war to peacetime conditions. He is also charged with the reconstruction of France's railways.

"The French population," says the Petit Dauphinois, "is fully aware of the greatness of the hour of sacrifice. There is no doubt that the greatest task of the present time consists of creating work for everybody."

In sharp contrast to Germany's organization of labor is the actual misorganization in England. This lack of organization has led to catastrophic conditions on the labor market. In order to distract public attention from these conditions the English labor minister announced an extensive plan of work, which will be far more successful than Germany's achievements. Such statements, however, must be regarded as idle boasting. The real fact is that England has not been able to supply the armament industry with sufficient labor and Great Britain failed to train skilled workers for this important industry. Various British ministers have tried to bolster production but without any positive results. The new air minister recently requested automobile mechanics to place their services at the disposal of the airplane industry. Those, who followed this appeal, however, were sent back to their old jobs, because the labor offices did not possess any instructions to this effect. This is just another example of England's lamentable lack of organization.

PRICES CLIMB

Misorganization is not limited to labor but also includes price regulations and finance. Prices for paper, for instance, rose from £22.10 per ton to £24 per ton, while the prewar price for paper was £11.5. This means that the price had been doubled since the outbreak of the war. Flight of capital, which was to be eliminated by a number of decrees of foreign exchange regulations, is still prospering. It is increased to such an extent that a decree had to be issued prohibiting the exports of jewels and other valuables. Up to now Britain's plutocrats have always found ways and measures to bring their treasures into safety.

With regard to this we have only to recall the speculations in free sterling.

AUTO TIRES FROM SYNTHETIC RUBBER SHOWN

500 Industrialists, Scientists And Military Experts See Demonstration in N.Y.

Automobile tires made of a new synthetic rubber which has been developed during a number of years of secret research were announced and shown to a gathering of 500 industrialists, scientists and military experts at a reception in the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria recently by John L. Collyer, president of the B. F. Goodrich Company. The tires are produced by the same manufacturing process used for natural rubber, from a synthetic with a petroleum base, which the company calls "Ameripol," signifying a polymer, or recombination of molecules of American materials, according to the New York Times.

Mr. Collyer told his guests at the reception, which marked the seventieth anniversary of the company, that the material, described as "Liberty rubber," could be processed and vulcanized as is the natural product. He added that the company had had in operation for more than a year and a half a pilot plant producing the synthetic, which was being made in a semi-commercial plant at Akron, where a manufacturing plant will be opened this Fall with a daily capacity of several tons of "Ameripol."

SAFE COURSE PURSUED

"It is my personal opinion and fervent prayer," Mr. Collyer said, "that our supplies of natural rubber will not be interrupted. But rubber is too vital a product for us to follow any course but a safe one. The new Goodrich tires use 'Ameripol' to replace natural rubber in proportions varying from 50 to 100 per cent. If the industry were to replace the natural rubber in tire treads and sidewalks alone, it would reduce by approximately one-half America's consumption of the natural product."

As rapidly as possible, Mr. Collyer added, tires made of the new substance will be offered to car owners, who can be assured that they will be able to buy tires for their cars whatever happens in the world market. He explained that "Ameripol" cost more than rubber now and that new tires made of it would be higher in price, but that with increasing production economies might be expected which would reduce the price.

Introducing Dr. Waldo L. Semon, discoverer of the company's rubber-like synthetic "koroseal," Mr. Collyer credited him and his assistants with the development of "Ameripol." Dr. Semon outlined the characteristics of the new "Liberty rubber" and said that it was an exclusive Goodrich product not infringing on any existing patents. As is the new rubber, "butyl," which was announced on Tuesday by W. S. Farish, president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, "Ameripol" is derived from American petroleum.

Seeking a relatively low-cost material, Dr. Semon said that his group had produced a synthetic which, in many of its important properties, was equal or superior to natural rubber.

HOW SUBSTANCE IS MADE

"By the cracking process," he explained, "petroleum is broken down to a mixture of simple molecules and from this mixture can be separated a gas which, under pressure, liquefies to give butadiene. This is mixed with other ingredients prepared from natural gas and air and then made into a milky emulsion, using soap produced from American agricultural sources.

"Upon heating and agitation these ingredients react to form an emulsion of synthetic rubber which is similar to the latex obtained from rubber-producing trees. From here on the process of obtaining a sheeted rubber is quite like that used for natural rubber. The latex is coagulated with acid, producing a curd. This is then sheeted and dried to give the synthetic 'Ameripol.' "

Dr. Semon mixed a curd of the new material before the spectators, bringing enthusiastic applause.

Mr. Collyer declared that, according to reliable figures, consumption of synthetic rubber in the United States amounted to 1,700 tons last year, against a consumption of natural rubber of 592,000 tons.

"These figures," he added, "indicate the situation with which the United States must deal before we can breathe easily should an emergency arise to threaten our rubber supply. The big question now—bearing in mind that tires account for more than 70 per cent of our usage of rubber—is 'when will we have a satisfactory tire built of our own country's materials?'

"At what precise date Goodrich, or any other organization, can go before the American public with the announcement that America need no longer depend on her natural rubber, we cannot foretell. But this we do know: substantial progress already has been made and this progress must be speeded up, right now."

A dozen of the new tires made with "liberty rubber," which looked and felt like the standard casings now on the market, were shown at the reception and miniature models were distributed as souvenirs. Tires of the same material have been in service for many months on the company's test cars, it was announced.

Baer Scores T.K.O. Over Galento In 8th Round

Domei Tsushin

JERSEY CITY, July 2—Max Baer, one-time world champion and now leading contender for Champion Joe Louis' heavyweight crown, tonight scored a technical knockout over Two-Ton Tony Galento in the eighth round of a scheduled 15-round bout to decide who will battle Louis in September.

The fight, termed a "grudge battle" between the two, was stopped at the beginning of the eighth by the referee after one of the bloodiest fight seen here. Galento withstood Baer's terrific right swings for seven rounds. Several severe cuts were opened in Galento's face. Examination at the end of the seventh round disclosed that Galento was in no condition to continue the fight.

Baer, who again regained a chance to fight Louis, won every round except the second when Galento savagely attacked Baer with his two-fisted slugging.

Baer weighed in at 221½ pounds while Galento tipped the scales at 244½ pounds.

ROOSEVELT INDICATES STEPS NECESSARY FOR U.S. DEFENSE

Presidential Authority to Call Out National Guard Is Forecast

By ARTHUR KROCK

WASHINGTON—In his most recent message to Congress, the President said that so long as "a possibility exists" that war will involve "all continents" our security must be safeguarded to the highest degree. Since he believes in this possibility enough to have said so frankly, and public opinion seems to have overtaken if not outdistanced him in the direction he has been going for several years, there is a growing expectation here that Mr. Roosevelt may take certain steps which, to the military forces, seem clearly indicated.

Mrs. Roosevelt, the President's wife, touched on one at her press conference today when she endorsed compulsory "general training," but said it need not include the manual of arms. Chairman Bloom of the House Foreign Affairs Committee steered toward another with his resolution designed to warn off any transfer of European sovereignty in the Western Hemisphere.

TO ISOLATE POLITICS

Probably there would be strong vocal opposition to either move by the Administration and doubtless there are many politicians who would seek to make capital adverse to the party in power. Doubtless also many sincere champions of democracy, not believing the emergency requires it, would attack such a course as they attacked the President's proposal for power to make use of the National Guard during the absence of Congress, if events should seem to make this necessary.

But if national defense can be isolated from politics or if the country's leaders who share the President's view of the exigence of the times will abandon political considerations, these two obvious moves can be frankly proposed and honestly discussed instead of being kept, as now, in a whispering-closet, or camouflaged in the open. Then the country will have an opportunity to decide whether, if so many billions are needed for national defense, corollary steps are not required also.

PROTECTION NEEDED

In the West Indies and the Caribbean are insular possessions of Great Britain, France and the Netherlands which safeguard the security of this continent only so long as their present owners are able to hold and defend them.

Many international and military experts here believe that the invaded neutrals and the Allied governments would promptly accept an offer from Washington to garrison and protect these possessions in the Western Hemisphere, at least until the end of the war.

Were the Army and Navy extended for this vital protection of the Panama Canal and the eastern coast of the United States, there would no longer be room for questions why he might find it necessary later to make use of the National Guard.

The logic of selective service is the same. The standing army, even plus the Guard and the Reserve, is small. Funds appropriated and forthcoming from Congress for equipment will require a long time for materialization in equipment. Therefore there is no point in having a million recruits without the gear the army has to have before it is an army. But young men from 21 to 25 can be put in physical condition to bear arms if that should later prove to be necessary. And until there are guns they can be drilled with broomsticks. Hitler did it.

A DRAFT IS EQUITABLE

If volunteering is depended on, national defense in this phase will be marred by injustice and inequality, as has been proved before. A true pattern of the country's youth will not be evolved by this method. Selective service, on the other hand, will draw from every population group. And the number put into training can be determined by the amount of equipment available, the number of instructors who can be recruited for the purpose.

Yet this subject, like that of open protection of vital points in the Western Hemisphere above South America, is sedulously dodged in Washington. Senator Lodge confronted it in his statement, but he is a rarity. Unless the President shall offer leadership in these two essential sectors of national defense, they will continue unguarded, until 1940 politics has spent itself in the elections. This delay may prove to be a blunder which will be difficult to repair.

Those who disbelieve in the President's statement of the case will not, of course, approve either step to meet that case. But Mr. Roosevelt obviously believes what he has been telling Congress privately and publicly. Consequently the leadership must come from him.

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION GETS CAMERA, SAID TO BE FIRST MADE IN U.S.

Christian Science Monitor

HAMPDEN-SYDNEY, Virginia—What is said to be the world's first fast-action camera and the first camera ever made in America is scheduled to leave its 100-year-old home at Hampden-Sydney College, where it was made by Dr. John William Draper, and join the exhibits of epoch-making inventions in the Smithsonian Institution of Washington.

Experts have accepted proof of its genuineness, established after eight years of research by the Rev. Howard C. Cobbs, alumnus of the school. Dr. Draper was a professor there from 1836 to 1839.

Official presentation of the camera will not be made until the commencement of Hampden-Sydney, but its acceptance by the national museum marks achievement of a goal set by the Rev. Mr. Cobbs in 1932, when he began his search to prove this was the original camera used by Dr. Draper in developing portrait photography.

SELF-IMPOSED TASK

Although it was believed that the first permanent portrait of a living person was made by Dr. Draper of his sister, Miss Dorothy Draper, after he had left the Virginia college and accepted a professorship at New York University, yet Hampden-Sydney College has been disclosed by the Rev. Mr. Cobbs to be the site of Dr. Draper's basic experiments in photography.

An assignment to photograph the old camera at Hampden-Sydney for the Eastman Kodak Company, drew the Rev. Mr. Cobbs' attention to the existence of the instrument. He then began a self-imposed task to seek information re-establishing Hampden-Sydney as the birthplace of photography.

He found that Niepce and Daguerre, both Frenchmen, and the Englishmen, Fox and Talbot, had preceded Dr. Draper in making impressions of objects. However, the processes used by these men had required one to two hours of exposure, which made it impossible to record the image of a person because of the human inability to remain in one position that long.

Dr. Draper had sought to shorten the period of exposure.

Records revealed that Dr. Draper had been a professor of Chemistry and natural philosophy from 1836 to 1839 in the Virginia school. He had sought to build a laboratory at the college and had spent his spare moments studying the effects of light upon sensitized plates.

In a chemistry textbook written shortly after Dr. Draper left Hampden-Sydney College, he said: "The art of taking portraits from life, which has now become a branch of industry, was invented by me soon after the daguerrotype was known in America; at that time, this, which is by far the most valuable application of the chemical agencies of light, was looked upon in Europe as entirely beyond the powers of this process."

EXPLAINS FINDINGS

"It was thus as you will find," he wrote in explaining that he used sensitive paper in photographic experiments for years, "by looking into the Journal of the Franklin Institute for 1837, that I had examined the impressions of the solar spectrum, proved the interference of the chemical ray, investigated the action of moonlight and of flames, either common or colored, red or green and also the effects of yellow and blue solution, and other absorbing media."

As the Rev. Mr. Cobbs had hoped, the difference in size of the camera at Hampden-Sydney and the one used at New York University indicates that the former was used prior to the latter. The Hampden-Sydney camera is longer in structure and focus. Dr. Draper wrote, "It was during my repetitions of Mr. Talbot's experiments that I recognized the practical value of the experiments I had made in 1835 and published in 1837 respecting the chemical focus of a nonachromatic lens, and saw that the camera must be shortened in order to obtain a sharp picture."

Dr. Darper stated in his letter that his work with portrait photography dated back to the summer before Daguerre's process was published. That was in August, 1839.

WILLKIE SANS BACKGROUND ON ASIA POLICY

May Appoint Stimson As Secretary of State If He Wins Election

By HARRY FRANZ

United Press

WASHINGTON, June 29—Wendel Willkie, Republican Presidential candidate, has elected to approach Far Eastern problems without any personal background in that field and without a definite guiding plank in the Republican election platform.

His selection of a Secretary of State, if he is elected, would consequently be of great importance in the future role the United States is to play in the Far East.

Presumably Mr. Willkie would supplement his relative lack of experience in the foreign field by the selection of Cabinet officers specially qualified for these problems.

STIMSON SLATED

Naturally there was speculation here today as to whether Colonel Henry Stimson, Republican Secretary of War in the Roosevelt Coalition government, might again become Secretary of State if Mr. Willkie is elected to the White House.

Many observers feel that Mr. Willkie's nomination reflects a widespread desire to break with tradition and adapt American policies to the swiftly changing world situation.

In such an event, the tremendous industrial effort for preparedness would become the central fact in the American program and foreign policies naturally would evolve in accordance with this great defensive effort.

RESIGNING UTILITIES POSTS

United Press

PHILADELPHIA, June 29—Wendel Willkie, who was nominated Republican Presidential candidate yesterday, told the press last night that he intends to resign his post as president of the Commonwealth and Southern Corp. He said he would present his resignation probably on Monday.

Mr. Willkie said his forthcoming speech of acceptance, at Elwood, Indiana, his birthplace, would be a mere formality.

"I have accepted the nomination already," he said.

WELCOMES NOMINATION

United Press

WASHINGTON, June 29—James A. Farley, Postmaster General and Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, last night welcomed the nomination of Wendel Willkie, utilities executive, as Republican candidate for the Presidency.

"This greatly clarifies the issue now before the nation—which is a good thing," Mr. Farley said.

"The question, of course, is what sets of forces, economic and social, are to conduct our government—the historic American processes of some new and somewhat foreign methods of concentrated control.

"Most of the rank and file Republicans will understand this as well as most of the rank and file Democrats."

STRONGEST IN GENERATION

United Press

PHILADELPHIA, June 29—The Republican National Convention yesterday nominated what most observers credited with being the strongest ticket in a generation.

Senator Charles McNary of Oregon was nominated Vice-Presidential candidate to run beside Mr. Wendel Willkie, the utilities executive, in the 1940 campaign. His nomination was achieved overwhelmingly on a single ballot. It was interpreted as a bid for far western votes to add to the eastern business votes which Mr. Willkie will most certainly have.

The Republican Party placed the 1940 ticket before the nation on a platform of peace, preparedness and prosperity.

McNARY IS MODERATE

Senator McNary is regarded as a moderate in foreign policy and is less outspoken than Mr. Willkie in his sympathy for the Allies. He was unsympathetic to the neutrality amendments, but recently refrained from criticizing President Roosevelt's foreign policy. He voted for all defense appropriations placed before Congress this session.

There was evidence in some political quarters that Mr. Willkie may somewhat modify his foreign policy utterances in order to retain party harmony.

Just prior to the adjournment of the Convention last night, Mr. Willkie, in a brief speech, pledged himself to pursue the defense of American principles.

"Democracy is facing the most crucial test it has ever faced and we Republicans and Americans must dedicate ourselves to the principles of the United States," he asserted, "for here is the last foothold of freedom in the world. As your nominee, I expect to conduct an aggressive, fighting campaign to bring unity in America in order to assure the preservation of freedom."

Dempsey Kayos Grudge Opponent

Domei Tsushin

ATLANTA, July 2—Demonstrating that time has not affected the power of his two great arms, former world heavyweight champion Jack Dempsey returned to the ring last night after 13 years' retirement and knocked Clarence Luttrell, of Texas, from the ring in the second round to win what was labeled as a grudge fight.

A crowd numbering over 20,000 yelled themselves hoarse as the referee lifted the hand of the Manassa Mauler, now 45 years old, in token of victory.

After the fight, Dempsey's manager said Jack may make an attempt to regain the world championship.

Luttrell is better known in the wrestling world, where he is among the top-knotchers.

FRENCH ARMY'S FULL COLLAPSE FEATURED WEEK

Armistice with Germans And Italians Highlight Of June 21-28 Period

Transocean

BERLIN, July 3—From the military point of view, the week from June 21 to June 28 was marked by the last convulsions of the French Army and the conclusion of the Franco-German and Franco-Italian armistices.

Already at the time of the Battle of Flanders the German superiority over the French troops, who were fighting alone on the continent, was so apparent that Germany's final victory was certain.

In order to man the so-called "Weygand Line" south of the Somme and Aisne, even near sufficiently, the French High Command had to withdraw from the eastern fortifications facing Germany, all available troops. Nevertheless, the "Weygand Line" was so sparsely manned that it was soon broken through and France as far as the Loire River conquered by the German troops.

LANGRES THRUST FATEFUL

Most fateful for the French was the thrust by the German forces beyond the plateau of Langres to the Swiss frontier at Pontarlier. By this action half of all the available French troops were bottled up. The Maginot Line, depleted as to man-power, was first penetrated near Saarbruecken, then opposite the Rhine. Meanwhile, in the west of this bottle, the second French fortification line, consisting of Verdun, Toul, Nancy, Epinal, Belfort, and the western side of Metz, fell an easy prey to the Germans. All the French attempts to break through failed. Only some small units succeeded in reaching Swiss territory before the German troops, arriving from the east and the west, joined hands near Muchlhausen, thus closing the ring around the enemy.

Three French army commanders and 1,500,000 men, in addition to those previously captured, fell into German hands before the armistice came into force on the morning of June 25. A continuation of the fight on the part of the French would have been tantamount to a senseless murder of troops whose power of resistance had been broken.

In order to join hands with the Italians, German armored troops, before the armistice, made a thrust via Lyons in the direction of Grenoble and Chambery. The Italians on their part, had captured a number of Alpine fortifications and had penetrated into the valleys of the upper Isere and its tributaries.

CONDITIONS SURPRISING

The armistice conditions surprised everyone by their moderation. The chief aim, that of gaining a free hand to deal with Britain and to exclude France completely from the war, has been achieved. Germany is now in a position to turn its entire force against the British Isles. It has at its disposal for this attack, the coastline from Norway to the Pyrenees. Preparations for this blow, which will fall on Britain like lightning, are being made with German thoroughness and efficiency.

In the Mediterranean, Britain's position has been considerably weakened. This is in part due to the fact that the French Fleet is no longer available and to the end of hostilities on the Alpine Front, freeing a considerable Italian force. Also the end of fighting in French North Africa lifts a burden from the Italians.

Italy in possession of Bizerta, may cut off the eastern from the western Mediterranean much more effectively than in the past. This will greatly hamper the British fleet. The decision, however, will not be reached in the Mediterranean but in the British Isles.

POLICE WASH HANDS OF CLAIMED BLACK MART DEALS IN BATHHOUSES

"Black" market operations seem to extend in many directions in spite of the economic control police officers, whose all seeing eyes are expected to penetrate any form of darkness.

The latest to conduct black market dealings are public bathhouses. Those who know how to approach them and their managers get into the tub one or possibly two hours before the ordinary people can come in at the front doors.

Because of the persistent shortage of water supply in town, the bathhouses are unable to maintain the good conditions of the good old days of plenty of water.

The hot water in the tub soon disappears as bathers come and go and there is but small supply of water for replacement.

So those who can afford to hand out extra fees to the tub-attendants go for their bath while the water is still clean. They go to the bathhouses' back doors, knock slightly and the doors slide open.

Bathhouses like all other businesses are not permitted to raise their fees which must remain as of September 17, 1939, so what received extra is not as a fee but a gratuity.

The police have looked into these backdoor dealings, but since there appears no actual law violation they have washed their hands of bathhouses.

PACKARD MOTOR COMPANY AGREES TO CONSTRUCT 9,000 AIR ENGINES

Domei Tsushin

WASHINGTON, July 3—The National Defense Commission today announced that the Packard Motor Company had agreed to undertake the construction of 9,000 airplane engines, of which 6,000 are destined for Britain and 3,000 for the United States.

The Ford Motor Company is said to have originally received the contract and to have refused it on the ground that the company did not wish to build engines for Britain.

REFUSED BY FORD

Transocean

NEW YORK, July 3—Henry Ford today stood by his refusal to build airplanes and airplane motors for Britain, but emphasized, he would always be ready to build both for the defense of the United States.

He said that he had negotiated with the Advisory Council for the Defense of the United States, believing that the order given him was for the defense purposes of the United States and not for Britain or some other foreign Power.

In commenting on Ford's refusal, White House Secretary Stephen Early told newspapermen that the industrialist was fully entitled to decline the order. He pointed out that the Government of the United States could not force order upon manufacturers unless it was at war.

CANADA UPSET

Shortly after Ford's rejection of the order, William S. Knudson, who is placing the orders on behalf of the council, commenced negotiations with the Packard Motor Car Company, which apart from the Ford Company, is believed to be the only concern able to fulfil the contracts.

Meanwhile, reports from Ottawa indicated that demands for reprisals against Ford have been voiced in the Canadian Parliament. One Senator moved that the Canadian Government should cancel all orders for Ford automobiles and prohibit their sale in the Dominion. A member in the House of Commons demanded the seizure of all Ford industrial plants in Canada.

AMBASSADOR GREW PRAISES PRINCE TOKUGAWA IN TALK

Memory of Late Japanese Leader Honored in Broadcast by Viscount Inouye

The United States lost a true friend in the passing of Prince Iyesato Tokugawa, American Ambassador Joseph C. Grew said Friday in a memorial radio broadcast to the United States marking the one month anniversary of the death of the outstanding Japanese statesman and humanitarian. Viscount Tadashiro Inouye also spoke during the same broadcast.

Following is Ambassador Grew's address in full:

"Just one month ago there passed from this distraught world of ours an outstanding figure in the life of Japan, a statesman, humanitarian and great gentleman, Prince Iyesato Tokugawa, whose memory we honor today in this brief broadcast from Tokyo to the United States.

"Indeed our tribute is of direct interest to Americans for a good many reasons but particularly because during the later years of his long and useful life the Prince devoted an important part of his manifold interests and activities toward developing the friendship between Japan and the United States. Often during the past eight years I have had the privilege of sitting with him at luncheons and dinners of the America-Japan Society whose presidency he filled with great charm and great distinction and have felt with pleasure the genuine warmth of his greeting to our fellow countrymen and women who were visiting Japan, some of them for the first time.

CORDIAL SPIRIT RECALLED

"Many Americans, I am sure, will recall with gratification the cordial spirit of welcome which characterized those meetings.

"You will be particularly interested in hearing in a few moments from the next speaker the dramatic story of Prince Tokugawa's youth. He was, at least in name, the last of the Shoguns, those warrior chieftains who ruled Japan for 250 years until the advent of the Meiji era in 1867, the last ruling Shogun having surrendered his administration to the Emperor when Prince Iyesato (then known as Kamenosuke) was but five years old, and as head of the great house of Tokugawa this youth, with his brilliant ancestral background, found himself in maturer years charged with important opportunities and responsibilities for service to his nation. Few men could have fulfilled that service with more patriotic spirit, determination and effectiveness, and the demands for such service steadily increased as his useful life progressed and his talents developed.

WAS WELL EDUCATED

"Throughout his eminent carreer Prince Tokugawa's usefulness to his country was greatly enhanced through his public school education in England where he attended Suydenham College, through his facile grasp of foreign languages, especially English, and through his frequent visits to the United States on important missions. This background gave him an international outlook and a deep understanding of foreign relations which proved to be important assets in his presidency over a period of thirty years of the Japanese House of Peers in the Imperial Diet.

"But the phases of his public service of greatest interest to Americans were first his presidency of the America-Japan Society of Tokyo, second his presidency of the Japanese Red Cross, and third his participation in the Washington Conference of 1921 where his knowledge of the English language and his understanding of western temperament and ideals proved to be of outstanding importance to the Japanese delegation.

"It was, in the end, his conscientious spirit of service that indirectly cost him his life because, in spite of not too robust health, he insisted on traveling in 1938 to the Red Cross Conference in London. On the way to London he was taken ill in Canada and was reluctantly obliged to return to Japan where the shock of his illness was too great to overcome. His death came peacefully on June 5th.

"Thus passed a great personality who has left an imperishable mark in the annals of his country. Although schooled in the ways and the thought of the West, his ideas and views and interests were fundamentally Japanese. He was a loyal Buddhist. He was a keen follower of Sumo or Japanese wrestling which approximates in public interest our American interest in baseball and seldom was absent from his seat at the big annual tournaments. He loved the Japanese classic dance. In character he was reluctant to yield in controversies but his sympathies were broad and they found expression in many charitable activities. For his contribution to American-Japanese relations I shall always be deeply grateful. My admiration, respect and affection for him were in the highest degree heartfelt. His passing means a great and personal loss to all of us who knew him well. The United States has lost a true friend.

"It now gives me particular pleasure to introduce to you my good friend Viscount Tadashiro Inouye, a member of the House of Peers and President of the Pan-Pacific Club of Tokyo. Viscount Inouye will tell you something of Prince Tokugawa's youth and life."

VISCOUNT'S SPEECH

Viscount Inouye's speech follows:

"I have the honor of telling you something about the illustrious personage who passed away just a month ago today, and whose loss brought profound sorrow not only to the entire Japanese nation, but also to many prominent persons elsewhere in the world.

"Prince Tokugawa was not essentially a statesman but a personality of perhaps greater value and wider appeal to the best portion of humanity. He was pre-eminently a gentleman, and his noble character is appreciated universally, regardless of race or nationality.

"He came of the best blood of Japan and of a lineage second to none among the country's illustrious families. In both his lineage and his personal character he truly represented a family of distinguished statesmen and brilliant leaders who have embellished the pages of our history.

DEEP APPRECIATION

"In mourning the passing of Prince Tokugawa from our midst, we are compelled to renew our sense of deep appreciation for the great and noble services to our Empire which were rendered by the illustrious Tokugawa Shoguns during a period of two hundred and sixty years.

"One thing for which Japan is particularly indebted to the Tokugawa family is that, at the right moment in history, that family readily and voluntarily restored to the Throne the administration of the entire country, thereby averting dangerous and perhaps disastrous civil wars.

"At the time of the Meiji Restoration of 1868, the Prince was a boy of five-year-old. Fortunately for himself and his country he was surrounded from his infancy by a group of able and loyal advisers and instructors who were former followers of the Shogunate Government. He received his early instruction in Oriental classics and philosophy from those scholars who gave him a difficult and thorough training in intellectual as well as moral development.

"Besides his Japanese education, he received early instruction in English, first from an American citizen, Warren Clark, and later a Canadian, Mr. Cochrane.

"In 1877 at the age of 14, Prince Tokugawa was sent to England to study, and entered Sydenham College near London. He studied under the personal supervision of the Principal of the College, Mr. Taylor Jones, who used to hold college debates at which many illustrious statesmen of the time, such as Mr. Gladstone and Lord Salisbury were invited to inspire young students. This introduction to the rules of parliamentary procedure gave the Prince his early interest in the sphere of activity in which he later distinguished himself as President of the House of Peers of Japan.

5 YEARS IN ENGLAND

"After staying five years in England, Prince Tokugawa returned to Japan, and in 1896, he became a member of the House of Peers. Since then, for fifty years he was active in the Upper House, of which the last thirty years as its President. There he won universal confidence and respect for his extraordinary ability and efficient manner in handling parliamentary affairs.

"In view of his unusual parliamentary ability and his keen interest in national affairs, many attempts were made to induce him to enter the arena of party politics. On one occasion, the Emperor Taisho offered him the post of Prime Minister, but Prince Tokugawa declined the honor.

"The Prince received the Imperial command to attend the historic Arms Conference at Washington in 1921. He valued most highly the opportunity thus given him to make the acquaintance of many eminent statesmen of the world, and he had high regard and admiration for Charles E. Hughes, now Chief Justice of the United States.

"The most outstanding characteristics of Prince Tokugawa were patience and self-control, and his retentive memory was most conspicuous. The strictness with which he regulated his own life won the admiration of all who knew him, and yet he was generous to others.

HEADED RED CROSS

"One of the many public organizations to which Prince Tokugawa devoted his activities—and one in which he was especially interested—was the Red Cross Society of Japan of which he was President until his death. Because of his personal efforts, cordial relations have always existed between the Red Cross Society of America and of Japan. In 1936 on his way to the Conference of the International Red Cross Societies at Brussels, Prince Tokugawa accidentally met in a Hotel in Paris the late Honorable John Burton Payne, President of the American Red Cross Society.

"The friendship thus started between the distinguished American and Japanese became so cordial that Judge Payne supported Prince Tokugawa at the Brussels Conference and waived in favor of Japan, America's right as the scene of the next International Red Cross Conference. Thus, in the fall of 1934 when the 15th Conference of International Red Cross Societies was held in Tokyo, Judge Payne attended the Conference with a large American delegation of 66 members. The sudden death of Judge Payne after his return to the United States was deeply lamented by Prince Tokugawa, and he held a memorial service in Tokyo in honor of his American friend, which was attended by a large assembly of many representative Japanese citizens.

"Prince Tokugawa was interested in the cause of humanity and international peace. In no undertaking was he more keenly interested than in the promotion of international friendship and mutual understanding between Japan and the United States of America. For many years he was President of the America-Japan Society. At all times, he was glad to welcome visitors from across the Pacific. He was a great adimrer of Abraham Lincoln, exponent of American ideals. His dominant desire was to keep the permanent peace and tranquility of the Pacific Ocean by the joint efforts of Japan and the United States, and to that end he devoted his unstinted services.

"Alas! this great statesman of Japan has passed away. Born to the illustrious house of the Shoguns, Prince Tokugawa worked wholeheartedly for the progress of his country, and for international goodwill. He was a true patriot, a sincere friend of America, and an ardent lover of humanity. He was pre-eminently a great nobleman of international fame. At any time we could ill afford to lose a man of such superior character, and especially at this time of international crisis, the loss of Prince Tokugawa is keenly felt, and deeply lamented by our countrymen."

OPEN MARKING OF ALL PRICES NOW REQUIRED

Revised Anti-Profiteering Ordinance Sets Penalties Possible for Violations

All commodities, whether officially price-fixed or not, must have their respective prices in black and white, and no violations will be overlooked after Monday, according to the Anti-Profiteering Ordinance revised June 24.

A clause of the revised Anti-Profiteering Ordinance concerns profiteering by brokers.

REQUIRES OPEN MARKING

The Anti-Profiteering Ordinance requires the open marking of prices on all commodities. It demands also the separate marking of prices for containers of commodities, and fringement of the new regulations carry severe punishment.

Though price marking has been in force for some time on all saleable goods, authorities have been doing no more than reprimand offenders. Authorities, dissatisfied with the situation, recently decided to enforce the regulations with punishment.

Some of the leading features of the new regulations are:

All commodities, the prices of which were officially fixed, shall be affixed with slips of paper, with a full mention of the fact of their being priced, instead of the heretofore way of stamping a Chinese character meaning "official" in a circle. In the same way, all articles, the prices of which are pegged at the September 18 level of last year, shall be given a clear mention of the fact in place of a brief marking.

STANDARD GOODS ONLY

Those articles so far sold at a great profit simply because the makes of the article slightly differed from the similar goods whose makes are officially standardized and consequently could not be sold at much profit, shall be closely examined in accordance with the provisions of the revised ordinance.

On and after next Monday, the so-called non-standardized articles shall not be allowed unless they are remarkably different from similar "standardized" goods in their shapes, use, and country-wide novelty.

Mentioning the prices of containers of commodities, shall be enforced as much as possible, except in the case of such an article as a package of pigments which cannot be priced separately of its contents and container.

The Metropolitan Police Board, in this connection, will hold a conference soon with dealers in various sections of the city. The same authorities, it is further reported, will be glad to instruct the individual dealers and enlightening them on the spirit of the revised regulation.

CITY ANTI-EPIDEMIC MOVEMENT OPENS WITH LECTURES AT HIBIYA HALL

An anti-epidemic movement, sponsored by the Metropolitan Police Board and the Tokyo Municipal Office, opened Friday and will continue until Sunday.

Today at 1 p.m., 2,800 women belonging to Tokyo's 52 Household Hygiene Societies gathered at the Hibiya Public Hall to hear lectures by Dr. Haruo Hayashi, director of the Public Hygiene Institute; Prof. Sozo Kurahashi of the Tokyo Women's Higher Normal School, and Dr. Jokai Iguchi, director of the epidemic prevention section of the Metropolitan Police Board.

Wednesday, 196 new dysentery patients were reported in Tokyo, this being the largest number for a day since the beginning of this year. Dysentery patients in the capital since the beginning of this year total about 12,000, showing an increase of 1,200 over the figure for the same period last year.

Police authorities will see that restaurant cooks work with clean hands and have appointed an inspector for each group of 30 eating establishments. Inspectors will visit kitchens frequently to see that food is prepared under hygienic conditions.

Berlin Attacks British Action Against French Fleet

Domei Tsushin

BERLIN, July 4—The British Navy's attack against the French battle force off Oran yesterday is described by official Nazi quarters as the "most outrageous action in history," while one commentator remarked sarcastically that Prime Minister Churchill "is capable of perpetrating the most incredible acts in the political and military life of any nation."

The Berlin press loudly attacked Great Britain's latest act, charging that it surpasses the "treason" committed against Poland, Norway, Holland and Belgium whom Britain promised to aid.

FIGHTING MEN RECEIVE PRAISE OF NAVY HEAD

Minister Zengo Yoshida Urges Continued Support Of Nation in China Affair

In reviewing the three year period following the outbreak of the China Affair, Navy Minister Zengo Yoshida expressed to the press Saturday his deep appreciation to the fighters who have taken part in what he termed splendid exploits without historic parallel, under the virtue of His Majesty the Emperor.

Vice-Admiral Yoshida also thanked people at the home front for their untiring zeal.

"For achieving the aim of the present holy war it is a requisite to mold a region of mutual dependence, prosperity and lasting security out of places including not only Japan, Manchoukuo and China but also districts south of us," said Vice-Admiral Yoshida.

"The Imperial Navy is aware of its heavy responsibility and avows to endeavor to accomplish the national objective of bringing new order to East Asia, thus fulfilling its important mission of guarding the country in a united manner.

"The present series of victories by Germany must be the result of its people managing themselves hard while bearing hardships.

"On this occasion we should, all renew our resolve as people and work for invigorating wartime organization of the country, in this manner conquering difficulties with unyielding determination the task of assisting the Throne."

Japanese Exports Show Heavy Gain

Japan's exports for the first half of this year amounted to ¥2,018,980,000, representing an increase of ¥403,456,000 over the same period last year.

Imports totaled ¥1,856,729,000, showing a gain of ¥266,577,000 above the first six months of 1939.

Trading within the yen bloc resulted in an excess export aggregating ¥665,336,000, or a gain of ¥212,519,000 in this category from the first half of 1939.

Commerce with countries outside that bloc brought an excess of import of ¥503,085,000, again with an advance over the same period last year, amounting to ¥75,646,000.

U.S.S.R., Germany Agree To Open More Consulates

Domei Tsushin

MOSCOW, July 5—Indications of increasing commercial relations between Germany and the Soviet Union are seen in the report tonight that Governments of the two countries have agreed to increase consular representation in their respective countries.

German consulates at Leningrad, Vladivostok and Batum which were ordered to be closed several years ago at the height of anti-Soviet feeling in Germany will be opened, it is said. On the other hand the Soviet Union is expected to establish new consulates at Hamburg, Koenigsberg and Vienna.

No French Embassy Reception

The French Ambassador and Mrs. Arsene-Henry wish it to be known that there will be no reception at the French Embassy on July 14.

Social Mass Party

mission will never end. We are firmly determined to further push forward to the consolidation of the new political structure, unifying ourselves all the more."

FORMED IN 1932

The Social Mass Party was formed in 1932 with the annexation of the Japan Laborers and Farmers Party and the Social Democrat Party. Dr. Isoo Abe was the President.

In 1937, the sixth general meeting of the party was held, at which time the party platform was drastically revised, casting away the tendency of the social democracy and advocating the nationalism.

In February 1939, they planned to fuze into the Tohokai Party, led by Seigo Nakano, but the effort failed because both parties assertedly insisted on having their respective leader as presidents.

In the 75th Diet session, the Social Mass Party split into two parts. Five of its parliamentary members led by President Abe, voted against the expulsion of Takao Saito, former Minseito member, from the Diet, and were expelled from the party.

ed to maintain the status quo of French authorities as the result of their conference held at Singapore, according to press reports from Singapore circulated by certain foreign news agencies.

French Indo-China will probably continue as one of the members of the Allies, even after rapture of diplomatic relations between Britain and France according to the press reports in question which quote a statement allegedly issued on July 4 by the Governor-General of French Indo-China announcing that the French colonies will remain as members of the Allies until they gain the final victory in the war.

ON WAY TO KARUIZAWA

Prince Fumimaro Konoye upon whom depends the future developments of the proposed single party plan appeared at Omiya Station Saturday afternoon where he boarded the 1:50 p.m. train for Karuizawa. He is expected to return in five days. He seems to be talking "off the record" to an inquisitive reporter probably about what he intends to do in the next few days.

COVERING THE WORLD

From German Sources

BAKU RAID EXPOSED

BERLIN, July 4—The sixth of the secret documents of the French General Staff published by the German Foreign Office is a strictly secret report of the French Ambassador in Ankara, Massigli, dispatched to the French Foreign Ministry by special courier, in which Massigli discusses in detail the possibilities of Anglo-French air raids on the town of Baku in the Russian oil district.

In this lengthy letter which carefully weighs the arguments pro and con, Massigli recommends the carrying out of an air raid on Baku from the region of Djesireh in Northern Syria which would of course imply a crossing of Turkish and Iranian territory.

The French Ambassador recommends that the Turkish Government should not be notified before hand of the action "since this would be an unnecessary embarrassment for the Turkish Government."

AIR ATTACK PLANNED

BERLIN, July 4—That an understanding had been reached between the general staffs of the British and French air forces on April 5, 1940, concerning an air attack on oilfields in the Caucasus and how the operations were planned is revealed in the French general staff document No. 8 published by the German Foreign Office.

The document reads "April 5, 1940 (strictly secret). Concerns air attacks on oilfields in Caucasus. Understanding reached in the headquarters of the air forces. The Franco-British attack is directed exclusively against oil refineries and harbor facilities of Batum, Poti, Grozny, Baku. It may be taken for granted that within the first six days between 30 and 35 per cent of the Caucasus refineries and harbor facilities will be destroyed. Six French and three British air squadrons, totaling between 90 and 100 planes are to be employed. The French groups will be equipped so as to be able to attack Baku at given dates. They will be composed of two groups of Farman 221 and four groups of Glen-Martin planes fitted with reserve tanks. They will be able to drop on every flight against the enemy a total of 70 tons of bombs on approximately 100 refineries. The enemy air defense and the assumed presence of German chasers will considerably reduce the effectiveness of this operation."

Gibraltar Bombed

MADRID, July 5—A French seaplane dropped bombs over the British fortress of Gibraltar at 6 a.m. today, says a report from Algeciras. British aircraft guns opened fire on the plane. Further details are not known in the Spanish capital but it is assumed that the French plane wanted to revenge the British assault on the French fleet lying at Oran.

STOCKHOLM, July 5—The first air raid alarm in the British fortress of Gibraltar since the beginning of the war was sounded this morning, it is officially announced in London. Madrid reports that a French plane dropped bombs on Gibraltar thus seems to have been confirmed. No details were announced in London, however.

PROTEST LODGED

STOCKHOLM, July 5—Despite the suspension of diplomatic relations between France and Britain, the French Charge d'Affaires in London, Cambon, called at the Foreign Office this afternoon in order to lodge an energetic protest with the British Government against the British assault on the French Fleet at Oran. It is not yet known when the French Charge d'Affaires will leave London with the personnel of the French Embassy.

From British Sources

No Official Information

LONDON, July 5—No official information has yet been received here of the intention of the German-controlled French Government headed by Marshal Petain to break off diplomatic relations with Great Britain. It was, however, reported by the Deutches Nachrichten Buro (official German News agency) that the Reich Government had received an official notification to this effect from the Petain Government at Vichy.

FLEET ANCHORED

ALEXANDRIA, July 5—French war vessels are still calmly anchored in the harbor here by the side of British vessels in cooperation with which they resisted an Italian air attack on July 3. According to British sources, the position is still in abeyance, the French not having yet made a decision. No French ship will be allowed to leave to surrender to the enemy, however, all French sailors in the port remained aboard their ships.

STATUS QUO KEPT

SINGAPORE, July 5—The British and French authorities are maintaining the status quo regarding French Indo-China and the French naval forces in the Far East, it was officially stated here today. It is understood that an agreement to this effect was reached at an Anglo-French conference at Saigon.

ITALY ATTACKS BRITAIN

ROME, July 5—Editors here writhed in adjectival fury today as they reported the British action taken at Oran to ensure that units of the French Fleet should not fall into enemy hands. "Gangster," "bandit" and "pirate" were the most usual epithets hurled at Mr. Churchill and "bestiality," "despotism" and "hypocrisy" the qualities attributed to the British nation.

BERLIN ALSO ATTACKS

BERLIN, July 5—Comment here in official circles responsible for the unannounced attacks on Austria, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Denmark, Norway, Holland, Luxembourg and Belgium describes the British action to ensure that her Ally's fleet should not fall into the hands of the historic enemy of France as "a stab in the back."

The press also announces that the German-controlled Petain Government have issued an order to intercept British merchantmen and another that British aircraft or ships are to be attacked if they approach within 12 miles of French territory or colonies.

U. S. Sympathetic

NEW YORK, July 5—Senator Key Pittman, head of the Foreign Affairs Committee, commenting on the British action at Oran said today that he believed every man, women and child, every loyal one, would agree that England had done the only thing, and would reach out and cheer for the British in such a drastic and horrible but necessary decision.

The New York Herald-Tribune writes today of the "total moral bankruptcy of the Petain Government which could betray its ally and then convert itself into a tool of the Nazi Government. This is no longer France; if it were, then France would no longer count."

AIR RAID CONTINUES

LONDON, July 5—Tonight's Air Ministry communique states: "Yesterday R. A. F. Bombers made daylight attacks on oil refineries at Hanover and Emmerich where large fires were started. Hits were registered on objectives at Hamm and Soest.

"The Amsterdam and Brussels airports were also attacked. Bombs fell on both airdromes and on the hangers where fires were started. One of our aircraft is missing."

ITALIAN FIGHTERS DOWNED

CAIRO, July 5—Today's Royal Air Force communique states: "Nine Italian fighters were shot down yesterday in an air battle over Sidi Barra, a small Egyptian town some 250 miles west of Alexandria.

In one engagement six British fighters fought with nine of the enemy and brought down seven. One of our planes is missing but probably made a forced landing on our side of the frontier.

CAMBON RESIGNS

LONDON, July 5—Roger Cambon, Charge d'Affaires at the French Embassy today informed Lord Halifax, the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, that he had placed his resignation in the hands of the French Government. He wished no longer to remain in the service of a German-controlled administration. Monsieur Corbin, the French Ambassador in London, took the same course last week.

URUGUAY ACTS

MONTEVIDEO, July 5—General Alfredo Baldomir, President of the Republic of Uruguay last night broadcast a stirring appeal for a strong policy of Pan-Americanism among all the states of Latin America. He said that the 21 nations forming the western world had unanimously voiced the desire for such a policy in the face of Nazi threats.

OBERLIN DEAN PAN-PACIFIC CLUB SPEAKER

U.S. University Students Are Isolationists, Group Told by Dr. T. W. Graham

Dr. T. W. Graham, dean of the school of Theology at Oberlin College, who with Mrs. Graham is on his way to South Africa, was the guest speaker at the Pan-Pacific Club luncheon meeting Friday.

He said his current visit is his second to Japan, and that he would like to say something of the sentiments of the group of people with whom he had been associated for years.

During recent years the group of men and women enrolled at Universities and colleges has increased to about one and a half million. A higher percentage than ever before are entering the schools of higher learning. Dr. Graham said when he was a student, only three per cent of the men and women attended college as compared with 19 per cent at present. These constitute an interesting group of men and women born in the early twenties at a time when the United States was prosperous. In their early years, their families were secure and they believed that prosperity had a rising curb. At the end of the first decade they received the rude shock of finding their families in insecurity.

PRAISES N.Y.O.

At present with changing economic situation it is more secure now than a few years ago, possibly due to the National Youth Organization, and the men and women graduates of colleges and Universities may find immediately employment upon graduation.

The second thing is that students are increasingly concerned with the world situation. When Dr. Graham attended school, he explained, only exceptional students were concerned in world affairs but at present, due to the world situation, they are all far more interested in the political development of their country. As they look out into this world, they are inclined to belive that the United States should be isolated within the Americas, but they are less concerned about South America than the Northern half of America. They are isolationists, he said.

STUDENTS OPPOSE WAR

The students of Oberlin come from 44 out of the 48 States and from 12 or 14 foreign countries. Consequently their opinion is wide-spread. A poll was taken to find their opinion in case America became involved in the European war and 85 per cent of the students said that they would not take an active part in it. This poll, however, was taken before the invasion of Holland and Belgium and the recent developments in France, he explained. This change in the European situation might affect their opinion somewhat but he expressed confidence that most of them would maintain the same attitude.

Thirdly, he said, few men of his age have made a study of the present world problem. Four men took part in such a study, one from the Department of Economics, one from the Department of Philosophy, one from the Department of Political Science and himself from the Department of History.

A number of interesting men came to share their thoughts and the group of men became more and more convinced peace could not be found among the people in the world by signing for a peace. He expressed belief that the world could learn something from the 150 years experience of the United States.

He also said that a far larger group of men and women are interested in religion and that the world problem could not be solved unless there was a revival in religion. Students are taking religion far more seriously within the last two or three years and there has been a marked increase in the enrolment in voluntary work and an increase in individual, work, he concluded.

YOKOYAMA QUITS TOHOKU POSTS

Kawai Slated to Take Over Presidency of Northeast Corporations

Takeo Kawai, executive director of the People's Bank, will take office Monday as president of both the Tohoku Development and Tohoku Power Development corporations, succeeding Sukenari Yokoyama who tendered his resignation Saturday.

Mr. Yokoyama resigned as the head of the two semi-governmental concerns for developing northeast Japan because of personal reasons.

His written resignation was presented to Sotaro Ishiwata, Chief Secretary of the Cabinet, by the outgoing executive of the twin Tohoku corporations.

KAWAI WELL KNOWN

His successor, Mr. Kawai, who agreed to take the posts, 57, comes from Kagoshima Prefecture and served the Finance Ministry nearly a decade after his graduation from Tokyo Imperial University. He formerly filled the Ministry positions of director of the deposit and bank bureaus. In 1934 he became the assistant chief of the Cabinet Bureau of Manchurian Affairs and held the post until March 1936 when he was made the Finance Vice-Minister.

When the Hayashi Cabinet was formed a year later he took over the directorship of the Cabinet Legislative Bureau, leaving when the Cabinet fell in June. Since June last year he has been director for the People's Bank.

HIRAIDE MAY BE NAMED

Teizo Hiraide, until recently the Director of Electricity Board in the Communications Ministry, is expected to become vice-president of the Tohoku Power Development Corporation.

An ex-official of the Finance Ministry will probably be selected by the Government to succeed Mr. Kawai at the People's Bank. The bank is also a semi-official institution.

Rice Distribution Plan Aired by Kodama, Shimada

Home Minister Hideo Kodama called on Agriculture and Forestry Minister Toshio Shimada Saturday afternoon at the official residence of Mr. Shimada. During a 20 minute conference they discussed the manner in which rice distribution is being carried out throughout the country. Before leaving, the Home Minister stressed the need of further strengthening the rice distribution system.

HORIGUCHI TAKES DUNDEE IN 12 ROUND DECISION

Eagle Gets Nod Over Aizawa In Semi-Final; Large Crowd Sees Full Card at Korakuen

"Piston" Horiguchi, 125 lbs, of Japan, outpointed Young Dundee, 128 lbs, of the Philippines in the 12-round feature bout at Korakuen Stadium Sunday night before a large number of fans.

Horiguchi got in his most telling blows at close quarters, hitting equally well with both hands. Dundee was best with long round-house swings and had Horiguchi backing up on several occasions.

In the fourth and fifth rounds Horiguchi showed his best attack. Having backed Dundee against the ropes he proceeded to do some fast punching with both hands. In the fifth a cut was opened over Dundee's left eye and from then on the fight was a messy affair, if not a slugfest.

EIGHTH BEST

The eighth round was Dundee's best. He won it by scoring with long punches which kept Horiguchi on the defense through most of the round. On one occasion a long left flush on the cheek hurt Horiguchi.

The first three rounds were even with neither one landing hard punches. From the tenth round on Dundee's face was in bad condition, blood from the cut over the left eye blinding him and smearing Horiguchi's face.

In the eleventh stanza Horiguchi tried for a knockdown with a long uppercut, but missed, and Dundee kept moving. The last stanza was even with both fighters showing fatigue.

FIGHT SATISFACTORY

This was the second meeting of the two within a month. In the previous fight Horiguchi took the decision in a dull bout. Last night both displayed more willingness to mix it up, and although there were no knockdowns, the fight was satisfactory to the fans.

In the semi-final ten round affair, between Joe Eagle and Taro Aizawa, the former won the judges' decision by scoring with hard punches to the body.

During the fight both Eagle and Aizawa claimed foul blows, but the referee thought otherwise and kept the fighters on the go. Half-a-minute of the third round, a left to Joe's stomach put him on his knees and a foul claim. Getting no response from the referee, the Filipino started a fast two hand attack which caught Aizawa by surprise and by moving fast avoided Joe's hard punches.

Aizawa was hit with a low blow in the sixth stanza. The referee warned Eagle and after a minutes rest, the fight was resumed. This was Aizawa's round on a foul.

EAGLE SCORES

From the seventh round on Eagle scored with hard puches to the body, which slowed up Aizawa considerably. In the eigth stanza Joe scored with a long right to Aizawa's stomach, which followed with a one, two to the face had Aizawa in a bad fix, however the Filipino was too spent to follow up with telling blows.

The last two rounds both fighters did little punching, with Aizawa showing more fatigue than Eagle. The winner weighed 125, the loser 127.

In a eight rounder S. Isagawa, 114, won the decision over T. Kushihashi, 103. The fight throughout was fast with both fighters willing to stand toe to toe slugging it out.

SCORES NICELY

Kushihashi scored nicely with both hands, but the weight disadvantage was too much of an handicap. Isagawa hurt Kushihashi in the sixth with two hard punches to the jaw, and followed it up with a two hand attack which had his opponent hanging on the ropes at the end of the round.

There were no knockdowns but the fast pace of the fight kept the fans in an uproar throughout the bout.

In the four-rounders Sauda, 117, took the decision over Kanemitsu, 117, by starting out fast and taking the offensive throughout the fight.

In the opener, Ishida, scored a technical knockout over Yamaguchi in two-minutes forty-seven seconds of the second round.

Nakama Wins A.A.U. 440-Yard Title

Domei Tsushin

SANTA BARBARA, California, July 6—With 16-year-old Bunmei Nakama setting the pace for the Hawaiians yesterday by winning the mile swim, Kiyoshi Nakama, big brother of the Maui pair, today won the 440-yard freestyle at the Amateur Athletic Union's national outdoor swimfest. He finished six feet ahead of Paul Herren, of the Los Angeles A. C. in 4:50.4.

Later the two Nakamas teamed with Jose Balmores and Takashi Hirose and splashed to a new American record of 9:17.3 in the 880-yard relay.

Adolph Kiefer continued his record-breaking performance when he won the 100-meter backstroke in 1:04.7, 1/10 second faster than his recognized world's record. In this race, Kiefer also was clocked in the record time of 58.1 seconds at 100-yard distance, and 1:05.5 at the 110-yard mark.

LEW JENKINS AND ARMSTRONG CLASH JULY 17

New Lightweight Champ Who Dethroned Ambers Is Signed for N. Y. Bout

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, July 4—The New York State Athletic Commission has approved a 12-round, non-title welterweight fight between Henry Armstrong, welterweight champion of the world, and Lew Jenkins, of Sweetwater, Texas, newly-crowned lightweight champion of the world.

The two will meet in the Polo Grounds, home ground of the New York Giants Baseball Club, on July 17.

Jenkins won the lightweight title from Lou Ambers on May 10, when he scored a technical knockout over him in the third round.

BAER BEATS TONY

Domei Tsushin

NEWARK, July 2—Max Baer, former playboy heavyweight champion of the world whose ring career has been at best a desultory affair for the last four years, tonight startled the boxing world by scoring a technical knockout victory over Tony Galento in the seventh round for a battle scheduled for 15 rounds.

It was one of the most freakish and at the same time most vicious fights on record. Both Baer and Galento are of the school emphasizing that almost anything goes in the prize ring, and neither fighter appealed to the referee at any time, in spite of fact that blows were landed almost everywhere on their bodies from ankle to scalp.

The sight of Baer, standing many inches over six feet, facing Galento, standing only a few inches over five feet, was incongruous to an extreme, but the huge crowd packing the arena here soon forgot the incongruity in the excitement of the battle.

GALENTO FAVORED

The defeat of Galento came as a profound surprise, since he was established as something of a favorite on the basis of comparative performances of each fighter against Joe Louis.

Baer revealed all the thundering punching power that piled up so many knockouts at the height of his career.

Galento weighed in at 224 pounds while Baer tipped the beam at 221. Both men were over their best fighting weight.

AUSTRALIA RESERVOIR OF BRITISH MAN POWER

There Are 575,000 Single Men Between Ages 18-35

Reuter

SYDNEY, July 3—An analysis of Australia's man-power shows that there are about 575,000 single men between the ages of 18 and 35 in the Commonwealth. These and other census figures have been analysed by the Man-Power Committee in preparing plans for progressive mobilisation as the war situation may demand.

Liability to serve in the citizen forces for home defence in time of war applies to all Australians between the ages of 18 and 60. Under the Defence Act men so liable for military service are divided into five groups which could be called up in the following order:

1 Unmarried men, aged 18 to 35, including widows without children. 2. Unmarried men aged 34 to 45. 3. Married men aged 18 to 35, including widowers with children. 4. Married men aged 35 to 45, including widowers with children. 5. All men aged 45 to 60.

The latest available census figures show that the biggest reservoir of man power lies in the first group, which comprises about 575,000 single men. Group 2, containing about 56,000 unmarried men aged 35 to 45, is by far the smallest. Group 3 contains about 360,000 men. In group 4 there are nearly 400,000 married men aged 35 to 45. Group 5 contains about 540,000 men aged 45 to 60.

In its estimates, the Man-Power Committee has taken into consideration the number of men already in uniform, the number physically unfit for military service, and the exemptions granted under the reserved industries provisions.

Prohibition in Bombay Quashed

Reuter

BOMBAY, July 3—Prohibition in Bombay is virtually ended by a further decision of the High Court saying that legislation prohibiting possession of liquor is beyond the power or authority of Provincial Legislature.

Customs revenue from liquor being a matter for the Central Government, provinces cannot prohibit the import of liquor.

Reshevsky Wins U.S. Chess Title

Reuter

NEW YORK, July 3—Samuel Reshevsky retained the United States chess championship after three weeks of playing, during which he was undefeated through 17 rounds of the tournament.

The title rested upon the outcome of Reshevsky's last match with Reuben Fine, who entered the final half a point behind Reshevsky. The result, after two sessions which lasted seven hours, was a draw in 63 moves.

Reshevsky, who is 25 years old, won the Frank J. Marshall Trophy through his victory. He came to America from Poland at the age of eight, when he was known as a boy chess prodigy. He is now recognized as one of the world's outstanding players.

Schools Keep Cricket Going in England

Reuter

LONDON, July 4—Although some counties are doing as much as is possible in the circumstances and clubs are doing their bit with one and two-day games, the future of English cricket is with the schools.

It is reassuring to look at the M.C.C.'s plans and see that they are sending teams to many schools this summer. Nothing gives the right impetus to schools so much as visits from good team who not only provide a good game, but show the boys how cricket should be played.

Eton, Harrow and other big public schools are among those already visited, as well as many of the less-known grammar schools. The appeal is being made as wide as possible.

Well-known cricketers are acting as managers of the sides, H. D. G. Leveson-Gower for instance, taking charge of the team to visit Winchester and Sir Pelham Warner that sent to Rugby.

A new fixture is Schools versus Officer Cadet training units.

RAILWAY ACCIDENTS INCREASE 60 PER CENT IN THREE YEARS

Railway accidents in Japan during 1939 showed a increase of 60 per cent as compared with 1936, a year before the outbreak of the China Affair. The increase is due to the increase in passengers, the extension of the distance for a train to cover, and unskilled operators, according to the Miyako.

In 1936, accidents numbered 5,525 and 196 persons were injured or killed, while the next year 6,885 accidents took place in which 242 persons were injured or killed. In 1938, 7,929 accidents occurred, 343 persons being injured or killed. Last year there was 8,325 accidents and 540 persons were injured or killed.

SHORTAGE OF OPERATORS

Although some of the accidents were unavoidable, most of them were to unskilled operators, caused by the shortage of man power.

Since the outbreak of the China Affair, the transportation of passengers and goods has increased. Many railway officials have been called to the colors or have taken jobs in munition factories.

In this connection, unskilled operators are sent to the work to fill the vacancy, some of them being no more than 18 years old.

NEED MORE TRAINING

Before the China Affair took place operators were trained for one year and a half before engaging in actual work. Now they work after four months training, if they pass the examination.

Counter-measures for such situation are under consideration by the officials concerned, says the same paper.

DANISH SWIMMERS SET WORLD MARKS

American Women's Names Disappear from Records

Reuter

NEW YORK, July 5—The complete disappearance of the names of American women swimmers from the new world swimming records is revealed by the current official swimming handbooks of the Amateur Athletic Union, just off the press. This booklet has the first printed list of world records that were passed at the recent meeting of the International Swimming Federation.

Although American women were missing from the list, American men continued to rule the waves. They held 25 of the 31 world marks, including every freestyle record from 100 yards to 500 meters, four of the six breaststroke standards, all of the backstroke ones, and three of the four relay records.

Japan and Germany are the only two nations to make even the slightest challenge to the male stars of the United States. The Japanese held four records and the Reich two. High man is Jack Medica, now assistant swimming coach at Columbia University, New York, who still has seven marks. The oldest record is the 51 seconds for 100 yards set by Johnny Weissmuller in 1927.

Ranghild Hveger, pretty Danish girl, is the trail-blazer in the women's division with the astounding number of 14 records. She holds every freestyle mark from 100 yards to a mile, except two. Denmark holds seventeen women's records in all, while Holland is second with seven. Two records go to Brazil and one each to Belgium and Germany.

GOLFER GENE SARAZEN CLAIMS HE CAN STILL BEAT YOUNGSTERS

Reuter

NEW YORK, July 5—Far from looking forward to retirement, the American professional, Gene Sarazen, at the age of 38, is mapping out a campaign for at least three more years of tournament golf, and he says he can still beat the youngsters.

"There's no reason why, at my age, I shouldn't still be good enough to win," Sarazen told Reuter.

"A few tournaments and some practice at home and I'll be ready to go. That's because Walter Hagen and Bobby Jones and I learned the game differently from the youngsters coming up today. These fellows such as Sam Snead, Ben Hogan and Ray Mangrum, can all hit the ball a mile and straight, too. Still they are not shotmakers. They're not well-grounded in fundamentals.

MUST BE CONSISTENT

I don't believe they have the type of game that will serve them as well at 35 as it does at 25. Yet a good golf game should hold up that way—just as a man with a good physique can, with proper care, be just as healthy at 40 as at 30."

Sarazen contends that things have been made too easy for the present day players, both professionals and amateurs. The courses and equipments have been vastly improved, greens are watered the moment there's a chance of their getting even a little too fast, and there's a club designed for practically every shot you have to hit.

TOURS DIFFICULT

"I'll withhold my final opinion on these boys until they're past 30," said Sarazen "That will be the big test. If they can keep winning then, and winning the big ones, I'll be ready to concede they're fine golfers."

He believes, too, that the players today face a definite hazard in the number of tournaments they make. "Not that I'm not all in favor of winter tours," he explained. "It's a fine thing—does a lot for golf and brings out many new stars, but the boys should pick their spots better. If they don't and try to make every tournament and practice besides, they'll be all burned out before they ever reach 30."

GENERAL NISHIO MAKES SHANGHAI INSPECTION TRIP

China Affair Anniversary Programs Held by Japanese In Several Chinese Cities

Domei Tsushin

SHANGHAI, July 7—On the occasion of the third anniversary of the China Affair, General Toshizo Nishio, commander-in-chief of the Japanese Expeditionary forces in China, made a three-hour inspection in the International Settlement and French Concession here.

Accompanied by his staff officers, General Nishio shortly after 9 o'clock proceeded to the Park Hotel at Well Road where the General met W. J. Keswick, chairman of the Shanghai Municipal Council, Major K. M. Bourne, commissioner of the Council police force, and C. Akaji, deputy commissioner of the police. In the meeting, the authorities of the Municipal Council assured General Nishio that they would redouble their efforts for elimination of anti-Japanese elements in the International Settlement.

General Nishio visited the Natural Scientific Research Institute in the French Concession at 11:30. After hearing an explanation by the chief of the institute of its activities, the Japanese commander-in-chief received the commissioner of the Municipal Council police of the French Concession.

At noon, General Nishio offered silent prayers for Japanese war dead during the China Affair.

GENEAL ANDO SPEAKS

Domei Tsushin

CANTON, July 7—Clarifying his firm determination to root out the anti-Japanese activities in the areas adjoining to South China, Lieutenant-General Rikichi Ando, commander-in-chief of the Japanese Expeditionary forces in South China, spoke at a mass meeting held today for the East Asia Construction Day at the Sun Yat-sen's memorial Hall here, discussing the third anniversary of the China Affair.

"Thanks to the combined efforts of Japanese officers and men and the strenuous endeavors of far-sighted Chinese people, a steady progress is being made in the colossal task of construction of a new order in East Asia since the opening of the military operations in South China," said General Ando.

"However, situated next to South China, several areas which are playing parts as bases for colonizing China are placing obstacles in the way of the Japan's construction of a new order in East Asia. We are highly indignant to see it.

"Every possible effort, therefore, should be directed by Japanese and Chinese to crushing the remaining anti-Japanese influence and also complete termination of the hostile activities made in these districts which form a cancer to the projected establishment of a new order.

We are resolutely determined to proceed with destruction of the Chungking Regime still offering anti-Japanese armed resistance and at the same time, to put an end to hostile activities in the areas adjoining to South China, in parallel with the Government's policy."

PROGRAM AT NANKING

Domei Tsushin

NANKING, July 7—On the occasion of the third anniversary of the outbreak of the China incident, Japanese residents here renewed their determination to do their bit in bringing about a new order in East Asia.

A meeting of Japanese residents was held in the Toa Theater at 9 a.m. Representatives of the Army and Navy made lectures in commemoration of the anniversary, strongly appealing to them for full cooperation.

At the headquarters of the Japanese expeditionary forces, Lieutenant-General Seishiro Itagaki, chief of staff, made an address of instructions before an assembly of officers.

Japanese children here addressed their friends at home from the Nanking Broadcasting Station at 9:50. Their songs were sent on an international hookup.

PEKING OBSERVES DAY

Domei Tsushin

PEKING, July 7—The third anniversary of the China Affair was solemnly observed at Tientsin, Kalgan, Shihmen, Taiyuan, Tsinan, Tsingtao, and Inner Mongolia as well as Peking today.

At Peking, memorial services in honor of the Japanese soldiers who fell on the front during the China Affair were solemnized at the Ichimonjiyama Hill in the outskirts of the city at 10 a.m. Participating were approximately 15,000 Japanese residents.

A mass meeting of Japanese residents followed the memorial services. The meeting was ended with the shouting of three "Banzai" for His Majesty the Emperor.

At 3 p.m. a christening ceremony took place at the local air field of a patriotic plane constructed with funds donated by the Korean residents in Peking.

TADA MAKES PLEA

Domei Tsushin

PEKING, July 6—On the eve of the third anniversary of the China Affairs, Lieutenant-General Hayao Tada, supreme commander of the Japanese forces in North China, told to the press the following:

"On the occasion of the third anniversary of the Sino-Japanese hostilities, what we should bear in mind is that we should not spoil the holy sacrifice made by those who devoted their lives to the defense of the country. For this purpose we should do our duty.

"We should do our bits being deeply impressed on our minds by the gracious word in the Imperial rescripts granted on the occasion of the first anniversary of the China Incident to the officers and men of army and navy as well as to nation.

"Doing this, we can carry out the intentions of those who were killed in this holy campaign."

FARLEY CONFERS WITH ROOSEVELT ON CONVENTION

Says President Revealed Intentions But Postmaster Declines to Disclose Them

Domei Tsushin

HYDE PARK, July 7—President Roosevelt today conferred at length with Postmaster General James A. Farley, national chairman of the Democratic Party, as the latter prepared to depart for Chicago tomorrow to supervise final preparations for the Democratic National Convention which opens July 15.

Although Mr. Farley, who is expected to dominate the political machine which will assemble at Chicago next week to nominate a candidate for president, declined to give any clues as to the President's intentions, it was reliably understood that Mr. Roosevelt had secretly disclosed his historic decision on the third-term issue.

DECLINES COMMENT

Interviewed by the press, the Postmaster General declared, "I had a very frank and satisfactory talk and I have a full knowledge of Mr. Roosevelt's thoughts and what he has in mind. However, any announcement must come from the President himself."

Earlier it was reported by certain local newspapers that the Postmaster General had decided to resign soon as a member of the Roosevelt Cabinet to become president of the New York Yankee Baseball Club. This report gave rise to rumors that Mr. Farley, himself a potential candidate and opposed to the Third Term, is quitting because the President had chosen to run.

Mr. Farley failed to confirm or deny the rumors; however, he described reports as "they're nice stories."

DELEGATES PLEDGED

Most political observers, who have been following developments at Washington, believe that the Chief Executive will run as it is learned that more than two-thirds of the delegates, who are attending the Chicago Convention, already are pledged to draft Mr. Roosevelt regardless of the latter's intentions.

Some quarters significantly declared that any decision to the contrary by the President now when the Convention is only a week ahead, might create an uncontrollable split within the Democratic Party and bring disastrous results for the Party's future.

Kiefer Sets New 330-Yard Individual Medley Mark

Domei Tsushin

SANTA BARBARA, California, July 7—Adolph Kiefer, holder of nearly all existing world records in the backstroke event, today established an American record at a new distance, the 330-yard individual medley, when he won the race in 3:58.6 on the final day of the Amateur Athletic Union's national outdoor swimming and diving championships which began here last Thursday.

Kiefer was also credited with breaking the accepted American 300-meter mark of 4:02, set by him in 1937.

Otto Jaretz, Kiefer's teammate, established another record in winning the 110-yard freestyle in 58.4 seconds.

The Maui team from Hawaii, running up a total of 41 points, won the team championship for the second consecutive year. The Chicago Towers Club, composed of Kiefer and Jaretz, swept into second place with 33 points, and the Los Angeles A. C. was third with 18 points.

Armistice Railway Car Displayed In Reich Capital

Domei Tsushin

BERLIN, July 7—The historic railway car in which Chancellor Adolf Hitler dictated Germany's peace terms to the French armistice commission on June 21 was drawn into Anhalt railway station yesterday to be placed on display there indefinitely before proud Berlin citizens.

Once reserved for the private use of Marshal Ferdinand Foch, the car was the scene of the armistice of November 11, 1918, when Allied leaders brought Germany to its knees. It was to erase every vestige of that humiliation that Chancellor Hitler re-enacted the second armistice in that same car but this time with the roles of conqueror and vanquished reversed.

Rumania Strengthens Army Along Border

Domei Tsushin

BUCHAREST, July 7—The Rumanian Army tonight tightened its nation-wide precautions against any emergency following authentic reports that the Soviet Union is still pouring additional armed motorized divisions into Rumania's last northern territories.

Although the high command reported that "all is quiet" along the new Russo-Rumanian frontiers, fears persisted that the Red Army might attempt a new thrust into the heart of Rumania at the earliest opportunity. Frontier guards are being strengthened and fortifications are being hastily erected to meet any new tthreat.

Meanwhile, there are increasing indications that the newly-formed pro-Nazi Gigurtu Government is planning to proceed cautiously in carrying out its extreme pro-Nazi program as it is learned that Germany fears that extremist measures at present might provoke internal disorders and injure Rumania's productivity in a crucial year of war.

Peace Suggestions Mark China Meet

Domei Tsushin

HONGKONG, July 8—The seventh plenary session of the Central Executive and Supervisory Committees after a stormy course was brought to a close on Friday night, according to a telegram reaching here from Chungking.

The feature of the seventh plenary session of the Central Executive and Supervisory Committees is that the question of peace which had never been allowed to be talked in the past was discussed at the meeting, though nothing definite was arrived at in this connection.

It is generally believed that the question of peace will be referred to the Central Executive Committee for further study.

According to the Chungking message, in his closing address Chiang Kai-shek laid stress on the point that whether war or peace, the decision must be supported by the unanimous will of the nation.

Sweden Wants Peace; Will Build Defenses

Domei Tsushin

STOCKHOLM, July 7—Sweden's prime task is to keep out of war but at the same time she must continue to build up her defenses because the future of Europe still is gravely uncertain, Premier Albin Hansson declared in a speech to the Swedish nation tonight.

"Sweden must keep out of the war, but this problem cannot be regarded as solved until the present state of unrest in the world is eliminated," he said, adding that because of the uncertain future, Sweden must be prepared militarily for every eventuality.

The Premier welcomed the end of the Scandinavian conflict between Norway and Germany, asserting that the end of hostilities is of the greatest importance. Sweden, he added, cannot ignore the fact that France also has capitulated.

Bird Whistling Contest

The first Japan-American bird whistling contest was held between Guy C. Caldwell who arrived in Tokyo recently and Suyekichi Tanaka, last Friday at the Dai-Iti hotel. The veteran American expert imitated vocally about 10 American birds while the Japanese competitor who is 26 years old, imitated the bush warbler, other popular Japanese birds and even the cat and dog. They will meet in another contest some time in August.

A post-card was returned to the sender 29 years after it was posted, without having reached the addressee. The sender, the Yanagida store at Nemuro, Hokkaido, posted it on October 18, 1911, addressing it to the Hakodate branch of the Toyo marine insurance company. It was returned to the sender a few days ago with a post-office tag saying that there was no such addressee.

About 10,000 persons went up Mt. Fuji from Omiya, Yoshida and Subashiri Saturday night to offer prayers in connection with the third anniversary Sunday of the outbreak of the China Affair.

Student Meditators

Zazen, or Buddhist spiritual training requiring meditation for a long time in a sitting posture, is becoming popular among students in Tokyo. A recent survey by the Education Ministry revealed that this form of spiritual training is practised by 651 students of the Tokyo Imperial University, 173 of other Government universities, 74 of private universities and 489 of higher schools.

Book on Buddhist Arts

Copies of History of Buddhist Art in Japan, published by the International Buddhist Society in Tokyo on July 6, will be sent to various cultural organizations abroad shortly. Edited under direction of Dr. Tetsujiro Inouye, the book contains detailed accounts on Buddhist architecture, sculpture, industrial art and painting by Minoru Ooka and Nobuo Kumagai, experts of the Education Ministry. The cultural work section of the Foreign Office and the Imperial Household Museum in Tokyo helped in the compilation of the book.

Anglo-French Clash In Caribbean Feared

Domei Tsushin

ORUBA, Dutch West Indies, July 7—Open fears of an Anglo-French naval clash in the Caribbean were expressed by Dutch circles tonight following the sudden departure this morning of the French auxiliary cruiser, Estrele, reportedly for Martinique.

The 2,400-ton cruiser weighed anchor early this morning assertedly heading for Martinique to bolster French defenses there. A clash is feared because the British are reported to be blockading Martinique to prevent any possible German seizure.

The Estrele has been in harbor here since May 12 when British and French naval units were landed in the Dutch East Indies to guard the islands against any possible sabotage by German agents.

THE CHOICE OF THE MULTITUDE

CALIFORNIA ALL-STAR TEAM COMING AUGUST 3 FOR NINE GAME SERIES

Visiting Quintet Easily Won Pacific Coast Title, Placed Third in U.S. Meet

At the invitation of the Japan Basketball Association, the University of Southern California basketball team will make a tour of Japan, Manchoukuo and Korea this summer.

Leaving Los Angeles July 17, the team will arrive in Yokohama August 3 on board the N.Y.K. liner

Kenji Uyesugi

Tatuta Maru. On August 6 the first of the series of nine games will be played.

The U.S.C. team was one of the strongest teams in the United States, last season having annexed the championship of the Pacific Coast Conference, besides reaching the semi-finals of the Amateur Athletic Union National Collegiate Tournament.

EASILY WON TITLE

In capturing the championship of the Coast Conference they defeated Oregon State College, the Northern Division Champions by a wide margin. In the A.A.U. tournament they were defeated by Kansa University by the score of 43-42, taking third place behind Indian and Kansas Universities.

The team is led by Ralph Vaughn, one of the greatest players of the U.S.A. Among his honors, he is credited with breaking Stanford University's Henry Luisetti's season record of scoring 184 points. Last season Vaughn scored 192 points.

INTEREST IN GAME MOUNTS

Since the victory of the Japanese over the All-Star Canadian team last year, interest in basketball here has shown a tremendous growth. Fans are describing the coming games as for the "world's championship."

To present a worthy opponent, the Japan Basketball Association will select an all-Japanese team besides an all-collegiate aggregation.

Among the visiting athletes, a Nisei is listed as the manager. He is Kenji Uyesugi from Colusa, California.

Following four days of games here the visitors will journey to Osaka and cities in Manchoukuo and Korea.

The personnel of the U.S.C. team and a brief description follows:

Ralph Vaughn—Forward, the outstanding Pacific Coast basketballer, who won All-American honors. In his Sophomore year was second in scoring to the great Henry "Hank" Luisetti of Stanford. Last year he led the Pacific Coast Conference in scoring and this year topped the field again. A "team" man, his passing and all-around playing ability makes him invaluable to his team. He is one of the cleanest players and has less fouls called on him than any man in the Coast Conference.

Jack Morrison—Forward, six-feet tall and weighs 175 pounds. Has teamed with Vaughn since his freshmen year. In some games outscored Vaughn and is especially deadly on long-shots, scoring from any angles. If Vaughn was not so outstanding, Morrison would receive more credit.

Dale Sears—Center, six-feet two inches tall and weighs 194 pounds. He is called "Fat-Boy" by his teammates. Was fourth in scoring in conference play? He is considered the most valuable man on the team. He is good on rebound tip-ins on offense, and on defense is strong, making him the best center on the Coast. He compares with another great U.S.C. center, Lee Guttero.

Tom McGarvin—Guard, six-feet tall and weighs 180 pounds. Has the best defensive record in the country. Has held opponents to an average of mere three points. Definitely, he was an all-coast player. In the Purdue game this year he scored thirteen points besides holding his man to but one field goal.

Jack Hanson—Guard, is also varsity baseball captain. Made his letter in basketball in sophomore year. This year did not play much because of baseball. He also helps coach the freshmen basketball team. Coach Sam Barry paid him a great compliment by calling him "the smoothest basketball player I ever coached."

Jack Hupp—Forward, Last year in the National A.A.U. tournament in Denver, Colorado, was named an All-American forward. A one hand shot artist, he combines his six-feet three inches to tip in shots. He is playing better today then in his college days when he was named an All-Coast forward.

The Trojan Basketball players coming to Japan.

Sunny Anderson—Former guard and forward of U.S.C., he is well known to Japanese fans having made three trips here. Has coached and brought one All-American basketball team to Japan. His team was undefeated in Japan. Sunny calls Japan his second "home" and is anxious to renew friendships here.

Ken Holley—Center, is an all-around athlete who lives in Fresno, California. He lived among Japanese in his home town, is happy to know more about Japan and expects to study extensively in Japanese.

Kenji Uyesugi—Manager. Has a baseball scholarship and he earned his varsity letter as a Sophomore and was the first Japanese-American to earn a varsity letter at U.S.C. After graduation he hopes to return to Japan and enter Waseda or Rikkyo University.

Middle, Normal Teachers

graduates shall be treated as probationer teachers and their consciousness of strained situation both at home and abroad shall be deepened.

Along with the above improvements, those now teaching at the secondary schools shall be re-educated for a time in a permanent institution for the project so as they may also be fully equipped with information necessary for instructing their pupils better on the requirements of the times.

MORE PRIVILEGES

The revision further alleges that not only university graduates but those from colleges be accorded the same qualification as the graduates of the higher normal schools if only the former finish the required course of training for a year. Further, these graduates from universities and colleges, when they express their desire to be teachers at the time of entering their universities and colleges, may be entitled to the exemption of their tuition fees or to the allowance of part of their schooling expenses on condition that they promise to remain teachers for a certain time after taking up the teaching profession—the privileges now being allowed to the students of the higher normal schools.

Southeast Europe Agricultural Development Seen

D.N.B.

BERLIN, July 9—Germany is the best customer and supplier of Southeastern Europe. Despite this already achieved fact, however, there are still possibilities of increasing the exchange of goods. It therefore will be necessary to further the intensification of agriculture in Southeastern Europe, and for this purpose a more extensive use of machines has to be considered. In order to facilitate the use of these machines technical training courses have been installed for Bulgarian farmers in Waetenberg near Berlin, where the latest developments of modern German agricultural machines are demonstrated to the Bulgarian farmers. Among those Bulgarians are ordinary farmers, heads of Bulgarian agricultural schools, leaders of agricultural cooperatives etc., who are trained in the use of the most modern agricultural equipment in order to introduce later as many of these machines in the agricultural production of their country as possible, helping thus to increase the wealth of their state. During several weeks they are trained in the use of huge tractors and are shown how to make minor repairs in short time. After this first experience they are sent to the most moden German villages, where they will be employed as assistants of the agricultural advisers.

Second German Offensive

Among the booty is, moreover, almost the entire heavy artillery of France as well as an immeasurable quantity of other armament, equipment and stocks.

The enemy air force lost since June 4 in aerial combat 333 planes, by anti-aircraft fire 155 planes, destroyed on the ground 239 planes. In addition 15 planes were brought down, of which it is uncertain whether this was done in aerial combat or by anti-aircraft fire. The total amounts to 792 planes. To this must be added 26 balloons belonging to balloon barrages and one captive balloon.

One destroyer unit of the German Air Force had brought down 101 enemy aircraft by June 14, while a fighter group accounted for its 50th plane by June 11.

The following auxiliary cruisers and other vessels were sunk by the German navy; the 23,000 ton auxiliary cruiser "Carinthia," the 17,000 ton auxiliary cruiser "Scotstown," the 21,000 ton troop transport "Orama," the 9,100 ton naval tanker "Oil Pioneer," a 14,000 ton transport and a 9,000 ton auxiliary cruiser. In addition our submarines have sunk over 400,000 tons since the middle of May, making a total of some 493,100 tons.

Our air force has destroyed since June 5: one auxiliary warship and one destroyer totalling 5,100 tons, as well as 40 merchant vessels totalling 299,000 tons. In addition our planes damaged; three cruisers, one destroyer and 25 merchantmen.

Beyond these gigantic losses of the enemy, the conditions of the armistice excluded the remaining parts of the French armed forces from further participation in this war.

After this stupendous victory over the opponent of the Greater German Reich who was considered by the world as the strongest power on land and who fought as cleverly and bravely as he could, there are no longer any Allies. There remains only one enemy: Britain.

NATIONAL BODY OF SCIENTISTS IS PROPOSED

Dr. Ryotaro Mitsuta Suggests Organization To Coordinate Efforts

Establishment of a national science institute in which all branches of science in Japan will be organized as a synthetic whole for national purposes was proposed by Dr. Ryotaro Mitsuta, director of the electric experimental station of the Communications Ministry, at last Monday's meeting of the Science Investigation Committee at the Premier's official residence, according to the Chugai Shogyo Shimpo.

Interviewed by the Chugai, Dr. Mitsuta said:

"It is very regrettable that in this country, especially at a time when it is engaged in hostilities on an unprecedented scale, that all branches of science should be studied individually and in no definite single direction. They must be given a certain direction so that science as a whole becomes useful to the nation.

MUST BELONG

"As the Imperial Academy and Art Institute belong to the Education Ministry, the science institute I propose must belong directly to the Cabinet. Any establishment, governmental or private, for scientific research must be included in it.

"All branches must be coordinated by the institute for national purposes. The Government will ask one or more branches of the institute to do research work necessary for national policies. But this will never interfere with the research plans of the institute, which aim at contributing to the furtherance of science itself.

"At present scientists are overoccupied with problems related to current social conditions. As a result, applied science is overemphasized. This is inevitable in wartime, but without fundamental research work science will wither in the long run.

"If my plan is realized, able scientists will be given proper positions and the whole scientists' force in Japan will be ready for any national purpose."

WILL ORGANIZE

Ninty-four private scientific organizations will band together under the name of Federation of Scientific and Technical Organizations shortly to promote science and industrial technique to cope with the wartime needs.

Representatives of some of the 94 bodies met last Saturday at the Industrial Club at Marunouchi, Tokyo, and discussed means to organize the federation, with Dr. Hantaro Nagai, president of the Japan Science and Culture Promotion Society.

The Planning Board and China Affairs Board will assist in the formation and work of the proposed organization. The federation will be divided into the branches of geology, mining, metallurgy, machinery, electricity, civil engineering, architecture, aquatic industry, livestock raising, communications, chemistry, fiber industry, agriculture, pharmacy, physics, natural history, etc.

It is expected that it will be inaugurated about in August.

Sakurajima Erupts

Sakurajima volcano opposite Kagoshima city, Kyushu, has been active since June 29. Ashes were abundant after a giant column of black smoke rose from the crater Tuesday.

Sings at Waterfall

Kin Hanshu, a Korean singer, asked the Nikko police to be allowed to practice singing standing by the basin of the Kegon waterfall. The police complied with his wish to compete with the deafening sounds of the falling water.

Many Prayers Offered

The Kannon temple at Asakusa and other large temples were crowded Wednesday and Thursday.

Tokyo-Takao Airline

The Tokyo Municipal harbor bureau, Tokyo Chamber of Commerce and Industry and Takao city, Formosa, have decided to ask the Overseas, Commerce-Industry and Communications Ministerial authorities to open a direct Tokyo-Takao airline, in view of the heavy increase in cargo and passengers between the two ports.

Pickpockets Active

Tokyo residents are warned by the Metropolitan Police Board against the usual increased activity of pickpockets with the advent of summer when thin clothing is worn. Last Sunday eight cases were reported to the Metropolitan Police Board. Money stolen totalled ¥371.85. Most of the losses occurred on buses, and streetcars.

Dietetic School

A dietetic school will be opened shortly by the Welfare Ministry at No. 238, Samezucho, Oi, Shinagawa-ward, Tokyo, to train persons who will direct cooking at community kitchens for factories and other large organizations. The school will start with 50 students.

Art Fete Films

"Charcoal-burners" and "A Beach," cultural films, and "History," a film-drama, which were all winners of the motion-picture department of the Art Fete in commemoration of the 2,600th anniversary of the Empire Foundation, will be shown at the Hibiya Public Hall Monday at 6 p.m. There is no admission charge.

War Novel for Germany

Three thousand copies of a German translation of "Human Bullets," a book by Major-General Chuon Sakurai relating his experiences in the Russo-Japanese War, will be taken to Germany by Dr. Osahide Ishibashi, who will leave for Berlin shortly as head of a Japanese medical mission to that country. The book was read widely among the German people in 1913 by order of Kaiser Wilhelm II. It is now going to be read again by German soldiers.

PHILIPPINES IN DANGER, SAYS TAUSSIG

Rear Admiral Advocates 65,000-Ton Battleships To Compete with Japan

Domei Tsushin

WASHINGTON, July 7—Rear-Admiral Joseph K. Taussig, commandant of the Norfolk naval district, writing in yesterday's issue of the Naval Institute Proceedings asserted that the Philippine Islands were likely to be attacked after the conclusion of the Sino-Japanese war unless the United States took steps to defend them.

He expressed the opinion that the safety of the Islands would require the United States to announce its determination to assure their integrity, and to support this policy with adequate naval strength.

Admiral Taussig said that in the event that an unnamed Power found an excuse to attack the Philippines, the United States would have to go to their assistance unless this country had turned cowardly.

FIGHT PROBABLE

"Moreover," the Admiral wrote, "with the Dutch East Indies as a bait for aggression—which, when it comes, will be certain to involve other Powers with interests in this area—we may be forced into a Far Eastern war willy-nilly. And unless we have sufficient big and powerful ships, our efforts to forestall aggression are doomed to failure."

He said that other Powers with large interests in the western Pacific, including Great Britain, have adequate bases there but that the United States lacks any. He added that without an understanding with such Powers, whereby the United States could use their bases, the only way this country could hold and improve its position would be to build a naval base at Guam and construct ships of long cruising range and great fighting power.

"Congress," the article continued, "recently declined to authorize the Guam project, so the only hope is a continuation of the policy to build capital ships and trust to base facilities being provided by Great Britain and France."

WANTS 65,000 TONNERS

Admiral Taussig argued that, in view of the secrecy surrounding Japan's battleship construction program, it was imperative that the United States build warships of at least 45,000 and perhaps 65,000 tons. He explained that the third set of locks for the Panama Canal, now under construction, would be ample to accommodate a 65,000-ton battleship.

Suggestions that the United States should have two Fleets, one to operate in the Pacific and the other in the Atlantic were called impractical by Admiral Taussig, who said any additions made to the fleet should be adapted to use in either ocean.

ARCHITECTS SUBMIT SUGGESTIONS FOR RELIEVING HOUSING SHORTAGE

Three proposals for relieving the existing housing shortage in cities of Japan were made to the Government Ministries concerned Monday by representatives of the Architectural Association.

The following suggestions were made:

1. A special corporation should be established to supply residences on behalf of the Government.
2. The large firms who employ a large number of workers should be ordered to supply them residences.
3. The system of distributing materials for building residences should be unified.

The investigation made by the Association, prior to the outbreak of the China Affair showed between 200,000 and 250,000 houses were built a year, while they remarkably decreased since the year 1937.

Though the exact number is not certain, the Association believes that if 200,000 new houses are built, the shortage will be relieved.

The Welfare Ministry is also seriously concerned over the housing shortage. They issued an invitation Monday to Dojunkai officials concerned and architects to discuss the problem with them.

Pope Pius Cancels Summer Vacation

Domei Tsushin

VATICAN CITY, July 7—Uncertainties in the international situation have caused Pope Pius to cancel plans for a summer vacation, an official announcement from the Vatican stated last night.

His Holiness, according to the announcement, considered that the seriousness of current world problems made it desirable for him to keep in the closest possible touch with the diplomats accredited to the Holy See.

Since Pope Pius XI in 1933 revived the custom of spending a summer vacation at Castle Gandolfo, this will be the first year that a pontiff has remained at Vatican City throughout the hot season.

France May Organize Single Party Regime

Domei Tsushin

BERNE, July 6—The possible creation of a single party in France, doing away with all existent political divisions, was reported here today.

Dispatches from Vichy to the official Stefani (Italian) news agency meanwhile declared the projected new French constitution, which Pierre Laval is to submit to the National Assembly, aims to give the Government sovereign authority.

It also was reported from Italian quarters that Mr. Laval spoke before the Senate on the present political and diplomatic situation, and gave them an outline of the Anglo-French naval encounter at Oran.

BROOKLYN CLUB DEFEATS BOSTON IN 20TH FRAME

Dodgers Maintain Winning Streak by Taking Longest, Luckiest Game of Season

United Press

NEW YORK, July 5—The Brooklyn Dodgers maintained their streak of victories today by defeating the Boston Bees in the longest game of the season, after the luckiest kind of a break in the first half of the 20th inning at Boston. The score was 6-2.

With the bases loaded after the contest had seemingly been destined to go on forever without achieving a definite result, Pitcher Sullivan of the Bees walked Dolph Camilli to force home the winning run.

FINALLY SCORE FOUR

The ice, broken, the Dodgers went on to score three more runs and make sure of the game when Miller was charged with an error and Pee-wee Reese followed up with a single. Dixie Walker tallied the winning run, however, when Camilli walked.

Kimball, who took over the mound assignment for the Dodgers in the 19th inning, received credit for the victory although he wasn't in at the finish during the last half of the 20th.

It was a bad day all along the line for the second division, every first division club scoring a victory.

REDS VICTORS

The Cincinnati Reds kept pace with the Dodgers by defeating the Pittsburgh Pirates, 5-4, coming from behind to score three runs in the ninth inning. Ival Goodman had homered in the sixth with one on, but until the last frame that represented the limit of the Red scoring. In the ninth, a double by Linus Frey and singles by Frank McCormick, Harry Craft and Gus Arnovich were followed by an error charged to Arky Vaughan to give the Rhinelanders the contest.

The New York Giants staged a track meet at the expense of the Philadelphia Phillies, winning by 15-2. The Giants hopped into a big lead in the first two frames when Young homered with one aboard to score two in the first and eight more tallied in the second on six singles followed by a double from the bat of Harry Danning.

CUBS DOWNED

The Chicago Cubs took a loose game from the St. Louis Cardinals, 11-5. A homer by Augie Galan with two on in the first, another by Glen Russell with all stations occupied in the fifth and a final one by Bill Nicholson with one aboard in the ninth proved the downfall of the Cards.

Only two games were played in the American League. The Chicago White Sox ran their string of victories to six by defeating the St. Louis Browns, 10-8, and thereby adding to their reputation as a "home" club. A rally in the fifth sparked by Julius Solters' home run gave the Sox the game.

The Boston Red Sox picked up a half game on the leaders by trimming the hapless Washington Senators, 9-4. Fourteen hits good for 28 bases proved too much for the Nats. Jimmy Foxx and Ted Williams added further spice to the game with home runs.

N. Y. Paper Thinks U. S. Future Dark Because of Meddlers

Transocean

NEW YORK, July 4—In its Independence Day editorial, the New York Daily News remarked today that, contrary to the spirit of the nation, the country was again being urged to take an active part in the eternal squabbles of Europe.

Those who are attempting to maneuver the United States into the European War are using the old method of praising one side while painting the other belligerent in the darkest colors.

Interventionists once succeeded in driving the American people to war. But they forget that Americans are still suffering from the aftermath of the last war.

It cannot be said just how the present chapter of American history will end. The Republicans have nominated an outspoken interventionist as their presidential candidate while the Democrats will most likely also nominate an interventionist. So the future does not look bright, this newspaper said.

Turkish authorities have strengthened security measures at the Straits. Numerous warships patrol along the Bosperus.

BOMB EXPLODES IN BRITISH PAVILION AT N.Y. WORLD'S FAIR; THREE KILLED

Reuter

NEW YORK, July 5—Three detectives were killed and several others injured by the explosion of a bomb at the British pavilion in New York's World Fair, according to Police headquarters.

A bomb was found hidden in the Pavilion. Police were called, but the bomb exploded, while being removed, causing some damage to the Polish Pavilion nearby.

The Police Commissioner has ordered the city's entire force of 18,000 police to go on continuous duty to track down the perpetrators of the bomb outrage at the British Pavilion and to avert repetitions.

The bomb, which is now described as a "flame-throwing" bomb, was discovered two days after a warning was telephoned to the British Pavilion.

A mysterious voice said: "Get out of the building, we are going to blow it up."

Three detectives were killed and several others injured by the explosion, which occurred while the missile, found hidden in the Pavilion, was being removed. Some damage was caused to the Polish Pavilion nearby.

There were 168,000 visitors inside the Fair grounds, celebrating Independence Day, at the time of the explosion, and several thousand were at the Foreign Exhibition area, which is where the British Pavilion is situated.

$1,000 REWARD OFFERED

Reuter

NEW YORK, July 5—Following an intense round-up of suspects, a German-born American has been arrested in connection with the bomb outrage at the British Pavilion in the New York World's Fair yesterday, when three detectives were killed and several persons injured.

Police allege that they found a German-made pistol in the man's home, also a portrait of Hitler.

Earlier in the day it was announced a reward of $1,000 had been offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of perpetrators of the outrage.

Throughout the night police and detectives rounded up suspects, questioning at least 75 persons, most of whom were promptly released.

After an analysis of the fragments of the bomb, the police reported it was of the "dynamite and shrapnel" type and weighed about 20 lbs.—sufficient to blow out the walls of the British Pavilion.

Girls in Meditation

Seventy girl students of the Tokyo Music School are undergoing Zazen, or religious meditation for long hours in a sitting posture, at the Sojiji Temple at Tsurumi, Yokohama. They started the practice Wednesday and will continue it until Saturday, eating simple meals and rising early in the morning. It is quite rare that young girls should practice Zazen in a Buddhist temple.

Fly Catching Day

A total of 95,835,805 flies, killed by Tokyo residents were taken to police stations in the capital last Sunday, the annual Fly Catching Day. Arakawa Ward topped the list of fly swatters with 9,635,890. They were followed by Toshima Ward with 5,630,000 and Omori Ward with 4,945,000. The smallest number was Akasaka's 561,900. The person who caught the largest number of flies was a fish dealer in Arakawa Ward whose crop was about 400,000. The runner up was another fish dealer in Koishikawa who caught about 300,000.

WAR EXTENSION FEARED BY U.S.

Reich Rejection of Monroe Doctrine Principles and Martinique Problem Grave

By MACK JOHNSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, July 6—Extension of the European War into the Western Hemisphere was feared here last night as a result of Germany's virtual rejection of the Monroe Doctrine and reports that British cruisers had established a blockade around Martinique, French Island in the Caribbean.

French quarters here feared that fighting might break out at any minute between French forces at Martinique and the British naval unit.

LEANS TO PETAIN

The Martinique authorities are supporting the Petain Government of France which signed the armistice with Germany and Italy.

A large shipment of American war planes, which had left America for France only a few days before the French capitulation, was understood to have been taken to Martinique by French ships. The British Navy is determined not to permit these planes to fall into German hands, it was believed here.

Consequently, French quarters here predicted that the British cruisers now blockading Martinique might soon enter the harbor where the ships carrying the American planes have sought refuge.

ORDERED TO FIRE

French land forces in all French overseas territories have been ordered by the Petain Government to fire on any British warships coming with 12½ miles of French territory. If the British cruisers attempt to seize French ships at Martinique, it was believed, shore batteries may be ordered into action against them.

French quarters here speculated whether Britain might invade Martinique and overthrow the local French administration which is supporting the Petain regime. Unless Martinique is kept under constant blockade, it was pointed out, it might serve as a valuable base for German submarine raids against vital British shipping lanes between the United States and England.

DANISH PREMIER TELLS OF ICELAND DOINGS

Says British Blockade Stops Communication with Island

Transocean

COPENHAGEN, July 5—In his big speech in Parliament yesterday, Premier Th. Stauning reviewed the reaction of the recent developments on Denmark, Iceland, the Faroer Islands and Greenland. He stated that after the occupation of Iceland by British troops the Danish Government requested the British Minister in Berne through its Minister in that city to convey a Danish note of protest to the British Government and to inform it of damages which were being claimed.

The British Minister refused to convey this note to his Government. Since that time, Stauning continued, the Danish Government had done everything to get in touch with the Icelandic Government, above all in order to bring about a clarification of Iceland's financial position. This had not been possible, however, on account of the British blockade.

Two Icelandic members of the Danish Parliament who are in Copenhagen, are likewise not in a position to exercise any influence on the situation. Turning to the Danish Colony of Greenland, Stauning once more emphatically rejected all rumors which had cropped up recently regarding the alleged intention of the Danish Government to sell this colony to the United States. He assured the House that Greenland is provided with goods for some time to come, and that a state of emergency could not occur. The Danish Government had never had any intention of opening negotiations for the sale of Greenland and would never do this without the consent of the Danish people.

BRITAIN GIVES UP 6-ROUND FIGHTS

Marquess of Queensbury Changes Plans for Bouts

Reuter

LONDON, July 11—When the Marquess of Queensbury recently decided to try the experiment of putting on all six-round fights because of the inability of boxers to get sufficient time to train for contests of ten rounds or more, there was much shaking of heads, and considerable doubt about the outcome was expressed.

Some critics thought it would make no difference, but others were of the opinion that the scheme would only end in failure. Apparently the Marquess has been advised to change his mind, for he has reverted to ten-round fights for his charity tournaments.

The idea was bound to lead to many difficulties, the main one being concerned with the reputations of boxers. Six-round fights are normally regarded as preliminary affairs to leading boxers and it is doubtful whether they would have reconciled themselves to appearing in them. Again, there is always the danger that the public will regard them as exhibition matches, no matter who the contestants may be. It was also unfair to those boxers who rely upon stamina and punching power rather than ring skill aolne.

Sculler Challenges For Gold Cup Race

Reuter

PHILADELPHIA, July 11—Joe Burk, the American champion sculler who has won virtually every major individual rowing honor except the Philadelphia Gold Challenge Cup, has issued a formal challenge for a race for the $5,000 trophy, emblematic of world supremacy in rowing.

The challenge was issued through Henry Penn Burke, chairman of the Penn Athletic Club rowing committee, and president of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen. It was suggested that the race be made a special feature of the National Championship Regatta at Red Bank, New Jersey, July 20 and 21.

The last competition for the Philadelphia Gold Challenge Cup was held in the 1936 Olympic Games at Berlin, and was won on that occasion by G. Schaefer of Germany. Cancellation of the 1940 Olympics deprived Burk of a chance to win the cup, except in a special challenge race. With Germany at war it is considered unlikely that Schaefer will defend the trophy.

United Press

NEW YORK, July 6—Lou Finney of the Boston Red Sox continued to top the batting list in the Major Leagues yesterday when the weekly statistics were brought up to date.

Finney now has garnered a total of 101 hits since the beginning of the season, with his team mate Roger Cramer close behind him with 96 hits. Walker, Case Radcliff and Herman all are tied in third place with 95 hits each.

WILLIAMS LEADS IN RUNS

In runs scored Ted Williams led the list, having crossed the plate 60 times. He was followed by the Tigers' Charley Gehringer who has scored 59 runs. Close behind him by a run are Barney McCosky, and the leading base pilferer in the league, George Case of the Senators.

Johnny Mize continue to be king pin of the home run men. He has clouted out 21 four-baggers, with Jimmy Foxx one homer behind.

Bucky Newsom of the Browns easily heads the list of winning pitchers. He has won 11 games and lost only one. Nearest to him is Schoolboy Rowe who hurled five winners and lost one. In the National League Mooty has a flawless record of five games won.

CLEVELAND HOLDS LEAD

United Press

NEW YORK, July 6—By defeating the Chicago White Sox, 7-3, the Cleveland Indians still led in the American League today while the Detroit Tigers kept pace with the Tribe by hammering out an 11-2 victory over the luckless St. Louis Browns.

The Indians got going in the fifth inning when Hal Trosky's and Boudreau's doubles livened the scoring. The Tigers were aided by Dick Bartell's homer in the fifth frame which accounted for three runs.

The Bengals clouted the opposing pitchers for 17 hits, while Bucky Newsom muzzled the Browns to three scattered blows.

SLUMPS TO THIRD.

The Boston Red Sox who slumped to third place recently, snatched a 5-3 victory from the Washington Senators. The Red Sox won in the ninth inning by scoring two runs on three Senators' errors.

Mint Hayes won the game for the Philadelphia Athletics against the New York Yankees. With the score tied in the tenth inning at 7-7. Hayes clouted a double to score Bennie McCoy for the winning run.

The Brooklyn Dodgers, who yesterday staged a 20-inning marathon duel with the Bees, today shut out the latter by 2-0. Gus Mancuso and Reese scored the winning runs. Mancuso walked, and Pressnell sacrificed. Then Reese, Lavagetto and Waller singled successively to account for the two runs.

The Cincinnati Reds defeated the Chicago Cubs 4-0. They scored in the first inning when McCormick homered with two mates on bases. The Pittsburgh Pirates pounded the Cardinals for a 15-8 triumph despite 10 Pittsburgh hits.

The third place New York Giants were drubbed by the Philadelphia Phillies, the cellar occupants, by a score of 8-2. The Phillies went wild in the seventh inning when Klein, Rizzo and Marty singled and the Giants' pitcher, Lovill Dea, pitched a wild ball, starting the scoring.

BRITISH PRESS, PUBLIC CEMENT WAR STRUCTURE

England Is Determined To Attain High Fighting Efficiency at All Costs

Reuter

LONDON, July 4—The determination of Britain and the British Empire to achieve urgently fighting efficiency greater than that of the dragooned Reichswehr is shown in editorials in this morning's London press.

"During the visit which he has just paid to a section of the home front, the Premier will certainly have found that much has been done and there is much, it must be admitted, still to do," states The Times.

"Any uneasiness which may thus find expression in the press and the large correspondence from the public continues the paper, "reflects no success for German scare-mongering tactics, nor any flinching from determination to meet the invasion, but only a profound desire that practical preparations should be as perfect as possible.

PROBLEMS NEW

"We have never before had to create an organization capable of putting forth the maximum military efforts within our own shores that is in the midst of a vast crowded civilan population, whose continued activity and cooperation is essential to military success.

"For the first time we are faced with problems which have continuously to be faced in Continental countries, and we must learn from their mistakes, both of principle and detail."

The Daily Telegraph declares: "It is the best sign in these stern times that the claim to national services comes at least as loudly and insistently from men and women who offer themselves as from a government which has to organize their labors.

"Unity of resolve we have assured. We want unity of working forces kept to that highest and fiercest potential which can only be maintained by everyone having war duty to do and doing it with devotion."

DOMINIONS CHEERING

"One of the most heartening things today," says the News Chronicle, "is the readiness of the Dominions to shoulder ever-increasing burdens as our own problems grow. The latest example is Canada's air speed-up. A large part of the Dominion's original program, designed to be spread over two years, has been compressed into a one-year plan."

"The Canadian Government now announce that it will be able to complete both its own and the whole Commonwealth program from their own resources, without assistance from abroad.

"In one respect the British Empire has an enormous advantage over Germany regarding air power. It can produce planes and train crews in complete security thousands of miles from the scene of battle. It must do so to the utmost of its resources. No near horizon must be taken as the limit of our schemes. Never must we be content with good progress. Always we must aim at gigantic rather than great."

BRITISH AIRCRAFT PRODUCTION CLIMBS

Orders Placed in U.S. Exceed $1,000,000,000

Reuter

LONDON, July 10—Production of aircraft during June was more than double the number produced in June, 1939, according to a statement by Lord Beaverbrook, Minister for Aircraft Production.

Britain also produced more than double the number of engines, thus increasing her surplus stock.

American aircraft arriving in Britain represent a considerable contribution to the British air fleet, and if the seas remain as free as they are at present, American shipments will soon give an additional output in every month of real value. The total value of orders for aircraft placed in the United States exceeds $1,000,000,000, Britain has also bought more than $50,000,000 worth of aircraft and parts in Canada, from where deliveries of certain types come forward in increasing quantities.

"These are hard facts; books of account tell the record. There is much to do before we can be satisfied with our achievements in production," Lord Beaverbrook adds.

U.S. COTTON EXPORTS DOWN

European Market Loss Staggering Blow to American Growers

Transocean

ROME, July 4—The enormous losses suffered by American cotton growers as a result of the British blockade policy are pointed out in the German economic periodical "Sued-Ost Echo." The article, which is based on exact statistical material, shows that the United States cotton exporters have been completely shut out of the European market, now that Italy and France are closed to them.

The loss of the Greater German and the Polish markets meant a decrease of United States Cotton exports by 1,900,000 bales. When Holland, Belgium, France and Italy dropped out as buyers of American cotton, the exporters' sales were reduced by another 1,200,000 bales, while the loss of the southeastern European markets meant another 500,000 bales less of exports.

The situation is made worse by the fact that Japan's cotton import restrictions mean an additional loss of 1,200,000 bales, and England's similar economic policy 500,000 more bales lost to American cotton exporters.

This makes a total of 5,000,000 bales less exported by American cotton dealers than in normal years. In other words American cotton exports have dropped by three quarters.

The paper then recalls that in spite of high export premiums, 14,000,000 bales of cotton are now stored in the United States, which corresponds to the total annual imports of cotton of the whole world.

Japan Must Take

of all means of comfort, on which the Imperial troops will have to experience unimaginably great hardships even if no enemy should be met.

It is true that Chiang Kai-shek is greatly concerned over the interruption of the aiding route from French Indo-China because that will mean paralyzing of the means of supporting his side with needed supplies of all kinds from the outside. There is one thing even more important, which the leader of the Chungking regime is dreadfully afraid of. It is the fear that, by the stoppage of minerals, mostly being shipped out to the United States as security for the loans the regime made in America, will become impossible.

MEANS END

When the exportation of paulownia oil and minerals to America is stopped, it means the discontinuance of the established contracts with the States on loans and also the impossibility of contract similar loans in future. To Chiang, this latter situation is to be more concerned than the former. The fact that T. V. Soong, one of Chiang's righthand men, is now in the States to approach the leading financiers for further loans to the Chiang regime, will serve to enlighten us as to how much Chiang is worried over the possible stoppage of his exports to America.

At this juncture, when the new developments in European situation has made Chiang's reliance on support from the Soviet Union considerably hopeless on the one hand, and has brought about the imminent suspension of British and French, aids, there is no other alternative for the Chiang regime than looking entirely forward to the United States for what the latter can supply.

MANY ERRANDS

Chiang's important envoy, Mr. Soong, besides his mission as the contractor of projected loans in America, is reportedly charged with other errands, among which are (1) the quick realization of the State's embargo on exports to Japan, (2) a united operation of the British and American navies on the Pacific to check Japan's move toward the South Seas, and (3) a strong intervention of the States against the Japanese demand for the stoppage of Chiang-aiding routes from French Indo-China and Burma.

Now a frown or a smile on the United States is becoming a vital question to the Chiang regime in China, and there is no better measure for the Imperial forces at the war fronts than thrusting sharp at the very point which makes the sole source for the enemy to obtain the coveted smile of the States.

Manchou School Children

A party of 41 Manchoukuoan grammar school children, including 20 girls, arrived at Tokyo Station Thursday evening to see sights in the capital and tour the Kansai district. They were welcomed at the station by a large number of educators and Tokyo primary school pupils.

Women and Books

More books on economy politics and science and fewer novels and literary books are read recently by women at the Uyeno Municipal Library, the largest in Tokyo. The fact is interpreted as a proof that women are becoming more serious-minded to cope with the wartime circumstances.

Pawnshop Prices Decline

The Tokyo Pawnbrokers' Association has decided to lower the pawn prices of rings, bracelets, jewelry and luxurious kimono by 30 per cent as a result of the anti-luxury regulations enforced on July 8. Recently a diamond which used to be pawned for ¥1,300 a karat at one time will now bring only ¥300, it is said.

Baggage Weight Limited

Because of the large increase of railway baggage recently, the Tokyo Railway Bureau will lower the weight limit of luggage from 60 to 30 kilograms for the period from July 20 until September 10, anticipating a further increase resulting from the usual increase of travelers in summer.

Summer Visitors to Take Rice

Unless they bring the rice they eat, summer visitors at Kamakura, Chigasaki, Oiso and other sea-bathing resorts in Kanagawa Prefecture will not be permitted to stay there this year by the prefectural authorities, who consider that additional consumption of the prefecture's rice by summer residents will obstruct the wartime rice-supply system. Every year a total of nearly 1,000,000 summer residents visit Kanagawa Prefecture, consuming 15,000 bushels of rice during their stay.

YOKOHAMA 11 DOWNS TOKYO CRICKET TEAM

Intra-Club Contest Won By 92-91 Score; Brown Scores 42 Needed Points

The Yokohama eleven defeated the Tokyo team by one run in an exciting intra-club cricket match at the Yokohama Country and Atletic Club on Saturday afternoon. The score was 92 to 91.

The losers were handicapped by being one player short for their firs time at bat. The port city representatives started poorly, losing the first two wickets for four runs With the scoreboard reading eight wickets for 53 it looked as if the Tokyo players would win easily, but at this stage the Yokohama staged a wild rally. Heseltine made a good stand with Brown, and before the former was dismissed they boosted the total to 88. Hallett joined Brown and they made the necessary four runs before the former was caught out.

BROWN STARS

Brown's fine stand played a big part in the Yokohama victory. His score of 42 led all players. Heseltine made the next highest total for the winners and his 15 were scored when badly needed.

For the squad representing the capital, Roberts, Bird and Compton were in the forefront, scoring 24, 21 and 19, respectively.

Among the bowlers, Foggitt had the best average, obtaining three wickets for 12 runs. Hickson was next in line with 5 wickets for 26 Other good averages were Hancock's 2 for 13, Steer's 3 for 26 and Mason's 1 for 9.

U.S. PLANS 87 MORE WARSHIPS

Roosevelt's Supplemental Defense Program Provides For 11 Per Cent Increase

By MACK JOHNSON
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, July 9—The United States Navy plans to lay down 87 more warships within the next few months, naval circles said today.

President Roosevelt's $1,277,741,000 supplemental defense program includes funds ear-marked to begin work on 68 of the new ships. The regular 1941 fiscal year Navy Appropriation Bill provides money for 19 ships.

SPEED-UP ORDERED

The two programs, officials said, will be fed to existing private and Navy yards as rapidly as is economically feasible. Navy yards recently were ordered on a two-shift "speed-up" basis, and the 40-hour maximum work week was lengthened to 48 hours with overtime pay.

Appropriations now available include $144,400,000 for initial work on about 367,000 tons of warships including three new aircraft carriers, 13 cruisers, 30 destroyers, and 22 submarines, and $78,400,000 for guns, armor and other equipment. The new ships constitute about 200,000 tons of craft previously authorized by Congress but for which no funds were appropriated, and 167,000 tons of additional craft. Authorization of the 167,000 additional tons, involving an 11 per cent increase over present strength, was contained in the Vinson Bill.

BUILD 143 SHIPS

This will bring the total ships under construction within a short time to 143, as 56 are already under way. Included in the 56 are eight battleships of which two are 45,000 ton battleships, six light cruisers, 27 destroyers, 14 submarines, and one aircraft carrier.

If and when completed, the entire program will provide 522 fighting craft, under-age and over-age. The bulk of the antiquated ships are 116 destroyers and 32 submarines.

Rankine Wins Marathon: Breaks 1939 Record

Reuter

TORONTO, July 10—Robert (Scotty) Rankine, of Preston, Ontario, won the Canadian Marathon Championship of 1940, and broke the record which he established for it in 1939.

Gerard Cote, of St. Hyacinthe, Quebec, was second, and Fred Britton, of Toronto, placed third.

Fifteen runners started in a drizzling rain, which fell continuously during the 26 miles 385-yard race.

Rankine's time was two hours, 35 minutes and 27 seconds, compared with his old mark of 2:36.11.

BRITISH TROOPS DOMINATE LIBYA

Reuter's Correspondent Says Italians Suffered Heavy Losses on Desert

Reuter

LONDON, July 10—Despite denials by the Italian radio, British forces are dominating a huge area in the Libyan desert—approximately 3,500 square miles, says Reuter's Special Correspondent with British Forces somewhere in the Western Desert.

"I have just spent 14 hours encamped with a forward patrol 40 miles inside Italian territory, within a few miles of the headquarters of the Libyan field army. It is a war of finesse in the western desert. British forces are harassing the Italians to such an extent that they are no longer willing to come out in the open.

"Heavy Italian casualties followed an engagement between armored units during the past 48 hours. They have had a demoralising effect upon the defenders of Fort Capuzzo, who are believed to number 1,000 men. Twelve enemy lorries were destroyed last night, bringing the total for the last five days to 50. Two enemy fighters diving on two British fighters were shot down in flames in two minutes.

"The action is continuing. The thunder of artillery and air bombing is audible for 80 miles in the still desert air. I was able—escorted by an armored car—to slip through a gap in the Italian wire 'wall' and to carry out a detour, finally arriving within two miles of the rear of Fort Capuzzo. I stood on the bonnet of the armored car, watching British shells fall on Capuzzo.

"The only encounter with the enemy on this patrol was when a fighter circled down and attacked the car with bursts of badly aimed machine-gun fire."

Norwegians Volunteer For Labor Camps; Unemployment Aided

Transocean

OSLO, July 6—Barely three weeks after an appeal for the formation of a voluntary labor service was issued, 20 labor camps are already in full swing in southern and central Norway.

Two thousand five hundred unemployed men are now busy in these camps, chiefly doing road repairing work.

Unemployed women are also doing voluntary work on Norwegian farms.

In northern Norway, too, labor camps will be opened in the near future and the number of the corps' members will be increased to 5,000.

Fishing in northern Norway will soon be resumed to the full extent, stated the Fisheries Director, Salvesen. The Norwegian authorities count on a large export trade in codfish to Germany.

ANGLO-AMERICAN RAW MATERIALS POOL REJECTED

German New Service Says Proposal Has Met Refusal From All American Nations

D.N.B.

BERLIN, July 13—The British Government, in view of the situation with regard to food supplies, which are daily becoming more difficult, has communicated a suggestion to the United States, as a result of which all available raw materials, necessary for warfare, should be merged in an Anglo-American pool to deprive Germany and Italy of them.

This suggestion met with a complete refusal on behalf of the U.S.A. and especially in the South American countries. Even newspapers in North America, which are well known of being friendly toward Britain, has pointed out that it would be quite impossible to carry out the wishes of Great Britain.

NOTIFIED BY HULL

Secretary of State Cordell Hull has informed Great Britain that her request cannot be included in the program for the Pan-American Conference at Havana. As this conference is about to open, more and more voices are heard urging the absolute maintenance of economical and political independence of South America. In this connection, a speech delivered by the democratic deputy of the Chilean chamber, Osorio, is most significant and supplies a good picture of the actual situation. The deputy reminded the chamber of the last great war and of the pressure that had been exerted upon Latin American countries to induce them to give up their neutrality. Osorio said that the anti-German propaganda and the falsehoods about the "Fifth Column" was spread by those circles, which were constantly endeavoring to suppress the national sovereignty of Chile.

ARGENTINA SUFFERS

In this connection one might be reminded of the plan of the Argentine's ministry of agriculture to burn 6 million tons of Argentine's seven and a half million ton maize surplus. This measure, planned by the Argentine Government, is caused partly by the British blockade and partly by the loss of English maize imports from Argentina. The plan of using the maize surplus as fuel would be a partial solution of Argentine's fuel problem, but it also would mean a great loss in value, as twice the quantity of maize must be used for one unit of coal. This recent loss of Argentine's economy is all the more serious, as she has already suffered the loss of 50 to 75 per cent of her exports.

Argentina is of the opinion that the U.S.A. cannot be a good customer for South American agricultural products, because the U.S.A. herself has a surplus of these articles.

Movies Popular

In 1939, Tokyo's movie-houses were visited by a total of 90,097,065 spectators, including 17,057,540 minors, a survey of the Metropolitan Police Board reveals. The monthly average is about 7,650,000 or a little larger than Tokyo Prefecture's population.

Families Commended

The Welfare Ministry will publicly commend families with more than 10 children above the age of six on the Emperor Meiji Festival on November 3. The children must be born of the same parents and they should have no dead brothers or sisters. At present there are 14,182 families in the country which will qualify.

National Treasures

Forty-one old art objects were designated by the Education Ministry as national treasures deserving Government protection Friday. Among them are sliding screens with pictures of peony and plum-blossoms dating from the 15th century and Buddhist statues more than seven centuries old.

Greek-Japanese Dictionary

Genichiro Ogimi, 96-year-old Christian worker, recently completed a Greek-Japanese dictionary after painstaking work of 26 years. It will be published by the Kyobunkan publishing house shortly.

Unidentified Bodies

There were 166 male and 38 female unidentified bodies at the Metropolitan Police Board's morgue during the year ending July 13. The board has handled nearly 5,000 unidentified bodies since the great earthquake in Tokyo of September 1, 1923.

Eel Shortage

With the hottest days of summer here when broiled eel is popularly consumed, there is reported a shortage of that fish. Shizuoka Prefecture which provides Tokyo with almost all eels consumed in the capital, this year is supplying only a small portion of the usual amount.

HOW YACHTS FINISHED RACE

This diagram illustrates how Blue Wanderer beat Daphne across the finish line, although it appeared that Daphne would get there first. Both sloops are on the port tack, that is with the wind over the port side. Blue Wanderer, on the right, went about on to the starboard tack, to cut across Daphne's bows, one reason being that Wanderer might not have made the line before hitting the sea wall. Being on the starboard tack Blue Wanderer then had the right of way. Daphne could not hold her course without bumping the other yacht and disqualifying herself. Therefore Skipper Pestalozzi had to go about also, and was forced away from the line long enough to give Skipper de la Chevalerie the victory. But it didn't count, for by a technical navigation error previously made, also involving the rules of the road, Blue Wanderer was disqualified by the sailing committee. Both skippers took it good-naturedly.

BELL, SKIPPERING 'CHINOOK,' WINS CLIVE YACHT TROPHY

Blue Wanderer Beats Daphne Across Finish Line But Is Disqualified

	Elapsed time	Handicap	Corrected time	Position
1. Chinook	1.37.11	Scratch	1.37.11	1
2. Shamrock	1.39.06	Plus 2	1.41.03	3
3. Daphne	1.42.58	2 pc.	1.41.01	2

Ailsa, Joan, Vinga retired due to various mishaps. Protest lodged by skipper of Daphne against skipper of Blue Wanderer under Rule No. 30 E of Y.R.A. rules. Protest upheld.

Sailing Miss Vi Woodbridge's "Chinook," Mr. Gordon Bell on Saturday won the race for the Sir Robert Clive Trophy, in a fresh and squally wind which disabled four of the seven starters including Vice-Commodore Laffin's crack sloop "Shamrock."

First across the line, Chinook won both by elapsed and corrected time, although it had given the second boat, Mr. de la Chevalerie's "Blue Wanderer," a four per cent handicap until B. W. was disqualified. All these L class boats are one-designers, built to a set of plans drawn by Mr. Laffin, but there are always individual merits and cranks which show up to put boats ahead or behind. It is on the abilities and record of the skipper, however, that the percentages are established. Mr. Laffin is a plus two man; Mr. Bell is scratch.

JIB SPLITS

Early in the exciting race Shamrock suffered one of those misfortunes which can never be completely guarded against. Her jib split across the foot. Emergency treatment was given. Rough lashings half way up the sail had the effect of a big reef, securing the tack and sheet corner. While this work was being done by Mr. Laffin, Mr. Harris and Mr. Bell Laffin, the Shamrock had to stand out further on the starboard tack to the outer buoy than normally would be the case and the big lead was lost. When the jury rig was working the boat had lost a lot of its pull. Nevertheless good seamanship prevailed and the Shamrock crossed the line second. Her big handicap warranted only fourth place as worked out by Mr. Montagu Ellerton, Officer-of-the-Day.

Commodore Harden's Vinga felt the strain of the first run in from the outer white buoy to the red buoy at the passage of the breakwater. The mast was cracked near the deck. The main had to be taken in while quick lashings were made to secure the spar, and under this splint the Commodore's boat limped in. She had only two aboard, Mrs. Harden being full crew.

SPREADERS BREAK

At the same time and the same place the spreaders on Dr. Weidemann's "Joan" were broken. The skipper sailed back to the anchorage under jib alone when he found repairs could not be made and the mast might go. He had a hard time navigating to the moorings. Earlier M. Vigne's boat, with the Mademoiselles Thiebaut as crew, had her mainsail split, and he was forced to retire.

There was an unwitting foul claimed by Secretary Max Pestalozzi in the second windward beat when M. de la Chevalerie's "Blue Wanderer" forced him to alter course and lose distance, although Pestalozzi was on the starboard tack and had the right of way.

PROTEST LODGED

A protest was lodged, as points in the season's point scoring aggregate are involved. Of a different category was the smart finish of Blue Wanderer. Chevalerie and Pestalozzi were coming down on the finishing line, toward the sea wall, on the port tack. Pestalozzi had the advantage by being more up to windward. As the two boats closed on the mark Blue Wanderer was put about. This maneuver set her on the starboard tack, with right of way. Had Pestalozzi kept his sloop straight for the line, to reach it first, there would have been a collision. He had to alter course and go about also, to make a quick tack again immediately afterwards. But the two changes meant the loss of valuable seconds, and thus the Secretary had to take third place until his protest regarding the previous fault was upheld by the sailing committee on Sunday. Thus Pestalozzi's "Daphne" was second and stout little "Shamrock" third.

WINS NEEDED

Now Mr. Bell has two "legs" on the Clive trophy. If he can get another next year he will keep the handsome silver model of the L-design sloop given some years ago by Sir Robert Clive, provided Sir Robert agrees to a change in the deed, which now calls for three wins in a row for ownership.

Crew for Mr. Bell were Miss Kitty Gorman and Mr. Danby.

Owing to the fact that so many boats were disabled, the sailing committee canceled the July Cup race on Sunday. But a challenge race was staged between the "Shamrock" and the "Blue Wanderer" without handicap which was won by the former by a short lead. "Shamrock" is never seen at her best in a very strong wind such as prevailed yesterday. The draught was off-shore which kept the sea down, had it been on-shore with the same strength the sea would have been too much for these small boats. It was noticed that earlier in the day, some Japanese yachts which ventured out had a difficult time and one was capsized in a violent squall.

KONGO DEFEATS 'SAB' ISAGAWA

Outboxes Foe to Take Main Go At Hibiya Amphitheater Fights; Aizawa Gets Slow-Bout Decision

Iwao Kongo, the clever bantamweight, took the decision last night over Saburo Isagawa in the eight-round main event of the Usuda Boxing Club smoker at the Hibiya amphitheater.

Clever Kongo was by far the better boxer, while Isagawa was strictly a swinger. Throughout the eight rounds both boxers showed willingness to mix it up, with Isagawa taking the most punishment in the close fighting. Kongo scored heavily with his two-fisted attack to the body which slowed Isagawa considerably in the last two rounds.

While Kongo earned the decision he failed to impress the fans as to his ability to meet Piston Horiguchi. Isagawa was substituted in place of Sauda who suffered an injury in his last bout in Kobe.

In the second eight round affair Taro Aizawa decisioned Shintaro Yamada, Aizawa was a disappointment to his followers as he failed to show any willingness to take the offensive. The decision was a doubtful one with Yamada showing well in close fighting. There were no knock-downs.

The results:

Juichi Kaneda, 128 took the decision over Kaoru Kawashima, 125, six rounds.

Tomii Nakamura, 110 T.K.O. over Tatsuo Sawada, 110.

Senji Yamada, and Toshi Masuda, draw, four rounds.

I. Akiyama, 117 knocked-out, T. Hanada, 118, first round.

Shiria, 125, knocked-out Nomura, 122, first round.

100-Year-Old Rice

About 30 bushels of rice preserved for about 100 years were recently put on sale in Fukushima Prefecture. The rice had been preserved against famines. Yellow in color, the old rice is is not fit for ordinary meals but is still good for making rice crackers.

Summer Resorts

Rooms and houses to let at Zushi, Kamakura, Hayama, Oiso, Chigasaki, Hiratsuka and Odawara in Kanagawa Prefecture are being rapidly booked for the summer season despite their exorbitant rents. A house with a six-mat room and a three-mat room is rented for ¥120 a month at Kamakura for instance, it is said.

HULL HEADS U.S. DELEGATION TO HAVANA PARLEY

Appointment by Roosevelt Indicates Importance of Meet to U.S. Interests

Domei Tsushin

WASHINGTON, July 13—Indicating the importance the United States is attaching to the Pan American Conference, which is to open next Saturday at Havana, President Roosevelt today appointed Secretary of State Cordell Hull as chief of the American delegation.

Other delegates accompanying Secretary Hull included Adolf Berle, assistant Secretary of State and originator of the plan to create a gigantic Pan American cartel; Leo Pasvolkie, special assistant Secretary of State who is specializing in international economic and monetary affairs; Harry D. White, director of Monetary Research of the Treasury Department; Grosvenor Jones, assistant director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, and William Dawson, United States Ambassador to Panama.

Informed circles, describing the coming conference as one of the most important Pan American parleys ever held, expressed belief that the United States would do its utmost to seek general permission to use sea and air bases, both on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of Central and South America to keep a close watch over any possible Fifth Column activity.

The United States, they added, also would seek to determine the future security and status of the French and Dutch islands and colonies in the Western Hemisphere and formulate a definite plan for pooling the United States and other South American resources which would be resold or bartered to Europe and other parts of the world.

The importance which the United States attaches to the agricultural and economic side of the parleys is seen in the great representation of experts in these lines. Besides the above-mentioned members of the American delegation, it is understood that the President will dispatch Leslie Wheeler, prominent director of the Foreign Agricultural Relations section of the Department of Agriculture. Laurence Duggin, Chief of the South American division of the State Department, also is included in the U.S. group.

Tokyo Housing

increasing every day, largely due to the Government's policy of expanding the productivity of wartime industries. The housing condition is getting more serious day by day. Househunters can be found in every nook and corner and rarely do they meet with success.

"The house shortage compels many families to live in one house, and this causes the inhabitants to sleep less soundly.

"The Labor Science Researches Institute announced that a factory worker, who walks 4 kilometers every day to and from his factory, consumes a third of his day's energy. This causes concern to those who are interested in the welfare of the nation.

"Many of the prospective house-owners think that they cannot hope to build houses under the prevailing controls on building materials. They must know that house-building is not banned altogether. Small dwelling houses which do not cover more than 30 tsubo (or roughly 0.024 acres), are permitted to build. Of course, the building materials are hard to get, but this conquered, the houseowners could build as many small houses as they wished much to the joy of the overflowing population. Only one thing must be borne in mind by them for the public good, that they cannot expect much profit because rents are strictly controlled by the State. This is an emergency time for Japan, and all Japanese subjects are expected to sacrifice much to help his country tide over the difficulties caused by the home and international developments."

YOKOHAMA ATHLETIC CLUB CAPTURES THRILLER FROM OLD STARS 'A' NINE

The Yokohama Country and Athletic Club's first string baseball team defeated the Old Stars "A" nine in a close and exciting 5 to 3 game on the former's diamond Sunday afternoon. The Y. C. and A. C. seconds lost to the Old Stars "B" squad in the morning contest by a 9 to 6 score.

In the afternoon game both teams held the lead twice, and with the margin never, more than two runs the outcome was in doubt until the final inning.

The Old Stars broke the scoreless deadlock in the third stanza by making one run, but the home team evened the count in their half of the same canto. The Y.C. and A.C. pushed across another tally in the fifth frame to take the lead by 2 to 1.

This advantage was shortlived as two of the visitors crossed the plate in the next inning. The home nine then rallied again and another two runs retrieved the lead for them.

The Y.C. and A.C. scored another run in the next inning, and with Kipp holding the opposition scoreless in the last three stanzas the home squad gained the verdict.

In the morning contest the Old Stars "B" squad took a five-run lead in the first inning, largely due to errors, and the Y.C. and A.C. seconds could not overcome this initial handicap.

The visitors scored another run in the second to lead by 6 to 0, but the home team cut this lead in half in the fourth frame. The Old Stars gained another point in the fifth and another two in the seventh, but the Y.C. and A.C. staged a rally in the eighth which accounted for three runs, the score becoming 9 to 6. The game ended with no change in the count, neither team being able to tally in the last inning.

U.S. OPINION IS CHANGING

Those Favoring Entry Into War Dwindle to 14 Per Cent on June 14

Transocean

NEW YORK, July 8—Interesting changes in American public opinion have taken place as a result of the decisive development of events in Europe, states the American Institute of Public Opinion, basing its statement on the result of a canvass to ascertain the public reaction toward the possible participation of the United States in the war.

While at the end of May there were 7 per cent in favor of the United States joining the war, this figure rose to 16 per cent on June 2, after the Battle of Flanders.

The maximum figure was reached with 19 per cent on June 14 during the decisive battle in France. Since then it has dropped to 14 per cent, thus showing the dwindling of war fever after the successful conclusion of German operations in the west.

FAVORITISM SEEN

BERLIN, July 7—The attitude taken up by Washington toward Britain is dealt with by Dr. Adolf Halfeld, editorial writer of the "Hamburger Fremdenblatt," who has particularly good connections with the Wilhelmstrasse. Halfeld refers to reports of American news agencies that a British destroyer flotilla has appeared off the French island of Martinique, which is situated in the Pan-American Neutrality Zone, and that the British destroyers are about to blockade the island. Halfeld then writes:

"Washington has nothing to say about this. Neither the American officials remained silent, however, when during the course of the last months British lies were spread alleging the presence of German submarines in American territorial waters. The closing of the Panama Canal to non-American warships was time and again excused with the silly assertion that America's safety was threatened by German naval actions.

UGLY RECIPE

"The threat to America's safety by Germany and Italy" is the ugly recipe which the United States under the leadership of their President apply in order to justify the armament program. Powers who have no possessions outside of Europe and especially none in the Americas are repeatedly semi-officially warned by Washington not to interfere in the Western Hemisphere, while Britain which 1919 cheated the United States and the rest of the world out of the freedom of the seas, may without being reproached let the British Flag, stained with the name of "Oran," fly in American waters next to the main artery of the United States, namely the Panama Canal, and threaten the fleet of France, which until a few weeks ago was praised in America as the strong hand of Democracy.

"We have noted with interest that President Roosevelt at his Press Conference thought it inopportune to reply to the questions asked by curious journalists who wished to know the President's view concerning the British Oran outrage. There are two different laws applied to the identical thing in the United States."

CHIANG ISSUES NEW WAR BONDS

Domei Tsushin

HONGKONG, July 16—The new Government bonds issued so far this year by the Chungking regime as announced by Dr. H. H. Kung, Minister of Finance, are as follows, according to a Chungking dispatch of the Ta Kung Pao:

War bonds amounting to 1,200,000,000 Yuan, carrying an interest at the rate of six per cent per annum with a net proceeds of 96 per cent. The first lot was issued on March 1, while the second issue is to be floated on September 1.

Construction bonds amounting to £10,000,000 English Sterling and $50,000,000 American Dollars, carrying an interest at the rate of five per cent per annum with a net proceeds of 98 per cent of the face value. The first lot was issued on May 1, while the second issue is to be floated on November 1.

Canadian Open Golf Championship

Reuter

TORONTO, July 10—Unlike Australia and New Zealand, who have both abandoned their Open Golf Championships this year because of the war, Canada has decided to carry on.

The Royal Canadian Golf Association announces that the 33rd Annual Canadian Open Golf Championship will be held over the course of the Scarboro Golf and Country Club, Toronto, from August 15 to 17, and, as usual many famous Americans are expected to compete.

It will be the fourth Canadian Open to be staged at Toronto in the last five years. The 1939 Championship, which was won by the American, Harold McSpaden, was staged at Saint John, New Brunswick.

Canada Spends

disguised raiders, sow a destructive crop in the shipping lanes.

COAST PATROLLED

Up and down the coast line—a fjord-filled stretch similiar to that of Norway's—chug the tiny ships of the famed fisherman's fleet. Patroling every indentation in the rugged coastline, and manned by men who know it as an open book, they leave untouched no place where an enemy vessel might hide.

Outside the harbors are stationed inspection vessels whose duty is to vouch for every vessel, from ocean liner to pleasure launch, that enters or leaves.

Inside the Esquimalt harbor, protected by an anti-submarine boom, are anchored the fighting ships of the navy, ready to steam out for battle at any time.

CANADA READY

At Vancouver on the mainland and at various points on lower Vancouver Island are airplane and seaplane bases. From these would swarm a host of modern fighting craft the minute the invading fleet was sighted.

The war is still more than 7,000 miles from Canada's West Coast, and to many the elaborate precautions taken here seem unnecessary. The thunder of attacking naval guns and the drone of enemy bombing planes have never been heard off Canada's West Coast, and Canadians hope they never will be heard.

Canada has prepared mightily since September 1939. If the invading invaders do come, Canada will be ready for them.

FRENCH REPUBLIC'S BIRTHDAY FORGOTTEN

July 14 Independence Day Passes Quietly in Paris

By ISAMU INOUYE

Domei Tsushin

PARIS, July 15—The independence day of the Third Republic of France le 14 Juillet, has come and gone but its passing caused hardly a ripple in the ranks of the French people for it exists no more for them as a national holiday.

The gay crowds that yearly pass in holiday spirits through avenues festooned with the tricolor and bright bunting were no longer there. Boulevards that used to be roped off for the night to accommodate old and young as they joined in street dances, were drab and deserted. Even the bustling preparations for the Republican Feast, an annual affair since it was presided over for the first time in 1789 by Louis XVI, is a thing of the past.

The Frenchman in the street today seems to be disgusted with politics and politicians. News of the political turnover placing Marshal Petain alone in the driver's seat has been received with apathy.

The general attitude seems to be, "We were too happy without regard for the sorrows of our neighbors. Now we are paying for it."

The statement in the American press attributed to Foreign Minister Paul Baudouin, that democracy in France will not die has been received by many with an indifferent shrug, and with the question:

"In the entourage of Petain remain many of the men responsible for the disaster. What is Petain going to do with them?"

Meanwhile as days go on, there are increasing signs of regimentation of civilian life. Although motorcar traffic is scarce, being limited to military cars and public vehicles, pedestrians may cross streets only at intersections, a new departure for the carefree Parisians. Many of the cafes and restaurants, meanwhile, are refusing to serve Jewish customers.

An order already has been issued for the arrest of many "political and military deserters," which include in their number such famous journalists as Henri Geraud, better known as Pertinax, Henri de Kerillis, editor of L'Epoque, Emile Bure, director of the Ordre, and Genevieve Tabouis, foreign editor of the Ouvre. Press attacks against these people already have begun.

The fact that communications have not yet been established between the occupied and unoccupied territories is causing distraction to many who have been cut off from members of their family and friends since the German occupation.

Nevertheless, Paris is beginning to breathe more vigorously as refugees come flocking back to the city. Many of the stores remain closed as yet, but those that are open are doing a record business. Hotel accommodations are being taxed to the maximum with no rooms available after eight o'clock.

Indian Army Animal Unit Feared Captured at Metz

Reuter

SIMLA, July 12—The Government of India has announced that No. 22 Animal Transport Company, of the Royal Indian Army Service Corps, is reported missing and must be assumed to have been captured.

The Company formed part of the mule transport, which joined British Expeditionary Force in December. It was in the Metz area at the German advance.

All the other units of the Indian contingent with the B.E.F. reached England safely.

Cosmic Ray Research

Dr. Haruhiko Nishina of the Physico-Chemical Research Institute and his several assistants will conduct research on cosmic rays toward the end of July at a point 1,200 meters from ground surface in Shimizu tunnel of the Joyetsu railway line. Canada Prepared To Recruit 40,000

Reuter

OTTAWA, July 11—The necessity in Canada is to provide fundamental training of recruits so they can be ready to proceed where they can best serve the Empire, declared Colonel Ralston, Minister for Defense, in the House of Commons yesterday.

Arrangements, he revealed, have been made so that 40,000 additional men can be recruited. In addition, many more men will have the opportunity to enlist for home defense training.

This will be the first step toward enlarging Canadian armed forces under the Mobilization Act passed recently.

SPRINGS BIG SURPRISE

Reuter

ST. LOUIS, July 9—The first shutout in the eight year history of the annual All Star game between the American and National Leagues was administered to the American Leaguers here today by a score of 4-0.

The result came as a jolting surprise to baseball fans of the nation, who had established the American Leaguers as 8-5 favorites on the strength of superior pitching on paper.

Paul Derringer of Cincinnati was credited with the victory, while Red Ruffing of New York was charged with the defeat, all four runs being tallied off his deliveries from the fifth to the eighth innings, the span over which he toiled.

FOR THREE HITS

The American Leaguers could comb the offerings of the National League hurlers for only three hits, while the losers collected seven, including a home run with two aboard by Max West of Brooklyn.

The game was a tight affair, with neither team able to dent the rubber, until Ruffing took over the mound duties for the American League in the fifth, The National Leaguers gave him no chance to even limber up, Arky Vaughan of Pittsburgh connecting for a sharp single to center, Billy Herman of Chicago following up with another single to left, Max West adding his dramatic home run as a climax.

Two hits and an error gave the National Leaguers their final run in the eighth innings.

The victory brought the eight-year tally in the series to 5-3 in favor of the American League.

BRITISH ACTORS MAY PARTICIPATE IN WAR

Seven Hollywood Stars Fall Within Fighting Age Limit

United Press

HOLLYWOOD, July 14—British motion picture actors who have been pestering the British Government for months to permit them to join the colors have been advised that those between the ages of 21 and 31 may return to England for military service.

Those coming within this classification include Richard Greene, Louis Hayward, Robert Cooke, Bruce Lester, Highie Green, Ian Fulton and Patrick Knowles.

Others such as Freddie Bartholomew are too young while Cary Grant, Basil Rathborne, Charles Laughton and a dozen others are too old.

Cary Grant, who will earn $150,000 in his next picture, is reported planning to donate the entire sum to care for British refugee children who will be brought to the United States.

Boris Karloff and several other British actors have arranged to bring either to the United States or Canada sixty inmates of a British actors' orphanage.

ENGLAND CUTS TEA RATIONS

Food Minister Orders More Reductions; Fat Situation Acute, German Agency Says

D.N.B.

BERLIN, July 11—The English food minister, Woolton, has announced further reductions of tea rations. Each person is to be allowed one fourth of the former average consumption. Margarine and other fats have also undergone further restrictions. Woolton stated that the time had come, when everyone had to restrict himself despite the fact that England has adequate foodstuff supplies.

The ministry, he said, was counting on a long siege and the U-boat activity would have to be taken into account. England's loss of foodstuff supplies from the European continent took place with a greater speed as Lord Woolton had anticipated several weeks ago. The loss of all butter and whale oil supplies has led to governmental control of the supplies of margarine, which recently has been sharply restricted as well as fats.

This measure has become necessary, because England's own domestic supply and production is negligible. Only 9 per cent of her butter needs and 25 per cent of her margarine needs are covered by domestic production. England depends 100 per cent on foreign countries for her supplies of vegetables, oils and fats. Only 7.2 per cent of Britain's milk production is used for making butter and cheese. England has placed very little care on her milk production and an intensification of her fodder areas and her livestock would require a number of years and it is a great question, whether England would then be able to cover her own fat needs.

The fat rationing measures show how extremely serious England's fat supply problem is. Lord Woolton's statement to the effect that England has abundant foodstuffs supplies is not believed by the British population, and what is even more serious, the people do not believe in the possibility that Britain can buy everything from abroad, because England cannot transport all these purchases at the present lacking of ships. In addition Lord Woolton rightly stated that the action of German submarines has to be taken into account. England's period of starvation has definitely started now.

BRITISH STEEL SUPPLY DROPS

Germans Claim Aluminum Shortage Is Also Acute, Hurts Aviation Industry

D.N.B.

BERLIN, July 12—British Minister of Supply, Morrison, in an appeal to the United States for economic support stated that Germany had a production capacity of 42 million tons of steel against a British Empire production of 19 million tons. He declared that only the combined production capacity of England and the United States could meet the strength of the European continent. Morrison's speech is remarkable for its sudden change of tone. Formerly, members of the British Government always claimed that England's resources and productive capacity compared with Germany was without limits. England now maintains a strictly different attitude.

Only in March, the British press stated that all ore imports into Germany via Narvik had to be stopped and that by this measure Germany's steel and iron production would be reduced to a minimum. Today the British Minister of Supply appeals to the U. S. for aid, because Germany's production power has been increased to such an extent that it obviously constitutes a serious threat to the British economic life.

Another serious factor in the British armament industry is the lack of aluminum. This was recently shown by the appeal to British housewives to hand over all available aluminum articles to the airplane industry. England's aluminum production during the last few years was not sufficient to cover her domestic needs.

Bauxite, a vital material for the production of aliminum, is entirely imported from foreign countries. Germany increased her production greatly since 1932 while of 22,000 tons aws able to cover one-production. England's production of 22,000 tons was able to cover one third of her needs in 1938. In 1938 England imported 45,000 tons from different countries of the world, especially from European countries, while now she can only import from Canada. England's Bauxite situation is even more serious. France formerly supplied England with 83. per cent, Greece 8.5 per cent and the Empire 8.2 per cent, England is now being cut off from 91.8 per cent of her Bauxite imports which constitutes a serious threat to her airplane industry.

COVERING THE WORLD

From German Sources

OSLO, July 19—Erling Bjoernson, the son of the famous Norwegian poet, published a much remarked article in the paper "Nationen." In this article Bjoernson is dealing with the system, which hitherto had ruled Norway, which he described as corrupt and democratic in the bad sense of the word.

He pointed out that not only did Germany not want to have anything to do with gentlemen like Nygaardsvold and Hambro, but that also the Norwegian people are glad to have got rid of these men, who with their system of governing the country would have ruined it on the long run.

OIL SHARES CONTROLLED

BUCHAREST, July 19—A control of shares of the petroleum companies was decided upon a few days ago in order to prevent the foreign element becoming too strong in the Rumanian oil industry. Sales of such shares must be submitted every day to a commission, which grants the necessary sales permit to a broker, who had handled such a business already before. The sale only becomes valid, when this permission has been granted.

ARREST IN BELFAST

STOCKHOLM, July 19—A great number of arrests has been made in Belfast according to a report received here by the "Dagens Nyheter." Those arrested were members of the I.R.A., who had distributed in Belfast and in Northern Ireland a proclamation which stated that the first task of every Irishman was to throw the British army out of the country. "We need not care for an invasion," the proclamation says, "as conquerors are already among our people and within our borders. We must clean up with the British in Ulster, as we have no other enemies. England's enemies may be considered Ireland's friends."

Spanish Empire Rises

MADRID, July 19—Madrid political circles attached great importance to the speech, which was delivered by Generalissimo Franco on the occasion of the presentation of the order of the Holy Ferdinand by the Spanish generality. The extraordinary political importance of this speech is seen in the fact that for the first time Franco demanded an empire for Spain.

It is pointed out in this connection that Franco in his speech had stated that his first task was to strengthen Spain. The declaration of the chief of state according to which Spain proved the righteousness of her claims by the death of 500,000 men, is also noted here with great interest.

U. S. DESTROYER SAFE

BILBAO, July 19—The United States destroyer Barry, which a few days ago had been reported torpedoed, according to British sources, has left the port of Bilbao with many Americans on board.

NO REGRET EXPRESSED

AMSTERDAM, July 19—In an article commenting on the events in South Africa, the newspaper "Telegraaf" writes that from the Dutch point of view a shattering of the British supremacy in South Africa must not be regretted. The newspaper points out that it has not yet forgotten what had happened in the Boer war and also that Dutch emigrants have been treated in South Africa worse than any other emigrants in the country, who had been able to procure a British passport. The newspaper expresses the hope that in future, relations will be most essentially better than in any other years before.

From British Sources

2 PLANES DOWNED

LONDON, July 18—Two enemy planes are thought to have been lost in raids on southeast England today. One was shot down during an unsuccessful attack on a small steamer off the coast and the other so damaged over another town as to appear incapable of reaching home.

Addressing volunteers at the recently opened northern recruiting center, General de Gaulle, Commander in Chief of the French Forces in England, said that the Frenchmen in this country must decide whether they wished to continue the fight with England or return to France. No propaganda would be used to induce them to join his legion. Since the center had opened there has been a constant stream of volunteers, many of them having changed their minds about wanting to return to France.

FIGURES TO FEAR

Every country in the world today that is not German is exposed to a sinister menace beside which the clumsy intrigue of the Third International, the Comintern, is mere child's play. In the United States, the countries of Latin America, Japan, China, the Dutch East Indies, Africa, the Balkan States, Spain and Sweden, the Fourth International is at work through the Fifth Column. This is the greatest danger of the modern world to every nation which would retain its independence and its own way of life.

What is this Fourth International? It is the world wide organization to secure for Nazi Germany domination, in their time and turn, of the countries in which it works. Everybody knows what the Third International is. It is a world-wide organization to secure world revolution, world conversion to communism, and hence world domination for Soviet Russia. Nations have recognized that threat and fought it effectively. The Third International, however, is Russian-organized, while the Fourth International is German-organized and therefore much more dangerous. Every true patriot, every man who loves his country and her ways of life is the enemy of the Fourth International.

The instrument of the Fourth International in every country is the Fifth Column. The head of that Fifth Column may be the head of the German diplomatic or consular mission there, pledged by treaty to respect the institutions of the country to which he is accredited. Or he may be the head of the local Nazi party, a private citizen simply abusing normal international hospitality. Under the orders of the Fifth Column commander are all the German residents who, by the German Government decree of February 17, 1937, are forced, before leaving Germany, to join the "Foreign Organization of the Nazi Party" and misguided native traitors who, purchased or cajoled, constitute the rank and file of the Fifth Column.

Just as the headquarters of the Third International is in Moscow that of the Fourth International is in Berlin. This is the "Foreign Organization of the Nazi Party" of earlier mention and its chief is Herr Ernst Wilhelm Bohle. It supervises some 30,000 groups of Germans in foreign countries. It also cooperates in its work of fomenting world revolution with the Minister of Propaganda under Dr. Josef Goebbels. He, in his turn, controls every German newspaper correspondent abroad, so that these ipso facto are agents of the Fourth International and the Fifth Column. Other related organizations are the Foreign Section of the German Labor Front and the Foreign Political Office of the Nazi Party under Herr Alfred Rosenberg. German teachers who take posts abroad are "instructed" in their work in the German Academy of Munich under Professor Karl Haushofer. Thus, every German teacher abroad, unless he is a refugee, is a direct, specially prepared agent of the Fourth International and the Fifth Column.

What sort of work do these people actually do? This depends, of course, on the country in which they work; there are more opportunities in some than in others. In every country they spy, whether that country is supposedly friendly or not. Every piece of military and economic information which comes to the notice of a German living abroad goes straight to the head of the Foreign Organisation and thence to Berlin. That has been proved by official enquiries in the U.S., Brazil and Uruguay. If any German is employed by a foreign Government Department, what he can discover in that department is at the disposal of the "Foreign Organisation." Since the Organisation had its central department installed in the German Foreign Office in 1937, German diplomatic missions in foreign countries cooperate fully with it. Diplomatic and consular bags are used to transfer its instructions, its reports and its propaganda material. It is, in fact, an officially supported international spy ring.

It is, of course, also an agency of German propaganda. It buys newspapers, bribes individual journalists and organises whispering campaigns. But these are the least dangerous of its activities except in those cases where its agents identify themselves with some particular party in the state and make not specifically pro-German propaganda but local propaganda in the favor of some sectional interest. The ultimate effect then is simply to create confusion in the state concerned.

When a round-up of Nazi leaders was made in Uruguay in May this year, one of them had in his possession detailed plans for a revolutionary movement. One of the seized papers contained instructions from Berlin urging the Nazis to "hurry to put our plans into action because the European war will end in June."

In the Argentine, the Nazi Fifth Column organization is led by Herr Alfred Muller, leader of the local Nazi Party, who promotes "cultural relations" between Argentina and Germany. One of his native colleagues Ramon Garria de Zuniga, confessed last March that, inspired by the Reichstag fire and Munich beerhall explosion, he had bombed the Nazi headquarters in Montevideo in an attempt to arouse public sentiment against Jews and Communists.

In Colombia the Nazi Fifth Column leader is Herr Erich von Ribbentrop, nephew of the German Foreign Minister, where he controls an organization, 2,000 strong, in ten of the principal cities. He arranges for the sending of German commercial pilots in relays to the German controlled Scad ta airlines in Colombia They remain just long enough to become familiar with the terrain.

Milan Celebrates

MILAN, July 19—The fourth anniversary of the Spanish revolution is subjected to the most cordial articles in the Italian press. "Corriere della Sera" writes that Spain under the leadership of its Caudillo was progressing to ever more glorious developments. Her aspirations were well known, her heart was beating in union with that of Fascist Italy. Her aspirations were social and international justice, order, labor and national unity, as well as freedom in the Mediterranean. When the day would arrive Spain would win new battles to secure her national aims.

Armstrong Scores TKO Victory Over Jenkins in Sixth

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, July 17—Henry Armstrong, Negro world's welterweight champion from Los Angeles, tonight scored a technical knockout victory over the lightweight champion, Lew Jenkins, of Sweetwater, Texas, in the sixth of a scheduled 12-round non-title bout at the Polo Grounds.

Although the fight was predicted as a "natural," because of Jenkins victory against Lou Ambers in May, the aggressive mauling and punching of Armstrong proved too much for the Sweetwater Swatter. Armstrong floored the Texan six times between the fourth and the end of the sixth round, and when the bell rang for the beginning of the seventh Jenkins failed to come out of his corner.

Armstrong tipped the scales at 150 pounds and Jenkins at 135½.

On Ox days in the Doyo (hottest part of summer) according to the lunar calendar, broiled eels are eaten by Tokyoites. This summer, however, the custom will not be observed since the Tokyo eel wholesalers' federation has decided not to sell the fish on the Ox day of July 21 and the day before. The measure was decided in order to economize in charcoal, soy and other materials required to cook unusual amounts of eel.

JOHNNY MIZE LEADS MAJORS IN HOME RUNS

Cardinal Closely Pressed By Jimmy Foxx; Finney and Herman Leading Hitters

United Press

NEW YORK, July 13—It has been 10 years since a National League player has led both major leagues in home runs, but big Johnny Mize of the St. Louis Cardinals continued to set the pace in the home run parade with 21 in the batting statistics as of yesterday.

Mize has led the home run list since early this season, and his 21 circuit clouts remain unchanged from last week. One homer behind him is Jimmy Foxx, who similarily failed to register any addition to his total. Hal Trosky of the Cleveland Indians also remained without further homers, his total being still 17.

George Keller of the Yankees, however, added one more to his total to bring his bag of four baggers to 16, while Johnson rose in the standing to tie Hank Greenberg with 15 homers.

FINNY SETS PACE

Lou Finney of the Boston Red Sox still is setting a hectic pace in hitting. During the past week's play, the star outfielder who has been one of the reasons for Joe Cronin's success this season, clouted out a further eight hits. This brought his total to 109 hits this season, nine more than the next player, Bill Herman of the Chicago Cubs. Herman's total last week was 95.

George Washington Case of the Washington Senators, the leading base burglar in the major leagues, was third on the list with 99 blows, four more than a week ago. Roger Cramer and Walker both were billed a run behind Case.

Ted Williams again led in runs scored. The three runs he scored for his team were sufficient to put him one point ahead of youthful Barney McCosky. Williams has scored 60 runs.

Charley Gehringer, who was second last week, dropped in the standing as he only was able to cross the platter twice this week.

INDIANS IN LEAD

United Press

NEW YORK, July 11—With the excitement and bustle of the annual All Star game over with for another year, the major leagues resumed a normal schedule of operations today.

In the American League the Cleveland Indians regained possession of first place and took a half game lead over the Detroit Tigers by trouncing the Philadelphia Athletics, 8-5, while the Tigers were losing to the Washington Senators.

Ken Keltner clouted his eighth home run of the year in the seventh inning with two aboard to give the Tribe victory. The Tigers, meanwhile, succumbed to the Senators chiefly through a Nat rally in the second when a double by pitcher Hudson sparked a scoring spree.

The New York Yankees added another win to their record to move up to within six and one-half games of the lead. The Ruppert Rifles are rapidly becoming a major threat. It was Red Rolfe who led the Yanks to a 6-4 win over the St. Louis Browns by clouting a home run and two triples to set the batting pace.

The Boston Red Sox picked up a full game on the Tigers by nosing out the Chicago White Sox, 3-2, despite the fact they were outhit by 11-7. Bobby Doerr's 13th home run of the season was responsible.

In the National League, the Chicago Cubs divided honors with the Boston Bees in a double header. The Cubs took the first game chiefly through the efforts of Bill Nicholson, who chased five runs across the plate, including a home run in the sixth with two aboard. In the nightcap, Miller's double, Errickson's single and Sisti's long fly in the 10th inning gave the Bees revenge.

Philadelphia at Pittsburg was rained out.

Juvenile Crime Cases

their older friends that they are "some guys," "game fellows" and the like, they even feel a thrill of having become adventurers and heroes. They are now on the danger line, and it is only one step more to the wrong side that puts them in a category generally known as delinquent or criminally inclined. They are apparently suffering from being too free, and the difficulty is that they do not know how to put a break on themselves. The consequence is drinking, financial break down, borrowing, quarreling, bullying, fighting, stealing and what not.

UNIFORMS LIKED

There comes a young fellow in a university uniform. In reality, he is no more than a mere unskilled young factory operative. It dawned upon him that in a university uniform he would have a better chance to stand in a good grace of a pretty bar-maid or waitress at a cafe as a son of a well-to-do family with a brilliant future. In this frame of mind he goes to a cafe and indulges himself in the indoor sport of bragging over his father's "gold mine." Here is a chance for him to drink one too many with a soft voice of the pretty waitress whispering in his ear and here he begins his downhill trend, spiritually, morally, financially and every other way.

As they are still young and inexperienced, the Government seeks to protect and reform them instead of treating them as criminals outright. In Tokyo, the police authorities occasionally conduct raids on usual haunts of delinquent young men. This method to keep down the increase of recalcitrant youth works usually with good result in a country like Japan, where the family is the unit of the nation and the family relation is closely knit.

The minute a criminally inclined young fellow is placed in the detention cell at a police station, he is made prey to a great remorse, for in Japan, such a term as criminally inclined is of a far reaching consequence. He is obsessed with a most disturbing thought of his parents and how deeply his mother would be aggrieved when she learns that her son is in police custody, because of the fact that when one is stigmatized with such a name as criminally inclined it is a disgrace not only to himself but to his parents, to the good name of his family and ancestors.

FAMILIES INJURED

The affair may have a damaging effect upon the matrimonial prospect of his sisters and brothers, not mentioning his own in the future, for no family cares to get a sister of a criminally inclined fellow as its son's bride or to give away a daughter to his brother in marriage.

After an investigation, the police give him a lecture and scolding and finally release him on condition that he should behave himself in the future. In some cases, the authorities summon his parents and give them warning and advices before they restore the boy to his parents.

But many criminally inclined young men are turned over to the Juvenile Court, the central organ to cope with more serious cases. At present there are four Juvenile Courts in Japan, which are situated in Tokyo, Osaka, Nagoya and Fukuoka Prefectures, and another one is scheduled to be established early next year. The Government also maintains educational institutions in various sections of the country for the reform of those young men who are turned over to them by the Juvenile Courts and prefectural authorities. The total number of boys and girls cared for at those institutions is about 3,000 a year. In addition to this, there are a large number of private institutions interested in the same kind of work.

HOMES FOR FEW

Another method of dealing with recalcitrant youth is to place him under the care of a private family interested in such work. If the housewife is considerate and has an intelligent understanding in taking care of children, it is reported, this reform measure is most effective. In Tokyo, about 100 criminally inclined boys are entrusted with private families.

Many of them are working in small workshops as apprentices. In this case, the shopkeeper and his wife play the part of parents for the boy apprentice, keeping the dark side of his life on a strict secrecy from other workers in the shop.

Cause of Finance Ministry Fire

Memorial services were held Thursday by the Finance Ministry for the repose of the soul of Taira No Masakado, a notorious rebel of the 10th century, in the ruins of the Finance Ministry buildings which were destroyed in a recent fire. Masakado's head was believed to have been buried in a spot in the site. Because people say that the Finance Ministry's failure to take good care of the spot caused the recent conflagration the Ministry caused the ceremony to be performed Thursday.

¥10,000 Premiums

The first lot-drawing for the ¥10,000 premiums for Patriotic bonds which were put on sale in May and June will be held August 1 at the Hypothec Bank of Japan. There will be 50 lucky numbers for ¥10,000 premiums.

Glider Contest

The third all-Japan students' glider contest is scheduled to take place for three days beginning July 26 at the Kirigamine plateau in Nagano Prefecture. Part of the soarer contest to take place between 11 a.m. and noon on the last day will be relayed on a national hookup by the Matsumoto radio station.

Pear Crops Better

The Agriculture and Forestry Ministry's survey reveals that crops of pear in Niigata, Shizuoka, Fukushima, Ibaraki and other prefectures this year are better than last year's. Okayama and Tottori Prefectures reported crops larger by 14.5 per cent than last year's.

Half-Holidays Abolished

The Government offices will abolish the usual summer half-holidays this year in conformity with wartime circumstances. This is the third summer that half-holidays of Government offices were abolished because of hostilities in China.

Earlier Radio Programs

The Radio Broadcasting Corporation of Japan has decided to start broadcasting at 5:30 a.m. daily from August 2 to 30. Daily programs will start with the reveille played by buglers. This is the first time that radio programs start so early, each station having started broadcasting daily from 6 a.m. at the earliest for about 15 years.

HISTORY MADE AT CHICAGO BY DEMOCRATS

Nomination of Roosevelt Called Important Event; 1940 Platform Approved

By SADAO OTAKE
Domei Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, July 18—The renomination of President Franklin D. Roosevelt as the Democratic Party's presidential candidate for three consecutive terms constitutes an important historical event in the annals of American history because no other President of the United States has ever received three consecutive nominations.

President Grant after serving two terms, was succeeded by President Hayes. President Grant then staged an unsuccessful campaign to gain the third nomination for Chief Executive.

Theodore Roosevelt first served as President during President William McKinley's unexpired term arising from the latter's assassination, and after that remained in the White House for a full term. He was defeated for President on his third try on the Progressive ticket in 1912, when he ran against President Taft's re-election. The Republican vote was split, and Mr. Woodrow Wilson, a Democrat, was elected President.

It is interesting to note that the Senate on October 2, 1928, fearing that President Coolidge may run for a third term, passed a resolution which said, "any departure from the two-term precedent would be unwise, unpatriotic and fraught with peril against our free institutions."

Those approving this resolution included Senator Alben Barkley, of Kentucky; Senator Robert Wagner, of New York; Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada; Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi; Senator Henry Ashurst, of Arizona; Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, and other distinguished Democratic Party members. The same men early this morning successfully engineered the third term draft for President Roosevelt.—

PARTY PLATFORM

Domei Tsushin

CHICAGO, July 17—The Democratic Party tonight approved the 1940 platform, by which it hopes to continue another four years' reign at Washington and throughout the nation, pledging to keep the United States out of foreign wars and reaffirming major New Deal policies which the Roosevelt Administration has carried out successfully during the past more than seven years.

The Party platform, unanimously adopted by the National Convention, asserted that enforcement of these principles are necessary to "strengthen Democracy by defensive preparedness against aggression and also to increase our economic efficiency and improve the people's welfare."

The foreign policy plank, which is expected to be the major issue in the forthcoming Republican-Democratic campaigns, indicated a compromise by the strong school of Isolationists and the so-called Interventionists. The plank on foreign policy read:

"The American people are determined that the wars raging in Europe, Asia and Africa shan't come to America. We won't participate in foreign wars and we won't send our army, naval or air forces to fight in foreign lands outside of America except in case of attack.

"We have favored, shall rigorously enforce and defend the Monroe Doctrine. We must be strong so that no possible combination of Powers would dare attack us. We will do all in our power to destroy treasonable activities or disguised anti-Democratic and unAmerican activities.

GOOD NEIGHBOR

"We shall continue our traditional policies of the good neighbor and shall cultivate foreign trade through desirable trade agreements.

"We pledge to extend all material aid, consistent with law and not inconsistent with the interests of our own national self defense, to peace-loving and liberty loving peoples."

On domestic issues, the platform praised the New Deal's social, economic and agricultural policies by inserting the following major provisions:

(1) We pledge to continue and expand all present farm policies;

(2) We pledge continuance of the Wagner Labor Act and will strive toward increasingly, whole-hearted cooperation between labor and industrial management;

(3) We promise to continue attack on concentration of economic power and will aid small business by removing unnecessary taxes;

(4) We continue to oppose the turning of control of Federal-financed relief over to state or local authorities;

(5) We pledge to dedicate ourselves to extend the Social Security Act to cover millions of persons who are still unprotected;

(6) We promise to expand and continue the Federal Health, Youth Education, Slum Clearance and Housing programs;

(7) We promise for Negroes to continue to strive for complete legislative safeguards against discrimination in government service and benefits and in national defense forces.

RISING SUN OIL TEAM DEFEATS CRICKET FOES

Best 'The Rest' by Big Score in Intra-Club Contest at Yokohama

The Rising Sun Petroleum Company's team defeated "The Rest" in an intra-club cricket match at the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club Saturday afternoon by 177 for 9 wickets to 76.

The winners batted first and with about two hours of daylight left decided to declare. The losers, realizing that they had little time in which to try for a victory hit out freely, and this type of batting proved disastrous.

Stephens made a good stand, scoring 48 before being dismissed with the high score of the day. Steer obtained 24 runs for the second high total on his side. Harris was the leading batsman for the losers, getting 33.

The best bowling performance was also turned in by Stephens who obtained three wickets for 14 runs. Lysons was next in line with three wickets for 15 runs.

NEW ASSEMBLY HOLDS COLORFUL MEET AT VICHY

French Legislators Assemble To Formulate Authoritarian Regime for Defeated Nation

Transocean

VICHY, July 15—A sombre blue-grey cloud hung over the countless little turrets of the roof of the large Casino of Vichy, when the press and the public were admitted recently to the Casino's theater auditorium, where the National Assembly meets to give France after 150 years of parliamentary debating an authoritarian regime. Twelve hotel porters in blue-grey uniforms decorated with gold solemnly lined the drive leading up to the entrance and bowed to the parliamentarians and the representatives of the press as they may have bowed in bygone days to thousands of beautiful women in dazzling gowns, who used to frequent the Casino of Vichy.

A soft and rather irregular rumbling of the drums of the Republican Guards was heard in the lobby. Lined up against the wall, covered with velvet of a dark violet hue on which the sun was shining brightly they offered a sombre spectacle. In between were officials of the Palais Bourbon in their light blue uniforms. Only a few motorcars drew up in front of the Casino. Deputies and Senators left them accompanied by the same ceremony as in days past at the Luxembourg and the Palais Bourbon.

PRESIDENT ARRIVES

The first person to arrive was the President of the Senate, Jeanneney, wearing a tophat. He will be in the chair of the National Assembly. His face with its distinguished white beard was drawn. Edouard Herriot, the President of the Chamber, was the next to arrive. His bulky form in a creased suit, with a huge watchchain across his broad chest, from which dangles a pendant of considerable weight. Leon Blum walks up the gravel path with his traditional glasses and long narrow shoes. Paul Reynaud—a bandage on account of his injury sustained in his motorcar accident round his small head—smiles cheerfully. He is surrounded by three secretaries, each carrying one of his portfolios.

All these Senators and parliamentarians are dressed in black. On the left side they wear the red button of the Legion d'Honneur. Then there are the international correspondents. Many women are among them with notepaper and pencil. Officials rigorously demand the showing of press passes. In a small pink drawing room on one side people are drinking champagne. Although the number of Senators and deputies has been reduced by almost half, they appear to be a never ending flow of humanity, whose steps are silenced by the velvet of the lobby and the auditorium.

Only once is a heavy tread of boots heard coming from the staircase. A small group of deputies, of whom one has nailed boots, has arrived. Dommang, Xavier Vallat, Batille Tixier-Vinancourt, Marcel Deat, Bergery, Senator Reibel and some more deputies with red faces, who betray already from afar that they represent the southern French wine departments, that they come from the Provence and Cote Vermeille. They are the same men who for many years have opposed Blum, Reynaud and Daladier.

SOUTHERNERS SOLEMN

They wear no black suits. By their none too formal clothes they obviously wish to express they have not come to solemnly bury the old constitution, but to attend with courage and alertness the birth of a new one. A deep blue curtain has been spread behind the desks of the President of the National Assembly and the members of the Government and behind the dais from which Pierre Laval will speak in the name of Marshal Petain. On either side are two red, white and blue flags in frames of gold. Other ornaments of the hall could not be covered up. Thus Pierre Laval's black curly hair and his tanned face appear to be framed by a graphically painted God Amor.

HERROIT SILENT

The auditorium where the Senators and deputies are seated has two balconies, which are used for seating the public, the journalists, stenographers and the wives of deputies and Senators. Behind the pillars are camera men ready to take their pictures. Edouard Herriot is seen surrounded by deputies. Continually he is being asked why he refused to admit questions regarding the responsibility for the French conduct of war, concerning the war guilt and the foundations of the Anglo-French alliance, in the Chamber's session during the morning. In front of him is a broad table with many books and manuscripts. He appears to be prepared for every eventuality.

There is no unity regarding the future in this French National Assembly. Unless it is the knowledge that it will be different from the past. There is only remorse and dissatisfaction about the past. These deputies and Senators will listen patiently to Laval's words because they must. They will only vote against this new constitution if they are courageous. Only a few dare to oppose this new constitution which ends their career.

Unexpected Boom

Noodle-shops, ice and fruit dealers in the neighborhood of Prince Fumimaro Konoye's villa at Ogikubo have been enjoying an unexpected business boom from incessant orders of about 200 reporters and policemen who have been living in a tent village near the villa since the Prince started his Cabinet formation.

Traders' Conferences

Tokyo's approximately 50 vaudeville houses have been used lately for daytime meetings of trade associations. Rice, charcoal, sugar, bean-curd and other traders are finding them convenient places to hold mass meetings to discuss measures to cope with the wartime economic control measures.

Conserving Gasoline

As a first step to control gasoline wasted for amusement purposes, the Traffic Section of the Metropolitan Police will shortly prohibit taxis from going to horse race grounds, says the Chugai.

According to statistics recently compiled by the Traffic Section, the taxis and private owned cars visiting the horse races during the Tokyo Spring meeting exceeded 13,000. Police inspectors said some persons going to the horse race grounds payed such "unreasonable" fees as ¥20 or ¥30 only for a single trip.

Mysterious Limb

What was believed to be the right leg of a man was found afloat at about 5:30 p.m. Friday in the lower Rokugo river, Kamata Ward, Tokyo, by a bargeeman. Kamata police believe it was severed about 10 days ago and possibly belonged to a suicide victim who jumped in front of a train and that the leg probably fell into the river from a railway bridge.

Yawata Maru Trial

The new N.Y.K.'s liner Yawata Maru, 17,000 tons, under construction at the Nagasaki Dockyard, of the Mitsubishi firm, has been completed and will be handed over to N.Y.K. July 31.

The new liner is 580 feet long and 74 feet wide and has a speed of 22 knots. The Yawata Maru can accommodate 127 first class passengers, 88 second class and 70 third class.

The Yawata Maru will be used on the Seattle route, as the European war altered the steamship lines' original plans of placing her on the European run.

She is scheduled to leave on her maiden voyage August 21, sailing from Nagasaki for Seattle via Moji, Kobe.

The Yawata Maru was entirely built from home-made materials and will be one of the best ships under the N.Y.K. banner.

COVERING THE WORLD

From German Sources

851 Children Evacuated

NEW YORK, July 22—In some Canadian port 851 children were landed on Saturday from England, among whom some 125 children belong to professors of the Oxford University.

BULLITT UNMOLESTED

NEW YORK, July 22—On his arrival in New York, William C. Bullitt, American ambassador to France, told the press that he had been treated with greatest respect and courtesy on behalf of the German authorities upon their entrance into Paris. The German commander had paid a visit officially to him in Paris and had immediately ordered buildings of those embassies, which are entrusted with taking care by the United States representation, should remain untouched. He personally was absolutely free in all his movements and he had never been molested.

PLANE ISSUE RISES

WASHINGTON, July 22—Great Britain demands the surrender of 100 planes manufactured in the United States and which are aboard the French aircraft carrier Bearn, which at present is lying in Martinique, according to reports from well informed quarters. The demand is referring to an agreement between the former allies that in case one of the two is dropping out the remainder has to take over the pending contracts of the other one. The French on the other hand are of the opinion that these planes now belong to the French because the contracts have been delivered and the planes have been paid for immediately. The French consequently are refusing to surrender these planes.

England Helpless

NEW YORK, July 22—"England is helpless against a German attack and unable to offer any resistance," declared Frank Gervasi, the American correspondent of Colliers Weekly, who arrived here on board the Clipper from Lisbon. Those, whoever experienced a German bombing attack, must be convinced of it, declared Gervasi.

BRITISH OIL SUPPLY

NEW YORK, July 22—The disastrous consequences, which the Italian fleet's blockade of the Mediterranean has for the British oil supply from Mesopotamia was commented upon by the military expert of the New York Post, Fletcher Pratt. England is now obliged, he declares, to transport oil from Mesopotamia around the African route, which is six times longer than the previous one. In order to keep the oil supply on the former level it must have running six times more oil tankers as she needed before Italy's entrance into the war.

MANY DEFEATISTS

MADRID, July 22—Former Lord Chancellor Maugham to his regret knows and has heard of quite a number of defeatists in England. He said so in a letter to The Times, in which he opposes other letter writers, who were still of the opinion that these people were unknown in England. Lord Maugham adds that in his opinion there were many people in England who listened to the German broadcasts in English.

G.B.S. GIVES VIEWS

STOCKHOLM, July 22—"Aftonbladet" on Sunday afternoon quoted that Bernard Shaw was saying that England under the present circumstances is unable to win the war. Mr. Shaw reportedly made this statement in an interview with an unnamed reporter.

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE RISES

STOCKHOLM, July 22—Lloyd George is said to have requested the Government to convoke a secret meeting of the House of Commons in order to discuss the political situation, which has arisen from the recent speech of Fuehrer Hitler, as reported from London. Moreover, Lloyd George is said to have asked the King for a personal reception.

From British Sources

SINKING DESCRIBED

CAIRO, July 21—The Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean Fleet in a communique issued here yesterday, giving the details of the sinking of the Italian cruiser Bartolomeo Colleoni, reveals that this cruiser with another cruiser of the same class was first sighted by destroyers northwest of the island of Crete at about 7:30 a.m. on July 19. When the Australian cruiser Sydney arrived in support about an hour later, the enemy altered course southwestward in an endeavor to escape. "Our forces, however, made a determined attack and accurate fire from the Sydney caused vital hits on the Colleoni which reduced her speed, enabling our destroyers to complete her destruction."

AIRDROMES ATTACKED

LONDON, July 21—The Air Ministry communique issued last night states: "Last night our bombers attacked enemy airdromes and seaplane bases along the coast of northwest Germany and northern Holland. They also bombed aircraft factories at Wismar on the Baltic coast, at Wenzendorf near Hamburg and at Bremen. Oil plants at Bremen and Gelsenkirchen and railway communications in the Ruhr and near the German-Dutch frontier were also attacked. Two enemy fighters were engaged and severely damaged by our bombers."

African Campaign

CAIRO, July 21—Royal Air Force and South African bombers are maintaining a constant offensive against Italian bases in Libya, Eritrea and Ethiopia. Our planes again visited Tobruk, destroying grounded aircraft, hangars and petrol dumps and direct hits were obtained on ships in the harbor. Other bases attacked included El Gubbi, Neghelli, Agordat and Machaca.

During an enemy raid on Mersamatruh, in western Egypt, the Italians lost one bomber.

FRENCH EDITOR JAILED

BERLIN, July 20—According to the German wireless, Lucien Derne, editor of the Lille newspaper "Echo du Nord," has been sentenced to five years penal servitude by a German military court. It is stated that Derne attempted to publish the text of the armistice conditions before any publication by the Petain Government alluded to the armistice conditions, and despite the German censor's warnings he attempted to publish a photograph of Mr. Churchill. It is further stated that he published a photograph of a French spy who was shot by the Germans in the last war and that he was actively engaged in stirring up passive resistance among the French.

DUTCH ARRESTED

WASHINGTON, July 21—The official German news agency in Berlin has announced that several Dutch employes in German concerns have been arrested as a reprisal for the internment and ill-treatment of over 2,000 Germans in the Netherlands East Indies. An interesting comment comes from the Netherlands Legation here to the effect that the 3,000 German internees in the Netherlands East Indies are receiving exactly the same food as the Dutch troops in the Indies, that their rations include an allowance of ten cigarettes a day and pocket money. Indeed, it has been observed that some of the German sailors have improved considerably in health since their internment.

Food Supplies Plenty

LONDON, July 21—Mr. Boothby, the new Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Food, assured the House of Commons yesterday that, whatever may befall, the food supplies in this country would be adequate. The command of the sea maintained by the Royal Navy has enabled the Ministry of Food to build up stocks of practically every essential commodity to such a point that the nation need have no anxieties for the future.

D.E.I. IN STERLING

CANBERRA, July 23—The Minister for Customs, Mr. McLeay, has announced that as from August 22 the Netherlands East Indies is to be regarded as a country within the sterling group for the purpose of import control regulations.

Mr. Menzies, the Australian Prime Minister has offered the Labor Party five or six seats in a National Cabinet, it is reported here today. The proposal will be considered by the Australian Parliamentary Labor Party at their meeting in the beginning of August.

United Press

NEW YORK, July 16—The Cincinnati Reds, enjoying an enforced idleness because of rain, picked up another half game on the faltering Brooklyn Dodgers today when the Flatbush Brigade bowed to the Pittsburgh Pirates for the second straight time, 5-3.

It was the tightest kind of game, however, and it wasn't until the eighth inning that the Bucs were able to break a 3-3 deadlock and forge into the lead that won them the game. In the eighth, Elliott's triple scored Young from second base, Elliott himself scoring a moment later on a fielder's choice on a force play at second.

CUBS DEFEAT GIANTS

The Chicago Cubs again defeated the New York Giants shutting them out, 2-0, when Phil Cavaretta broke up a pitcher's duel by cracking out a single with the bases loaded in the seventh for the only two runs of the game.

Two homers by Enos Slaughter and one by Johnny Mize paced the St. Louis Cardinals to an easy victory over the Boston Bees, while the Cincinnati Reds and Philadelphia Phillies were rained out.

In the American League, the Chicago White Sox came within three games of an even .500 percentage after a disastrous start by again beating the New York Yankees, 5-1. Joe Kuhel was again the star, with a home run, while Julius Solters checked in with a triple with two aboard.

Ben Chapman's 13th home run of the season enabled the Philadelphia Athletics to take a 3-1 decision from the Detroit Tigers, thereby forcing the Tigers to merely keep pace with the Cleveland Indians, who lost to the Washington Senators when the Nats staged a sixth inning uprising on three hits, four walks and a wild throw by Ken Keltner for seven runs.

St. Louis and Boston were idle today, having played their game as part of Sunday's double header.

TAKE TOP SPOT

United Press

NEW YORK, July 15—With the season just half completed today, the Detroit Tigers replaced the head of the American League ladder and the Cincinnati Reds increased their margin over the second place Brooklyn Dodgers in the National League to three full games.

The Tigers and the Indians are actually even in games won and lost, but the vagaries of percentages give the Bengals the top rung by the slim margin of two percentage points.

The Tigers moved into the lead by nosing out the Philadelphia Athletics in a slugfest, 9-8. Eight of the nine Tiger runs were scored in the fourth inning when five hits, Hank Greenberg's seventeenth homer of the season and three Mack boots saw a parade of Bengals dent the rubber.

FERRELL SHINES

Rick Ferrell, star Washington backstop, was responsible for the defeat of the Indians. With the score standing at 6-5 in the eighth, Ferrell came to bat with the bases loaded and promptly clouted a double to empty the paths.

The Chicago White Sox took a very close game from the New York Yankees, 3-2, winning on Joe Kuhel's home run in the eighth inning. It was the 14th circuit of the season for the Hose first sacker.

Seven runs in the first three innings gave the Boston Red Sox a commanding lead the St. Louis Browns were never able to overcome, the Beantowners winning by 10-6. Manager Haney and Coach Hoffman were ejected from the ball yard for exhibiting too much vigor in protesting on balls and strikes decisions.

In the National League, the Cincinnati Reds defeated the Philadelphia Phillies, 3-2, with Bucky Walters holding the Quakers to five hits and Frank McCormick and Ernie Lombardi setting the batting pace. The Brooklyn Dodgers, meanwhile were dividing honors in a twin bill with the Pittsburg Pirates, winning the first, 10-1, and losing the second, 4-3. Whitlow Wyatt pitched and batted his team to victory in the first, collecting a homer, double and single to set the pace. In the nightcap, Pete Coscarart's error in the third inning permitted Arky Vaughan to score the winning run of the game.

Hank Leiber's home run over the left field wall in the seventh with two aboard enabled the Chicago Cubs to beat the New York Giants, 5-3, while four hits each from the bats of Orengo, Koy and Owen led the St. Louis Cardinals to an easy 12-2 victory over the Boston Bees.

COVERING THE WORLD

From German Sources

Intriques Attacked

NEW YORK, July 22—Cautioning against misjudging the influence of the British Fifth Column in the United States, The New York Enquirer declares today that the programs drafted by the recent conventions of the two parties have openly taken into account the disinclination of the United States citizens against war but that nevertheless watch must be kept incessantly in order to frustrate plots of those who are loudly preaching their love of peace and democracy while never ceasing their perfidious efforts to bring war upon the United States.

DANISH CIVILIANS BOMBED

COPENHAGEN, July 22—The British air force is continuing bombing attacks on the Danish civilian population. A British plane Saturday night dropped several bombs on non-military grounds in the southeastern part of Seeland, destroying the house of a fisherman who was killed while asleep.

CALLED INCOMPETENT

STOCKHOLM, July 22—"Incompetent and hopelessly unfit for his task," was the note given to Minister of Information Duff-Cooper by some London Sunday papers according to the Dagens Nyheter. This report confirms the views of foreign observers who reported that the attacks on Duff-Cooper are growing ever stronger.

HALIFAX ASSAILED ALSO

STOCKHOLM, July 22—According to reports of neutral observers from London it appears that the open criticism by the public affects now also Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax who had been spared so far although a number of other Cabinet members had been subjected to severe rebukes by the public. Neutral and well-informed observers regard this fact as a proof for increasing dissatisfaction with the political leadership. At any rate, all leading London papers opposed Halifax since the last 48 hours, announcing at the same time that the secret session in the House of Commons would be rather stormy.

Roosevelt Sees Bullitt

WASHINGTON, July 22—President Roosevelt had a long conference yesterday and today with Ambassador Bullitt who has arrived from France. It is believed here that the conference was chiefly occupied with the question of the recognition of the Petain Government by the United States.

The New York Times reports that also the State Department is wishing to avoid everything likely to trouble the relations with the Petain Government.

THANKS WELFARE WORKS

PARIS, July 23—The paper Derniere Nouvelle de Paris published a letter of thanks from mothers and women, who were unemployed in the eighteenth district of Paris addressed to the National Socialist People's Welfare organization, in which they express their gratitude for the excellent "hot soups, bread and cheese."

COOPERATION STRESSED

COPENHAGEN, July 23—The new Danish minister for traffic and public works, Gunnar Larsson, in an address to the workmen of the engineering works of Copenhagen about the situation as well as the reorganization of the Danish trade industry, said among other things: for certain branches of the Danish economic life cooperation with Germany meant great possibilities and great conditions. These were particularly due for the Danish agriculture and in this respect it would be desirable to prevent the influx of labor from the land into the towns and that it would be more promising to work for resettlement on land.

From British Sources

HALIFAX RETORTS

LONDON, July 22—Lord Halifax, the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, replied to Chancellor Hitler's speech in a broadcast from London this evening. Chancellor Hitler, he said, has summoned Great Britain to capitulate to his will. "I shall not waste time by dealing with Hitler's distortion of almost every main event since the war began. He says that he has no desire to destroy the British Empire but there was in his speech no suggestion that peace must be based on justice, no word of recognition that the other nations of Europe had any right to the principle of self-determination which he has so often invoked for the Germans."

UTTERLY UNRELIABLE

ANKARA, July 22—The attention of the whole Turkish press is still concentrated on Chancellor Hitler's "peace offer" and Turkish newspapers unanimously describe it as utterly unreliable. Every newspaper expresses approval and admiration of the fierce determination of Britain and the Empire to continue fighting until decisive victory and the permanent assurance of freedom of all peoples oppressed by Nazism and Fascism have been won.

25 Craft Downed

LONDON, July 22—A German bomber shot down by British fighters over the east coast early today brings the German total losses for the past 48 hours in their attacks on this country to 25 aircraft. On Saturday 21 were shot down, nine more than was announced, and yesterday's total was four.

The Air Ministry communique issued this evening states: "Last night strong forces of R. A. F. bombers successfully continued their attacks on military objectives in Germany and Holland Aircraft of the Coastal Command on patrol off the Danish coast successfully bombed a 14,000 ton enemy supply ship. Coastal Command aircraft also set the oil tanks on fire at Ghent. Four enemy aircraft in all were destroyed in yesterday's air battles around our coasts. Two of our fighters were lost."

OIL DEPOTS ATTACKED

LONDON, July 22—An Air Ministry communique describing the latest R. A. F. attacks mentioned in an earlier release says: "Attacks were made against oil depots at Gelsenkirchen and Rotterdam, oil tanks at Bremen Docks, aircraft factories at Wismar, Rorenburg, Cassel and Gottingen, goods yards at Hamm and Soest, barges on the Leser Canal and airdromes in France, Holland and Germany. Three of our aircraft are missing." The communique adds: "It is now established that an enemy aircraft struck a balloon cable and was destroyed during a recent night attack on Britain."

DETAILS DESCRIBED

ISTANBUL, July 22—Further details of the havoc wrought by the British Royal Air force raids on Germany were given to Reuters by a Turkish traveler who has just returned here. He visited Hamburg, Emden, Bremen, Dusseldorf, Cologne and Essen and related that hardly a single factory remained intact in any of these cities. The Hamburg port, he declared, was in ruins and added that it was clear from what he had seen that only military objectives are being attacked and that the majority of civilians had been evacuated. The Nazi authorities have done everything possible to prevent the news of the damage from spreading to other parts of the country and the people in Berlin knew little about it. The traveler added that Herr Hitler still appeared popular in Nazi circles but that others were beginning to realise the danger and difficulties of attacking England.

Australians Arrive

SYDNEY, July 22—Australian Imperial Force reinforcements, including forestry and railway units who left Sydney on 22 and nurses who embarked at Melbourne on May 25, have arrived in England to join the Australians already there, according to a broadcast announcement from here today. Their safe arrival was one more proof of the absurdity of the Nazi allegation about the blockade of Britain.

SPEEDY BOUTS LOOM THURSDAY

Toshiro Aoki Faces Sasazaki In Ten Round Main Event; Six Other Matches Slated

Seven bouts headed by a ten-round main-event between Toshiro Aoki and Ko Sasazaki are scheduled for Thursday night at the Hibiya Amphitheater, under the sponsorship of the Nittoh Boxing Club. The fights will get under way at 6:40 p.m.

In the main-event undefeated Toshiro Aoki meets a veteran ringster Ko Sasazaki, who in his last fight a month ago scored a quick technical knockout over Shoichi Nakamura. The manner in which Toshiro mauled Nakamura stamps him as a slugger who goes right out from the bell with arms swinging.

Aside from his undefeated record, Aoki claims to be a boxer who has baffled most of his opponents with a hit-and-run attack. In close fighting he has shown a speedy two-fisted attack which has scored for him heavily.

The fact that a slugger is meeting a boxer may make it a running affair, however both boys are aiming at another crack at Horiguchi and as such should be out to score an impressive victory, with a K.O. if possible.

In the semi-final, Yokito Tanaka will face Tatsuo Masuda, the lad who has recently returned from a tour of South America where he recorded 28 victories in 30 fights. One of these victories was over Kid Chocolate one of the top-men of the Americas.

The bout is scheduled for ten-rounds with Masuda favored over the ex-collegian Tanaka.

The supporting bouts will find three six-rounders, with Shoichi Maruyama meeting Genkichi Murase, while M. Oki faces K. Ishida and S. Kinoshita meeting U. Ohatake.

Two four-rounders are scheduled with S. Yamaguchi facing R. Hayashi and T. Tashima meeting A. Suzuki.

Logan TKO's Erjavec In Third at Manila

Reuter

MANILA, July 18—Luis Logan, a local Spaniard, last night, scored a technical knock-out in the third round over Johnny Erjavec, of New York.

It was Logan's first straight victory, since he returned to the ring last March.

He stopped Glenlee, the Nebraskan, who had been earlier knocked out by the then world welterweight Champion, Ceferino Garcia, who Logan now hopes to fight.

The bout was billed as the Heavyweight Championship of the Orient.

GERMAN PLAN FOR REMAKING EUROPE TOLD

London Times Sees Hitler Transforming Europe Into Her Colonial Territory

Reuter

LONDON, July 16—Of Hitler's ultimate designs for France little has yet been allowed to emerge, but there has been one revealing indiscretion by a member of Petain's Cabinet," writes The Times.

"M. Pomaret, Minister of Labor, has explained that new France will abandon her 'exaggerated industrialism' and become once more a land of peasant agriculture.

"This is a policy which Germany has for the past few years been trying to impose on the Balkans. It is a policy which she is even now trying to enforce in Denmark and Holland.

"According to German reading of history, the power of Great Britain has been based on her position throughout the nineteenth century as the center of the world's industrial production, using non-industrialized colonies and territories overseas as her markets, as her granary, and as sources of her raw materials.

"The German dream is to emulate the British achievement, as Germany sees it. Germany is to be a great industrial and military power in the center of the continent. The rest of Europe is to be her colonial territory, which will feed and supply her and be markets for her products."

"But this territory won't be allowed to industrialize itself in competition with her.

FRENCH INDUSTRIES DOOMED

"In this scheme of things France will play an important part. The great French industries are doomed to sudden extinction or to slow decay.

"It is no accident that this policy should have found support among French politicians of the right; for the motley party complexion of the Petain Government can't conceal its essential character as an alliance between the extreme right and small groups of French Fascists.

"The rift in France between the town and country, between proletarian and peasant has never been wholly healed; and that section of the right which was once legitimist and is still fervently Catholic—the section to which men like Petain and Weygand belong by training and tradition—has always counted on the Catholic peasant to save France from the turbulent and free thinking industrial worker.

"Blind to the fact that in the 20th century peasant France can be no more than a helot of industrialized Germany, these honest zealots are ready to play into Hitler's hands by a campaign against French industrialism and the French proletariat."

AVIATORS PRAISED

Paying tribute to Britain's "knights of the air," the Daily Telegraph declares: "In the past 10 months of warfare nothing has been demonstrated more conspicuously than the splendid efficiency of our air force.

"In daring, in endurance, in resource our airmen have proved themselves inheritors of the great traditions of the Royal Navy itself.

"It is a wonderful achievement for the service, which is not more than a generation old, has had throughout that period to adapt itself to constant and rapid changes imposed by new inventions, and suddenly been subjected to the searching test of war on a titanic scale.

"Like the Navy, the tasks of the Air Force are manifold and of the greatest diversity. They spread into continents and they have to be carried out in conflict with not one but two of the most powerful air forces in the world. It is no little thing that in such a contest the R.A.F. has more than held its own.

"The Germans vaunted themselves of possessing invincible air power—invincible both in magnitude and in quality. That claim has already been discredited as to quality and its superiority in numbers has not been able to prevail against the tireless enterprise and fighting efficiency of its British adversary."

States the Daily Mail referring to tea rationing: "Two ounces of tea a week sounds little but it is enough. It means about five cups a day, which should be sufficient for anybody. The new rations announced yesterday are reasonable and necessary. They will cause no hardship."

600-Year-Old Cedars

Two rows of 600-year-old cedar trees, totalling 18, in front of the Kishibojin temple in Toshima ward, Tokyo, will receive Government protection. Tradition has it that six centuries ago, believers of the temple planted the trees on both sides of the road. In the early Meiji days, there remained 31 of the trees, but 13 were later cut down by local residents.

Undergo Austerities

Eighty members of a spiritual training organization including a number of so-called military police will undergo training for one week from July 24 at Karuizawa. Every morning, the participants will bathe in a waterfall. They will eat only a small amount of rice-gruel and hear daily lectures on Japanese spirit.

Tokyo-Born Ministers

There are six Ministers in the new Konoye Cabinet who were born in Tokyo, including the Premier. The first Konoye Cabinet, formed in 1937, had also six Tokyo-born Ministers. The late Prince Hirobumi Ito's and Tohru Hoshi's, organized in 1885 and 1900, respectively, were the only cabinets with Tokyo-born Ministers in the Meiji era which closed in 1912. In the subsequent Taisho and Showa eras, the third Katsura Cabinet had one Tokyo-born Minister, the Kato, Inukai, Saito and Hirota Cabinets had three, the Yamamoto and Terauchi cabinets two, and the Tanaka, Hayashi and Abe cabinets one apiece.

Revue Star Examined

Tahkie Mizunoye, noted star formerly of the Shochiku Girls' Opera, was examined by the Sugamo police, Tokyo, on suspicion of having indulged in mahjong gambling. It is alleged that a number of theater people habitually gamble at mahjong at a machiai in Shimbashi and at a hotel in Atami.

Dempsey Scores Another Knockout

United Press

DETROIT, July 16—Jack Dempsey, former world heavyweight champion, continued his knockout campaign against wrestlers by flattening "Bull" Curry in the second round here last night.

The old Manassa Mauler, who two weeks ago donned boxing gloves after a lapse of 13 years and knocked out Clarence Luttrell, last night put Curry away in one minute five seconds of the second round. The bout was set for six rounds.

It was one of the wildest burlesques in boxing history.

Although the Manassa Killer had not donned gloves since his retirement, he used to flatten wrestlers regularly several years ago when his services as a referee were in great demand. The usual procedure would be for one of the wrestlers to disagree with his decision. This would be the signal for Jack to shoot out his right and for the wrestler to go down and out.

Holds New Boxing Sensation

United Press

PATERSON, N.J., July 16—Pablo Dano, veteran Filipino boxer, held Johnny Juliano, new boxing sensation, to an unexpected eight-round draw here last night.

It was Juliano's 34th fight without defeat. Juliano is recognized as the New Jersey bantamweight and flyweight champion.

The Filipino weighed 115 and Juliano 116.

LABORITES ATTACK BRITISH ACTION POSTPONING CHILDREN EVACUATION

United Press

LONDON, July 17—Allegations that the Government's postponement of the overseas evacuation of British children was meant to camouflage a system under which well-to-do children are taken to safety while the poor are left behind were made by Laborites in the House of Commons yesterday.

The charges were made after the Lord Privy Seal, Clement Richard Attlee, told the House that the Government is shelving the plan to ship 200,000 children to the Dominions and the United States "until conditions for safety are improved."

Mr. Attlee said the threatened invasion by Germany, coupled with the loss of the French Fleet has forced Britain to conserve its naval convoys for more essential purposes. Those able to afford passage on fast, unescorted liners, he added; could send their children outside the Government's scheme, but the Government is unable to assume the same responsibility.

"The fate of the Arandora Star," he declared, "shows that even a fast passenger liner cannot always rely on her speed for safety."

The United States has offered to permit the entry of British children under 16 years of age. The number is limited only by shipping facilities and private assurances of support. The children would be admitted into the United States under two-year visitor visas which could subsequently be extended. Two hundred and ninety-eight unescorted children, normally resident in the United Kingdom, have already taken advantage of the offer.

Mr. Attlee said, "To the United States, who spared no effort to provide homes for British children, at this time I should like to express my warmest thanks on behalf of the Government. I hope our scheme is only temporarily suspended and that we may yet be able to take advantage of their warm hearted hospitality."

NO FORCE USED IN TRADE, SAYS REICH WRITER

South American Nations Will Find in Germany Excellent Market, Buyer

Transocean

BERLIN, July 7—"If any force is being exercised against the South American countries, as some newspapers in North America claim Germany is doing by its trade methods and economic hegemony in Europe, it is not being done by Germany but by others," Dr. Karl Megorle, diplomatic correspondent of the Berliner Boersen Zeitung wrote this morning.

"For nine months the South American republics have been compelled by the British blockade to forego their export trade with Europe as well as their imports from Germany, and today practically from the entire European continent. So they find themselves with a large part of their agricultural and raw material production on their hands and unsaleable. Their export prices drop and they find themselves exposed to the price dictatorship of those who still have access to their markets.

U.S. METHOD SAME

"It is now noted that the United States, which has characterized the German barter system economic force, is itself attempting to enforce its own foreign trade methods and has resorted to 'penal' customs and other coercive measures against those countries which opposed these methods.

"The South American countries are also well aware of the fact that the plan of a gigantic export cartel, as proposed by Washington, and to be submitted to the Havana Conference, is nothing else than a method to exploit economic power for political purposes, and even after the conclusion of the war in Europe, it would serve to prevent trade with Europe flowing along its natural channels.

"The opposition which is developing everywhere against this policy proves that the force behind it has been recognized, quite apart from the impossibility of carrying through such a plan without the most serious economic consequences for the South American countries.

INTIMIDATION BY LONDON

"If Britain is today permitted to force Europe to go without South American goods, this is possible only because of intimidation by London, not by Germany. Also it is because the United States permits Britain to exercise this pressure, although it is strong enough to compel Britain to respect international law and the freedom of the seas.

"Just as the North American states found in the past, the South American countries will also find in Germany a buyer who offers an excellent market for their products and a seller who readily complies with their individual needs. These states will be sufficiently independent and foresighted to make use of those opportunities as soon as the coercion brought to bear against them by Britain ceases."

Ryder Cup Team Defeats Challengers in Detroit Game

Reuter

DETROIT, July 18—The American Ryder Cup team defeated the Challengers, captained by Gene Sarazen, 7/5.

Notable wins on the official side were when Henry Picard beat Gene Sarazen 8/7, and Horton Smith beat the Open Champion, Lawson Little, 4/3.

AMERICAN PLANES FLYING FOR ENGLAND IN 'INVASION PATROLS' OVER GERMANY

United Press

R.A.F. AIRDROME SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, July 7—Over the grey expanses of the North Sea American-built reconnaissance planes roared yesterday as "invasion patrols" of the British Royal Air Force.

Above the wild fiords of Norway and the numberless indentations of the Dutch and Belgian coasts these planes flew in search of concentrations of German troops, aircraft and ships with which Chancellor Adolf Hitler plans his invasion of England.

From this camouflaged airdrome, which looks from the ground like a dream of a surrealist painter, I watched the R.A.F. invasion patrols go off on their daily job which brings them into frequent conflict with the German Air Force.

From young British, Canadian and South African pilots and their veteran leaders I have heard the story of these Lockheed planes which have proven to be one of the surprises of the war in the air.

The British Air Ministry bought several hundred Lockheed B-14 passenger liners before the war in the hope of filling the need for a long-distance reconnaissance plane which could take a lot of punishment.

Bomb doors were installed in the belly of the planes and "flexiglass" gun turrets were installed in the nose and between the rear rudders which characterize Lockheed planes. The turrets, which use electric and hydraulic power to swing the guns in all directions, are the same as installed in the new Defiant fighters.

"At first we thought these planes would be all right for scouting and photography," agrey-haired squadron leader said. "Then the crews discovered they could do amazing things with them and that it took a hell of a lot of punishment to bring down a Lockheed.

"Lockheeds were the first planes to drop bombs on Norway. When we abandoned the policy of not attacking land objectives in Germany, it was Lockheeds that dropped the first bombs and set fire to oil tanks in Bremen and Hamburg."

He said Lockheeds had been in combat with every type of German aircraft and always proved themselves better. He added that no Messerschmidt had ever shot down a Lockheed.

Today these Lockheed planes are the eyes of Britain on invasion patrols and their job is to break what the Germans call the "siege of Britain."

30 DAY BLITZKRIEG WILL WRECK ENGLAND

U.S. Experts Predict Defeat; Invasion Near

United Press

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., July 18—Military experts at Washington believe England can stand only 30 days against a German blitzkrieg, Harper Sibley, former President of the United States Chamber of Commerce, declared in a speech here last night.

When a European truce is reached, Mr. Sibley predicted, it will be between "a battered England and an exhausted German Empire."

DRIVE IMMINENT

United Press

BERLIN, July 18—The Hamburger Fremdenblatt yesterday declared that the "decisive battle against England is now imminent."

The speech of the British Prime Minister, Winston Churchill, last Sunday was "England's decision to commit suicide," the newspaper asserted.

Rumors persisted in unofficial sources that Chancellor Adolf Hitler's long awaited blitzkrieg against the British Isles would begin tomorrow Informed quarters, however, said the German drive would not be preceded by rumors, but by swift action.

Synthetic Fuel Oil Tests Successful

The Chemical Research Institute of the Kyoto Imperial University has achieved highly satisfactory results in its artificial fuel oil manufacturing experiments, according to vernacular papers.

For ¥500,000 the Institute recently completed a special installation in its Synthetic Oil Research Laboratory.

Kyoto Imperial University authorities, invited military authorities, Commerce & Industry Ministry officials and other interested officials to the school Monday and showed them the favorable results achieved. It is understood that the laboratory will begin industrialization of artificial oil in the near future.

THE CHOICE OF THE MULTITUDE

FRANCE FACES NEW TURN IN NATION'S LIFE

Entire Nation Behind Petain to Organize Government of People

Transocean

VICHY, July 9—After the collapse of France's military power, the French Government and French people are today facing the greatest Parliamentary event of the year—the meeting of both the Chamber and Senate and the convention of the National Assembly, which in turn will decide the dissolution and annihilation of the old Parliamentary system.

Whoever takes a walk through the streets at this spa, after he has succeeded in renting a room in a hotel or private quarters, which is extremely difficult in view of the room shortage here, will meet during his stroll hundreds of Parliamentarians not riding in limousines which were formerly often seen driving across the Place de la Concorde toward the Chamber, but with worried faces like people who realize after all that they are burdened with guilt for France's breakdown.

BEATING FOR 10,000,000

France is facing the most illustrious Parliamentary event of the year but the heart of the French people is not beating for the Parliamentarians in Vichy, but it is beating for the 10,000,000 souls of refugees, for those who have become poor overnight, and it is beating in working men's huts, whose bread-earners are today resting in peace somewhere in France on French soil.

It is written plainly on the faces of many of these Parliamentarians who seek to evade bright sun-rays in the shadows of the lime trees of this spa that they know that the liquidation of their activity has today become the chief task of the representatives of the French people.

Different Parliamentarians have gathered here. They no longer stand between the columns in the lobby of the Palais Bourbon, giving international journalists a recipe of the French foreign policy and generously distributing their ideas; they no longer declare as they used to between two caviar sandwiches at a gorgeous buffet that one need only oppose Herr Hitler just once in order to bring about the breakdown of National Socialism.

One beholds French Parliamentarians in Vichy naked and bare on the streets in the shadow of beautiful lime trees, figuratively speaking. Their shoes no longer reflect the splendor of the chandeliers of the French Chamber; they are covered with the dust of their journey. Hundreds of kilometers these Parliamentarians have fled partly on foot.

NO MORE CAMERAS

Jointly and beyond their Party shades, they have experienced a fate which they had conjured up for France. Among them are some who formerly used to be photographed at least 10 times daily and in front of whose hotel now crowds are standing to tell them that the clenched fists of the people are facing them instead of photograph lenses. Mobile guards are now lined up in front of this and that hotel in order to prevent rioting.

For instance, there is the hotel patronized by Leon Blum, the leader of France's largest Party, whose political program has completely collapsed. Sun blinds are let down in front of his windows. Leon Blum is neither in Spain nor in Geneva, not in England, not in Morocco, nor in Algiers as the international press professed to know.

Leon Blum is in this hotel with a white facade on which a blazing sun is shining; none has seen him in Vichy in daylight. The same concealed fate of having made themselves interned civilians is shared by those French Parliamentarians who had never tired to demand in the Chamber and in public declarations war against the German people. One does not see them: One does not know whether they will appear at the National Assembly or whether they want to fight their last Parliamentary battle against the French Government which had laid down arms.

Others are seen walking with heads down on the boulevards of Vichy—White-haired Senator Leon Berard who had made an attempt to bury the Franco-Spanish enmity, Spinasse who on September 2 declared in the lobby of the Palais Bourbon that it was a folly to declare war on Germany, Dommange, Vallat, and Bataille. We see them standing with Marcel Deat at a street corner. He is the one who wrote an article saying that "we do not want to die for Danzig." For this article he was almost sent to prison by former Premier Daladier.

STAND FOR PETAIN

Passing this group we hear bits of conversation and know that many of them will support the resolution of Bergery, which demands the resignation of Parliamentarians and which urges that all Parties should be lined up behind Marshal Petain.

Even white-haired Marshal Petain does not make use of his automobile here. Walking slowly as he may have crossed the parlor of del Padro in Madrid as the French Ambassador to Spain only a few weeks ago, he now steps out of the lobby of the Hotel du Parc rather absentmindedly with eyes appearing to be filled with tears and giving the impression that he was carrying a burden which is becoming more and more heavy.

Hotel porters and clerks step back and every demobilized French soldier stands at attention in a manner which probably has never been seen before since the outbreak of the war. Women in black dress, whose mourning is written all over their faces and whose husbands fell during the war, bow to the old gray Marshal as reverently as before an altar in the church.

A minute later Laval enters the Hotel du Parc with an icy cold glance as if he were just waiting to strike his opponents. Deputies want to shake hands with him but he merely nods briefly under his stiff hat. Every one knows that Laval is determined to smash all critics and opposition should they dare to raise their voices in the Chamber. His proverbial cordiality has disappeared.

There are 450 Deputies and Senators in Vichy today. Marshal Petain will speak and at last they will have to keep silent.

"They have talked far too much since 1789. It's good for them if they for once keep silent and obey." remarks a newspaper dealer who tells his listeners about the yellow briefcase which Laval carries about now and which is said to contain the draft of the new French Constitution, numbering some 72 typewritten pages.

Lion Cubs to Hsinking

The city of Tokyo will present the Hsinking zoological garden with a pair of lion cubs born last September 20 at Uyeno Zoo, as a commemoration of the visit of His Majesty the Emperor in Tokyo recently. The baby lions will be sent to the Manchoukuo capital early in August.

Lotus Meeting

About 40 members of the Lotus Society, a group of persons who love lotus flowers, held their fifth annual meeting Tuesday evening at the Shochi-in temple by the Shinobazu pond, Uyeno park, which is noted for its lotus blooms. Mrs. Hanayo Ikuta, poetess, and Dr. Ichiro Oga, botanist, who are members, talked on the subject of the lotus. The members of the society included noted writers, botanists and painters.

Salamanders Appear Here

A pair of salamanders, or lizard-like fish, about five feet in length, appeared Tuesday on a Haramachi street, Koishikawa. It was later known that the grotesque animals had been kept many years in a pond in the nearby garden of Count Tadamasa Sakai and that they sought relief from heat. One died soon after escape and was taken to the Tokyo Science Museum at Uyeno to be stuffed.

Alpine Post Office

Atop Mt. Shirouma, a peak in the Japan Alps, a post office will be opened soon for the convenience of mountaineers. Radio communications will be possible with the Kitashiro post-office located at the foot of Shirouma.

Patriotic Donations

Zenyemon Konoike, Osaka magnate, donated ¥300,000 to the Army and ¥200,000 to the Navy Tuesday for the national defense fund. The donations are part of the proceeds of the record-breaking auction of fine art objects of the family which took place recently in Osaka.

Heat Hits Plateau

Matsumoto City located on the usually cool plateau at the foot of the Japan Alps is experiencing the severest heat-wave in 43 years, the mercury registering 95.18 degrees F. Tuesday, the highest since 95.36 degrees of August 1, 1898.

AMERICAN ARMY OFFICERS SCRAP MILITARY TEXTBOOKS, CHANGE METHODS

Domei Tsushin

WASHINGTON, July 23—United States Army officers are throwing away many of their textbooks on military strategy and doing a lot of home work on the new lessons being taught by lightning war in Europe.

The bulk of this home work is being done at the sprawling buildings along the Missouri River at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, and at the Army War College here. The Command and General Staff School of the army is where the pick of this country's young strategists go for up-to-the-minute study of what makes an army win and lose battles.

Facts from the battle-fronts-troop dispositions, supplies, machines and strategy pour into Washington continually by Army military attaches in Europe.

Pertinent facts are sifted by experienced tacticians of the War Department at Washington and sent out to Fort Leavenworth. From these facts the men who will become General Staff officers, brigade commanders, and perhaps division commanders learn the lessons of the Blitzkrieg.

Up until this year the lessons of modern warfare had been taught these officers on paper. Students had a chance to see mechanized units in operation once a year but they never took them out in the field in great numbers or watched them under simulated battle conditions.

That happend this spring in the South and Southwest. But Major General H. J. Brees, commander of the 8th Corps Area, was so irritated by tactical blunders that he dressed down his subordinates in plain army talk. They had crossed bridges that were supposed to have been washed out; had kept infantry trucks on highways made untenable by airplanes and had disregarded cover.

Those observations, with some of the General's remarks, are now before the students at the Command and General Staff School at Leavenworth.

Up to 1936, the course there took two years and was considered an ordeal. Since then it has covered the same amount of work in one year. Now it is being shortened to six months, with the same amount of work required, and more than 800 top officers will be trained annually. Approximately 2,000 graduates of this school are in the service.

Those showing promise in the General Staff School may get the bid to the Army War College attended each year by 90 outstanding officers. There they get training in broad tactical activities and become proficient.

Meiji Shrine Meet Sponsor Will Again Be Prince Chichibu

Prince Yasuhito Chichibu was pleased to accept being the patron of the 11th Meiji Shrine Athletic Meet which will begin August 9, under auspices of the Welfare Ministry, government authorities announced Wednesday.

Prince Chichibu has been patron of the Meiji Shrine Athletic meet five times since 1929. At the time of the ninth meet, Prince Chichibu was in England, so Prince Tsunenori Kaya became the patron.

The 11th meet will start August 9 with three days of sea sports at Yokohama Yacht Harbor, early in next February the winter sports contests will be held in Hokkaido.

Athletes participating in the grand meet are expected to exceed 60,000. Managers and officers are expected to number 15,000 and estimated expenses of the meet have been set at ¥300,000.

PROHIBITION OF RESTAURANTS' EXPENSIVE DISHES CONSIDERED

All luxurious dishes should be banned at this time of emergency, Metropolitan Police Board authorities decided following their recent investigation of the leading Tokyo restaurants.

The official investigation included all first-rate restaurants and was made with the help of cooks, waiters and waitresses.

It was learned, according to the Nichi Nichi, that the restaurants are largely basing their price on the reputation of the individual restaurants and their expensive table-utensils, rather than on the substance of the food.

The so-called high-class meals sold at these restaurants average from ¥7 to ¥8. Several course dinners cost from ¥14 to ¥15. The most expensive dinner served at the grill of a noted Tokyo hotel is ¥20.

The existing situation, it was decided by representatives of the Metropolitan Police Board, should be remedied. They decided to impose a strict limitation on the number of dishes in a meal which at the same time will tend to reduce prices, the Nichi Nichi understands.

A liaison conference, the same paper adds, was held Tuesday by representative women of 10 women's associations in Tokyo, closely connected with the National Spiritual Mobilization. It was attended by leading social workers including Shigeri Kaneko, Kyo Kiuchi and Kotaka Ohtsuma. They agreed that about 300 women should appear on Tokyo streets the next Asia Development Day, August 1, and hand a slip of paper to every luxuriously clad women.

The slip will have two instructive passages saying: "Let's do away with our gorgeous way of dressing," and "Let's refrain from wearing rings."

Tansse Famous Singer Arrested for Spying

Transocean

BUCHAREST, July 13—A sensational case of spying has been made known here.

Maria Tansse, a singer who was popular by her renditions of Rumanian folksongs has been arrested on the charge of having spied for the Allies.

During recent years Maria Tansse was closely connected with the Havas representative, M. Negre, who, on account of his insulting attitude, had to leave Rumania.

Negre also had control of the propaganda funds of the French Embassy. These funds mostly went to Maria Tansse, who was also well acquainted with the former Rumanian Foreign Minister Gafencu.

Huskies Capture 1940 Poughkeepsie Race; Cornell Second

Reuter

POUGHKEEPSIE, New York, July 22—The Huskies, of the University of Washington, rowing through semi-darkness over the Hudson River course, won the 1940 four-mile Varsity race of the 43rd Intercollegiate Rowing Association Regatta.

They led the field of eight crews for nearly the entire distance and finished half a length ahead of Cornell University. Syracuse University was third, the Navy crew fourth, the "Golden Bears" of the University of California fifth, Columbia University of New York City sixth, Wisconsin seventh and Princeton University eighth and last.

The course was rough, and it was so dark at the end of the race that it was impossible accurately to tell the distances separating the "also rans" of the field.

STRONGER STAND URGED AGAINST 5TH COLUMNISTS

U.S. Organization Demands Dismissal from Government Employ of Axis Sympathizers

Reuter

NEW YORK, July 24—The struggle between totalitarian aggressors and liberal American democracy has become intensified, in the opinion of the organization known as the American Defenders of Freedom, and a second call has been sent out to members immediately to "help stop the direct frontal attack on the United States that the Nazi and Fascist powers will make against our freedom."

The call was against the attempts being made to create internal conflict and dissension in this country by members of Hitler's Fifth Column.

TOLD TO WIRE

Members were directed to wire their senators and congressmen in Washington to:

(1) Ask all local, state and federal government officials to ensure against "Fifth Column" penetration by dismissing from governmental employ all known Nazi, Communist and Fascist members or sympathizers.

(2) Demand the enactment of a law that no association operating in America shall be subsidized by an undemocratic foreign power or guided by their commercial or diplomatic representatives.

(3) Urge that during this extraordinary emergency all foreign language newspapers and periodicals carry the exact English translation next to every column of a foreign language as a guarantee of their all-American character and desire to defend their enjoyment of Freedom of the Press.

(4) Demand fingerprinting and registration of all aliens and,

(5) Demand a thorough investigation of all aliens whether old or new as to why they have delayed becoming citizens while enjoying the rights of a free Democracy and earning their living in this country.

Rome-Berlin Economic

merly sent all the cereals to Europe, which were not required for home consumption, as well as also from the disturbance on the great East Asiatic market, which is seriously impaired by the conflict in China so that a different situation would immediately arise after the settlement of this conflict and after re-establishing sound economic conditions on this market. The re-establishment of such conditions in China is of course the aim of Japan.

BLOCKADE DISTURBS

Our well organized trade with South America is only disturbed by the British blockade. We are, however, convinced that also here natural and favorable trade relations will be re-established after the war. We do not believe that the present endeavors to make the American markets self-sufficient and to isolate them from world trade will be successful. The economic conditions for success of these endeavors are lacking, as the U.S.A. in our opinion can never replace the European states as a market for South American goods. The United States will have to abandon their thoughts of forcing their economic system on Germany and Europe. For the trade with South America a mediation of the U.S.A. is not necessary. A trade with South America on behalf of Germany will either take place on the basis of free agreements with independent South American states or it will not take place at all. With their Pan-American trade trust the U.S.A. is practically advocating a bilateral trade system, which they are already applying to other countries. Why should Germany alone be excluded from this system? There does not exist any technical obstacles for the normalization of mutual trade relations in any case. Regarding the German financial position, Mr. Funk replied that at the present moment Germany's debts were no cause at all for any anxiety or any misgivings.

IS OPTIMISTIC

When Mr. Funk was asked the last question "How will war economics be transferred into peace-time economics and will this necessary conversion not lead to a big economic crisis?" his answer was optimistic. He declared the conversions would not meet with great obstacles, because a big demand for credits would not arise all of a sudden, since the depleted stores could only be replenished successively. Apart from this the Reich would continue also after the end of the war to place money and credit at the disposal of those producing factors, which seem to be the most important and necessary ones.

Mr. Funk then summarized his opinion about the future development of the economic system of the new Europe as follows: (1) by the conclusion of long term trade agreements with European states we aim to adapt the economic systems and the production plans of the European states for a long period to the economic structure of greater Germany, which offers them a secure market for their goods. By this it will be possible to increase European production and to open up new lines of production. On the other hand the German goods will have better selling chances on the European markets.

SMOOTH SYSTEM

(2) By the creation of stability in the exchange of articles, a smoothly working system of payment between the various nations is to be established, which can be developed from the present system of creating arrangements.

(3) By an exchange of experiences in the field of agriculture and industry a maximum production of foodstuffs and raw materials is to be attained and a reasonable distribution of work is to be achieved in Europe. By the effective employment of the economic resources, which are available in Europe, the living standard of the European people in Europe can be raised and their conviction that they will have nothing to fear from an eventual blockade by part of the world outside of Europe can be strengthened.

EQUAL RIGHTS

(4) The feeling of economic solidarity among the nations of Europe is to be strengthened by a cooperation on all fields of the economic policy as currency, production, trade, credit etc. The economic solidarity of the European states will make it possible to represent the European economic interests toward other economic groups in the international economic system far better. This united Europe will never allow, that conditions of economic and political character are prescribed to it by elements outside of Europe. It will always trade with other partners outside Europe on the basis of equal rights, but it will also be able to throw into the scales the full weight of an economic solidarity of the continent. Peace economy, which is prepared by me in a comprehensive plan, must guarantee to greater Germany the maximum of economic security and to the German people a maximum of consumption so that their living standard can be raised."

Pope Asks for Christian Charity

United Press

VATICAN CITY, July 18—Pope Pius, speaking in the Ducal Hall to newlyweds and other faithful, including military chaplains and nuns yesterday, appealed for Christian charity toward the aged and the sick.

Evidently referring to the present European war, the Pope said the world no longer is "an earthly paradise" but instead is "a garden of humanity."

"In all families," the Pope continued, "generally, there are two types of weak persons, who have greater need for care and affection—children and the aged. Beloved newlyweds, if God should protect your families from illness—as we wholeheartedly wish—remember the misery of others and devote yourselves, as far as possible, to doing good and giving aid.

"In the garden of humanity which no longer can be called an earthly paradise, one of the bitter fruits of original sin—pain—has ripened and will always ripen.

"May you, beloved sons and daughters, through Christian charity and prayers and sacrifice, ensure yourselves one day of a loving greeting from the Supreme Judge who will open the doors of Heaven in the splendor of eternity."

Early Mine Technique

Three old drawings illustrating the method of exploding electrically a land mine and a magnet used for the purpose, all dating back 80 years, were recently donated to the Communications Museum at Yotsuya, Tokyo, by Masakata Machida, a resident at Miharu, Fukushima Prefecture. The gift is considered of much interest in revealing the early mine technique of Japan.

Music Teacher Robbed

Mrs. Tsuruyo Takeoka, vocal teacher at the Musashino Music School, was robbed of her handbag containing ¥53 by a young man on a bicycle while walking at 7-chome in the back Ginza. At her screams, a number of passers-by caught the man, who was identified as An Tokukan, a Korean.

No More Yukata Service

The Railway Ministry authorities have decided to discontinue the services of lending "Yukata" or summer garment to the 1st and 2nd class passengers on the Government railways. The railway authorities have reached this decision because they find that staple fiber made Yukatas are not strong and could not be used long. They can annually save ¥100,000 by abolishing Yukata services.

Taxi Business Restricted

The traffic section of the Metropolitan Police will shortly announce abolition of taxi stations in amusement places, according to Miyako. The Metropolitan authorities will also prohibit taxis from going to theaters, machiai, horse race grounds, and geisha houses. Any one who violates these rules will be punished, according to Miyako.

FEAR MAKES HEROES, BUMS, OF FIGHTERS, SAYS IGOE

Famed Sports Writer Tells How Panic Ads on Boxers; Louis Scares Them

By HYPE IGOE
Noted Boxing Expert
Special to The Japan Times

NEW YORK—"I simply died walking the last mile from my dressing room to the ring."

That statement, coming from Paychek, in the dressing room ten minutes after he had been knocked out by Joe Louis in Madison Square Garden was perhaps the most remarkable utterance ever to fall from the lips of a beaten ringman.

They still talked about that strange spectacle and nobody seems to know what had come over the fellow who had been so cocky a few hours before. I have called on noted men of medicine, surgery and body building in an effort to solve the peculiar kind of "fright" that possessed Paychek—and not only Paychek but King Levinsky and Max Baer when they found themselves facing Louis. A paralyzing kind of "fright" apparently that wrapped itself around them with the crushing power of a python.

The strange part of it is that nobody ever had pointed the finger at Levinsky and Baer as lacking physical courage or being subject to ring jitters.

SURGEON SPEAKS

Dr. Peter Daly, crack Bonx surgeon, told me:

"When two men trot up the little stairs and enter a ring, the one who is trembling in his corner, may well be the more dangerous and courageous of the two. If a man is trembling before a fight, he could well be a Dempsey or a McLarnin. When he trembles and doesn't fight back, then he is yellow."

Harry J. Reilly, president of the New York State Society of Physiotherapists and founder of the Reilly Health Service in Rockefeller Center, tells me that there are two types of "fear," one which stimulates the body to action and the other which inhibits action and, as it were, paralyzes.

"Fear," said Reilly, "stimulates the adrenalin glands at times and makes action more violent and almost unconscious, as the case of the man who, standing on a precipice or high place, is impelled to jump—against his better will or judgment. Then there is the case of a soldier going over the top—who through a latent unconscious fear becomes a kind of madman or hero.

FEAR PARALYZES

"Fear also operates in a reverse manner, where violence of the emotion paralyzes action by inhibiting all bodily chemical and physiological action. This is observed in the case of the bird and the snake where the fascination, in ordinary parlance, is really numbing fear. Another case is that of the fighter who is so terrified at the prospect of a beating that he stands almost numb before his opponent.

"Baer, Levinsky and Paychek were such victims. This is different from the daze that comes over a fighter when he is hit hard and fights on automatically and in some cases goes on to knock out his opponent.

"There is still another form of fear which operates unconsciously—a fear of losing a bout, an actor's fear of messing up a role or an orator's fear of making a bad speech—a latent nervousness which in the case of really good performers results in a kind of supper-energy.

DEMPSEY EXAMPLE

"Dempsey was such a one. He was rated as being superlatively game; yet his initial nervousness before a fight betrayed some deep-seated nervousness which was akin to and probably was fear! It caused him to slog in and knock his opponent into the next county. His fight, for instance, with Firpo, who was a terrific puncher, was a knock-down and slam-bang affair with little of Dempsey's ring astuteness in evidence."

Dr. Charles Cramer, who, when in charge of the Queens General Hospital, yanked me by the bootstraps up out of a hole I was trying to dig to China, said:

"I think that Paychek fought in an utterly subconscious state after the first knockdown scored by Louis. He did what he did without being conscious of it."

Paychek told this writer that he didn't remember a thing after the first knockdown, and that before being floored, when he tried to throw his best punch, a right, his elbows seemed nailed to his sides.

TERMED STAGE FRIGHT

Dr. Cramer added:

"Paychek probably acted as do some of the animals we dissect in research. Sometimes we sever the muscles and nerves back of the brain. The animals then do the most fantastic things without benefit of brain control."

A man closely identified with the theater told me that Paychek simply had a severe case of "stage-fright."

When Jim Corbett returned from Reno, Nev., after seconding Jim Jeffries in the latter's losing comeback fight against Jack Johnson, Jim joined the "Honey Boy" Minstrels which opened in Fourteenth Street. Jim was the dandified middle-man and monologue star.

The late Tad and myself went around, back stage, an hour before the curtain, to talk to Jim about the Reno fight. Tad had seen it. When he entered the dressing room, we found Corbett in a fit of uproarious laughter. He pointed over into the corner of the dressing room and there was the poor "Honey Boy," retching, dreadfully ill.

STAR REVEALS

Again pointing to Evans, Corbett roared:

"Hey boys, what do you think of an old trouper of twenty years falling for stage fright at this late day?"

Evans turned slowly and faced us, as he said:

"Fellows, you don't know how terrible it is!"

Corbett once told me of a remarkable spectacle of ring "freezing".

A young fellow had come along, quite like Paychek. He had beaten many third and fourth raters and they skipped him into the big time to fight Dan Creedon, a clever Australian of Corbett's day.

The youngster, evidently awed by the reputation of a man like Creedon, was as pale as pie-dough. The bell rang. The fledgling walked slowly to the center and assumed a Joe Goss pose. Creedon moved, light of foot and feinted rapidly once or twice. He didn't budge the boy with the Goss pose. Creedon feinted again and still no move by the young fellow. Creedon stepped back and said to himself:

FROZEN STIFF

"What is this, some kind of a trick?"

The other fellow hadn't moved an inch one way or the other.

Creedon moved all the way around his man and again facing him, feinted again. Not a move! The other fellow seemed to be looking right over the top of Creedon's dead.

"Oh, the dickens with this. Here goes!" As he said it, Creedon clipped the posed warrior on the "button" and down he went, like a statue of white marble, still stiffly posed in fighting position and as such, was counted out.

"It was the only time that I ever saw a case of a fighter, really frozen stiff," drawled Corbett.

Bill Brown, the master at Garrison Hill's Health farm opposite West Point, and one of New York's boxing commissioners, tells the one about the big brewery truck driver whom he helped train to win John L. Sullivan's $1,000, offered to any man who would stand in front of him for four rounds.

SEES POSSIBILITIES

"I was a grocer's boy for a man named Kelly," Brown said. "This big driver used to deliver our beer barrels. Kelly, with a liking for boxing, thought there might be possibilities in a fellow so powerful.

"Kelly hired a barber to train him and I brought a wheelbarrow of sand from the foot of Eighty-first street to help make a sand-bag for our giant. Sullivan was coming to town on that knockout tour. Our man went after the $1,000. They boxed in the old wooden ring at Sixty-first and Second Avenue.

"How nervous we were! Our giant came up onto the apron of the ring and stood there stunned, unable to see the opening between the ropes. He was five minutes finding his way through the hole. Sullivan came on the run and bounded around on his stout legs like a stag. His head was close-cropped and with no mustache, his eyes blazed like black balls of fire.

"The bell rang and out our poor devil shuffled. I never knew a man to be so frightened. Sullivan ambled toward him and then dropped his ponderous fists and bellowed:

REFUSES TO FIGHT

"Why, my man, you're scared to death! I wouldn't dare hit you!" And then, putting his arm around the fellow's shoulder, Sullivan said, "You go on home to bed." Turning to Frank Hall, his manager, Sullivan yelled:

"Bring on one of my sparring partners. The boys must have a run for their money!"

Max Baer fooled me completely during the five weeks with him as he trained for Joe Louis. Little did I dream, when I picked him to win in 12 rounds that Baer had continually stalked the big bunting lodge at night, hidden away in the woods, four miles out of Speculator, crying:

"I don't want to go through with this! I want to run away and hide."

Yet where could he hide that wonderful torso, that black curly head? Everybody in the world knew that torso and that head.

Facing Louis, he "froze" with fear though he took a drubbing. Gamely? Search me!

STRANGE STORY

Sailor Friedman was fighting Lew Tendler in old Madison Square Garden. Tendler dropped Friedman in the first round and he got up to last out the round.

Back in his corner between rounds, he told Nate Lewis, his manager:

"I can only see his feet."

"All right, go out there and fight his feet. Keep your eyes on them and follow them around the ring," snapped Lewis.

After the second round, Friedman told Lewis that he could now see Tendler's feet and calves. At the end of the third he had seen as high as Tendler's knees. Inch by inch that strange phenomena shifted until Friedman, his face a picture of joy came back and said:

"It's all right now, Nate. I can see the whole of him."

Men with parasols were in evidence on the Ginza during the recent hot days. One department-store official said men's parasols are selling briskly. This practice, frowned on as effeminate, was introduced from the golf links to the Ginza last summer.

GERMAN OIL SHORTAGE SEEN

British Blockade, Damage Caused by Bombing Raids Believed Depleting Stocks

Reuter

LONDON, July 26—"The British blockade is likely to cause an acute oil scarcity in Continental Europe," states an article in the Petroleum Press Service.

"The gap between the normal requirements of 19,000,000 tons (plus 4,000,000 bunkers) and the potential supplies of 10,260,000 tons is unbridgeable, once the stocks which have been accumulated and seized are depleted.

"German output, including that of Austria, Poland, and Czechoslovakia, taking full account of all methods of expansion, but ignoring the devastation caused by the Royal Air Force raids, is 5,000,000 tons.

"The Russian exportable surplus is 500,000 tons; the Italian output, including Albania, is 370,000 tons. France, Estonia, Belgium and Holland have 390,000 tons.

"The normal pre-war requirements of Germany and Italy were 9,000,000 tons. France, Belgium, Holland, Denmark and Norway required 7,500,000 tons. Sweden, Switzerland, Greece, Finland and the Baltic States, Jugoslavia and Bulgaria needed 2,500,000 tons, making a total of 19,000,000 tons.

"Economizing on consumption in the occupied territories is impossible beyond a certain point, without rendering the industries incapable of contributing to the war effort. The position is very serious with lubricating oils, which are the most difficult to economize."

United Press

NEW YORK, July 22—All Major league teams were idle today following yesterday's huge double header program, and as the ball players relaxed at the golf links and in hotel lobbies, baseball experts began figuring out the possible results in the two leagues from statistics on the first half of the schedule, completed last week.

The feat of the Cincinnati Reds in stretching their margin over the Brooklyn Dodgers to five full games is generally taken to spell the doom of Flatbush hopes for 1940, unless the Reds collapse completely or the Dodgers embark upon a winning-streak comparable to that of the Chicago Cubs in 1935, when the Bruins surged up from third place to win the pennant on a drive that saw them winning 32 out of 34 games, 21 of them in succession.

1928 RACE RECALLED

Still, at least one observer pointed out that in 1928 the Chicago Cubs went on their last eastern invasion of the year, six games in front but saw it all dissipated in a complete collapse that relegated them into second place.

Only the Dodgers have managed to keep page with the blazing Reds, who now have won 55 games and lost but 25. The Dodgers have won 51 and lost 31.

The New York Giants, in the thick of the fight only three weeks ago, are now considered hopelessly out of it and must begin to concentrate on stemming the threat of the Chicago Cubs, three games behind them. The Giants are 11 games out of the lead. Only a miracle would enable them to beat out the Reds now.

The race for fourth place, however, is still a serious matter between the Cubs; Cardinals, playing a rejuvenated brand of ball under Manager Bill Southworth, a practicalist who replaced theorist Ray Blades; and the Pirates. The Cards trail the Cubs by four games and the Pirates trail the Dodgers by one. The Bees and the Phillies, 26 and 27½ games out of the lead respectively, are no longer considered save as upset factors.

Oddly enough, in the American League the situation is just opposite. Where normally the junior loop race is a cut-and-dried affair and the senior league a dogfight, this season it is just the other way around.

The Detroit Tigers, Cleveland Indians, New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox are all in the thick of the pennant fight. The Tigers, currently holding the top rung, boast a precarious lead of only 1½ games over the Indians, while the Yankees and Red Sox, 5½ games behind the Tribe, though the Yanks have a one point edge in percentage over Beantown, are still very much in the fight, especially since Joe Cronin's pitchers have started to regain form and the Yankees have started to pound the ball with the gusto that brought them four consecutive world championships.

Even the last place Philadelphia Athletics are only 18½ games behind the Tigers, compared to the 19 games the sixth place Pirates are behind the Reds in the National League.

REDS STRETCH LEAD

United Press

NEW YORK, July 21—The Cincinnati Reds, imbued with pennant fever and the desire to become the first National League club in five years to score a repeat win in the flag race, today took both ends of a double header from the New York Giants while the Brooklyn Dodgers were dividing honors with the St. Louis Cardinals. The result was that the Reds stretched their lead over the Dodgers to five full games.

Superior pitching won each game for the Reds, Paul Derringer turning back the Giants in the opener on only two hits, one of which was a home run by Mel Ott, and Turner holding the Terrymen to eight scattered safeties and two runs in the nightcap. It was Turner's seventh victory of the season.

The Dodgers, meanwhile, saw Fat Freddie Fitzsimmons win his regular weekly game by defeating the Cardinals in the opener of a twin bill, 3-1, but in the nightcap the Gashouse Gang won by 5-2 by hitting in the clutch with men on the sacks.

The Philadelphia Phillies and the Chicago Cubs also split even, the Phils taking the first, 8-2, and the Cubs the nightcap, 8-5. Hank Leiber's ninth and tenth homers of the season were responsible for the Bruin victory in the second game.

TAKE BOTH ENDS

Pittsburgh took both ends of a twin bill from Boston, bagging the first by 5-3 on Lloyd Waner's homer with the bases full, and routing the Bees in the nightcap, 16-2, on an 18-hit attack that saw Lloyd Waner continue his spree with four hits in four trips and Paul Waner trail closely behind him with three hits in four trips.

In the American League standings remained unchanged, both the Detroit Tigers and Cleveland Indians scoring clean sweeps in bargain bills.

The Tribe, difficulties with Manager Oscar Vitt ironed out, defeated the Boston Red Sox 3-2, and 2-0. Bob Feller hurled the opener, allowing five scattered hits.

It was Feller's 15th victory of the season. In the nightcap Dobson was tightest in the pinches to hold Red Sox well in check. The only two Boston runs of the day were scored on Joe Cronin's home run in the opener.

The Detroit Tigers, meanwhile, best the New York Yankees twice, 4-3 and 3-2. In the opener the Tigers won in the ninth when Bruce Campbell homered after Pinky Higgins had singled, while in the nightcap Pete Fox homered in the seventh to break a 3-3 deadlock occasioned by Joe Gordon's home run in the sixth.

The Chicago White Sox moved to within three games of the first division by twice beating the Philadelphia Athletics, 10-8 and 7-2. The nightcap was Rigney's ninth win of the year.

St. Louis and Washington divided honors in the remaining twin bill, the Nats taking the nightcap, 5-4, after losing the opener, 8-4.

Y.C.A.C. PLAYERS BEAT OLD STARS NINE BY 6 TO 2

Second Team Loses to Old Stars 'B' in Morning Game by Score of 4-0

The Yokohama Country and Athletic Club baseball team defeated the Old Stars "A" nine by 6 to 2 in a return game on the former's diamond Sunday afternoon. The Y. C. and A. C. second team lost to the Old Stars "B" squad in the morning by 4 to 0 on the same grounds.

The Y.C. and A. C. first string played a good game to score their seventh victory this season against one defeat. Cromarty held the opposition to two hits while his teammates touched Shibuya for eight. After breaking a scoreless deadlock in the fourth to take the lead the home squad was never headed.

EYTON SCORES FIRST

The first run was scored when Eyton singled and then came in on successive hits by Devin and Bielous. In the fifth canto the winners obtained another two points. With one away Haum reached first on an error, and went to second on Crane's single. The next batter went down swinging, but Harriss hit to left and brought in both men on the bases.

The Old Stars got their first run in the seventh, but their opponents retaliated with another brace in their half of the same frame. Crane was safe at first on the secondbaseman's miscue. Eyton singled to left field, and then Harriss followed suit to score both Crane and Eyton.

The visitors obtained another point in the eighth. Yamamoto walked. Then Shibuya was safe at first on a fielder's choice. He stole second and then advanced to third, coming home when Okamoto grounded out to the shortstop. The Y.C. and A.C. also obtained a run in their half of the inning. Cromarty went all the way to third when the fielder dropped his long fly to right, and then scored on Blamey's hit past second.

EARLY MARGIN WINS

In the morning contest the Old Stars "B" squad scored the first run in the fourth, and this proved a sufficient margin to beat the Y. C. and A. C. seconds who suffered their first shutout this season. However, the winners added another two points in the fifth and one in the seventh to make their total four.

Okamoto pitched a good game for the winners, only allowing four scattered hits. Beatty also only allowed the winners four safeties but the home squad was guilty of five errors compared to two for the opponents.

The players and positions were as follows:

Frog-skins Numerous

The aquatic industrial experimental station of Shiga Prefecture has been experimenting with methods to tan and color bullfrog skins. Results have been favorable and experts there expect to turn out 500,000 sheets of frog-skin this year. More than 10,000 sheets have been made successfully, already, they said. Frog-skins coming from Nagoya are used. A portion will be exported.

Monkeys Devastate Farms

A large number of monkeys from Mt. Oyeyama, Kyoto Prefecture, have been nightly stealing away crops from the farms near Kuwakai village. Farmers are conferring concerning ways and means of exterminate the simians.

Cave Used As Warehouse

A cave near Jimba railway station in Akita Prefecture, is now popular as a warehouse for preserving plant seeds and farm products. The temperature in the cave is one degree below zero all the year round. Vegetables and fruits, the owners claim, can be preserved two years and plant seeds 10 years. The area of the cave was expanded recently from 1,520 square meters to 2,400 meters, because an increasing number of people are having plant seeds and vegetables kept in the cave.

Sugar Substitute

Whether saccharine, as a substitute for sugar is bad for health is being keenly discussed in Tokyo medical circles. Its use was prohibited in Home Ministry ordinances of 1928 and 1932. But Dr. Ken Kure, who died recently, proved that he had noted no harm in using saccharine as a sugar substitute for 20 years. The Welfare Ministry contemplates permitting further use of this substitute if investigations disclose it is harmless.

BELLOISE GETS GARCIA MATCH

Promising Young Welter Pleases Mike Jacobs in Garden Preliminary Bout

Reuter

NEW YORK, July 24—A new and exceedingly promising young welter-weight has suddenly appeared in New York boxing circles, in the person of Steve Belloise, brother of Mike Belloise, former feather-weight champion of the world, who once fought Dave Crowley of England.

Steve sports a terrific punch with either fist, and greatly impressed the boxing writers when, in a preliminary bout in Madison Square Garden, he knocked out Vic Dellicurti in quick time and with a fine display of boxing.

Now Belloise has his first really big chance. Mike Jacobs, promoter of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, Inc., has matched him with the ex-middleweight champion of the world, Garcia for a ten-round bout in the Garden on August 1.

Since his last appearance in the Garden, Steve has won a decision over Sammy Luftspring, the Canadian welter-weight titleholder, from Toronto. Belloise has won 27 out of 29 professional fights and has scored 14 knockouts in his two years of professional boxing.

EIRE DEFENSE READY FOR ANY INVASION

Country Divided Into 8 Areas; Food Distributed

Reuter

DUBLIN, July 20—Eire is ready in every detail to meet an attack from whatever quarter it may come.

The division of the country into eight areas, each ruled by a special commssioner, who will operate only in case of emergency, marks the full completion of the defense scheme.

The eight areas have been further subdivided into 26 areas with commissioners, thus providing for full official control to meet the actual war situation. Local committees are being established in every parish to cooperate with commissioners.

The defenses are now over 130,000 strong, while local volunteer and security units are supplementary. Everything is apparently ready in even the remotest areas, and an aerial atack has been fully provided against.

Food stocks have been widely distributed, and there are no fears of a scarcity.

In Dublin, air-raid precaution services are organized on an extensive scale, and forces are ready for action at the shortest notice.

CANADA TO BECOME CENTER OF BRITISH EMPIRE SHORTLY

German Success on Continent Brings Ottawa Government to Limelight

By FREDERICK T. BIRCHALL

N.Y. Times

If you look at the map of the world it may strike you, or again it may not, that among the red splotches on the earth's surface which once represented Great Britain and her colonies and are now the great British Commonwealth of Nations the Dominion of Canada is approximately the geographical center. It has become a fact of some significance and is likely to be of even more.

If Hitler succeeds in his ambition to overrun and conquer Britain herself, it is obvious that the British Empire as we have known it must reconstitute itself on a new basis or go to pieces. This is no longer a matter for speculation but a real contingency to be faced. It is not easy to conceive of Great Britain as a land untenable for Britons save as humble dependents of the Teuton, but the world is undergoing a forcible metamorphosis in which it may very well happen.

In such case what will Canada do? There will be three courses open to her: She may go on her own as an independent nation, she may seek union with the United States or she may endeavor to remain British as the heart and center of a new confederation in which the original motherland will be chiefly of historic and sentimental importance.

NOBODY KNOWS

No one knows which course Canada will choose. I doubt whether Canadians themselves know, for the present peril has come with a speed which has given them no time to think in abstractions and it is hard to realize that seemingly stable political conditions may come so suddenly to an end. Anyway, all Canadian thought and effort is concentrated just now on winning the war.

But if the war, in its present stage, cannot be won? It is necessary to write "in its present stage," for this, after all, is merely continuation, after an interregnum, of that early conflict in which German desire for world domination was supposed to have been put to sleep for several generations at least. Evidently it was not, but, even if Hitler should attain a temporary victory it is inconceivable that half the world would remain under the Nazi boot permanently. It is only possible to believe that a period of democratic recuperation may be necessary before the balance can be restored and dictatorship finally downed under new leadership.

Meantime, however, Canada would have her own problem to settle, and how she would settle it is likely to be of vital import to the entire Western Hemisphere.

It must be remembered in considering that problem that Canada is already free, independent and self-governing. The sole tie that links together the free nations of the former British Empire is the throne. George VI is King of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. He is also King of Canada, King of Australia and King of New Zealand, each separately. He is represented in the Dominion and in each commonwealth by a Governor General whom he appoints on the recommendation of the Dominion or the commonwealth itself, speaking through its elected government. And the Governor General does not govern. In the King's name he sanctions the acts of the home government.

Thus a British ruler might lose Britain but would still be King of Canada, so long as the Canadian people wished to retain him for a long time. The overwhelming majority of Canadians seem well content with the present system of government. It may be an anachronism, but it works well, as do many British systems which superficially may seem clumsy and unworkable.

MAY RULE CANADA

So George VI, even if forced to abdicate as King of Great Britain, would still rule Canada provided Canadians were willing, unless he abdicated that rulership separately. Edward VIII, when he abdicated the throne in favor of George, had to include in his abdication all his sovereignties, but his act was wholly voluntary and pre-arranged. If the present King had to flee from Britain it might be different. All would depend upon what the rest of the empire—in the case under consideration Canada, specifically—wanted. And there might be no time for consideration until after he got here.

To any one who has lived for any reasonable period in Canada, it is inconceivable that Canadians would do other than keep their King. They would be proud to have him here, but eventually there would have to be a decision as to the Dominion's future. And it would come to a choice among the three courses stated.

Each would have its disadvantages. As an independent nation Canada would be comparatively poor, especially under the burden of a lost war, and comparatively defenseless, while rich in national resources which would make her a desirable prey to the predatory. Her people would refuse to make any peace with Germany on German terms, so she would remain at war with Germany. Under President Roosevelt's declaration of a year ago at Chicago, she would have the protection of the Monroe Doctrine, however, and would be comparatively safe until Hitler with the allies he will undoubtedly enlist made up his mind to tackle the Western Hemisphere. Some time may elapse before that happens, for it would be no light undertaking.

Nevertheless, there would be considerable hesitation in Canada, even with the protecting friendship of the United States, to going it alone. Canada as a whole undoubtedly wishes to remain British. Even French Canada shares that desire, for the French Canadians long ago cut all strings with France and they have found peace and freedom under the British system. So long as their guaranteed privileges are maintained they will probably prefer to continue it. As for the rest of Canada, Toronto and British Columbia voice Central and Western sentiment and about that voice there is no question.

UNION PREDICTED

Union, in some form, with the United States would be the second course, and here again all Canada, French and British, would be hesitant, even if the United States were willing to double its already enormous and frequently dissonant territory. French Canada would oppose such a union, because under it the bilingual system and the many special privileges the French enjoy could scarcely be expected to endure. All Canadians would fear their being politically overwhelmed, however much their material prospect might be enhanced by union. When you have been master in your own house, it comes hard to share it, even on terms of equal partnership, with strangers.

In a plebiscite, except under stress of dire misfortune with greater perils threatening, it is doubtful if union with the United States on any terms whatever would attract more than a handful of Canadian votes against either of the other two courses here set forth. Canada wants the closest friendship with her more powerful neighbor. It can hardly become too close or too intimate in Canadian estimation. But she would balk at union or a partnership which savored of her abandoning her national entity.

There remains, therefore, only the third course if that should prove compatible with continuance of the protective friendship the Dominion now enjoys with the United States. There are difficulties there also, for Canada will accept no German peace, so apparently she must perforce remain at war with Hitlerism until Hitlerism is ended. But there is, on the other hand, the influence of a great tradition in its favor.

Thoughtful Canadians always have conceived for their country a great role. It is the role of interpreter and liaison officer between democratic monarchy—the very term is a contradiction, yet the fact exists—and republican democracy; between Britain and the United States and, if need be, between the United States and France. Canada is especially equipped for that role. She is bilingual and wholly democratic, despite acknowledging a sovereign. She wishes to remain British, part of a great Anglo-Saxon community, while keeping also her democracy. As a democracy she wishes to keep close friendship with the United States.

There is no longer any doubt, if there ever was, that the United States, after this war, will be the main pillar and support of democratic freedom. As seen in Canada, the very essence of that democratic freedom is Anglo-Saxon; its antithesis is the ideologies under which tyranny parades as. German nazism, Latin fascism or Slavic bolshevism. The Canadian ideal is a great Anglo-Saxon union with French, Scandinavian and Dutch cooperation, for the maintenance of democratic freedom. Toward fulfillment of that ideal Canadians believe that they can make a valuable contribution. They can interpret to the United States the British oddities which often need explaining. They can explain America in French and British circles which never yet have been able to understand Americanism.

BORDER UNDEFENDED

The long undefended border between the United States and Canada is to Canadians a permanent object lesson to the world of what all international relations might become if the right spirit could prevail. In that alone, maintenance of her present identity within the linked British communities is considered worth while, because while it exists there can be no thought of war between the Anglo-Saxon nations or with France.

So, even in the event of the British commonwealths centering their royal rule in Canada, the hope of Canadians is that relations with the United States will continue on their present footing; that Canada will remain British while keeping close friendship with the United States. They see no possible harm coming out of it. The United States is pledged to defend this whole continent against foreign aggression Canada, in case of need, would cheerfully and devotedly fight by her side, for she too accepts the spirit of the Monroe Doctrine in their common interest.

She has not the least idea herself of planting guns and barbed wire along the international land boundary and she devotedly hopes that her great neighbor also has no such idea. If Hitler chooses to come over here, she will turn out every able-bodied man she has to keep him out and make him sorry for the attempt, whether his objective is Halifax, New York or Charleston. She thinks her King, if he should be forced to come here, would be as good an American neighbor as his Governors General have proved to be, and she also believes that he and his Queen would be as popular and as welcome visitors across the border on occasion as her own statesmen. She deduces that from the outcome of their last visit and in so believing she may be right.

The British Empire, in its old imperial form, is no more. Replacing it are the British commonwealths of free nations, acknowledging a common sovereignty, yet supreme in their own households and going their own way in the world whenever they choose. As long as they maintain common ideals and are working to the same ends, that system may last for a long time. The ideals are common to Anglo-Saxondom, including the United States, and there is therefore no reason why they all should not work together for world peace and a common prosperity.

That is the Canadian view. So, while continuing to be the best of neighbors and the warmest of friends, Canada sees no reason why she should not also remain the heart of an empire trans-mogrified into a voluntary union of peoples for their own and the common weal.

REICH PUSHING RESETTLEMENT OF WAR AREAS

Large-Scale Credit Operations Permit Fast Rebuilding of Districts

D.N.B.

BERLIN, July 29—Large-scale credit operations by the Reich during the past weeks greatly contributed to the building up and the restoration of the economic life in the Westwall districts, which had been evacuated since September 1939 and which are now being repopulated since the signing of an armistice with France.

While the Reich is taking the guarantee for these credits, banks in this part of the German Reich are able to supply the returning population with necessary credits for reconstructing the demolished and partly destroyed houses without losing time, due to bureaucratic complications in restoring business life to normal. Since these credits are guaranteed by the reparation claims, which the population holds against the Reich, this method of financing the economic reconstruction in districts of the Westwall is unusually speedy, while the detailed settling of damage claims are postponed until a later period.

RESETTLEMENT PLANNED

Also in eastern Germany, in the war district of former Polish territory, great progress has been made in resettling 10,700 families of a total of 18,000 German families, who are to be resettled from Eastern Polish districts. The great resettling scheme of 80,000 Germans, repatriated from the Russian districts of Bessarabia and the Bukovina, which have been ceded to Soviet Russia, was also promoted on a large scale, adding a tremendous number of small farms to the German agriculture in the East German area.

In the occupied western districts further progress has been made in reestablishing normal economic conditions. Postal money order service has been resumed in the Netherlands. A new regulation of legal tender and the fixing of the rates of the currencies to the Reichsmark has also placed the currencies of these countries on a sound and firm basis again.

CAPITAL TRANSFER ALLOWED

Along with normalizing the currencies in the Western countries a transfer of capital between Germany and Holland has been resumed. Trade and shipping exchange in Antwerp has been opened again. In order to prevent food supply reserves from being spoiled and in order to make full use of every available refrigerating space all refrigerating and cold storage establishments in Holland were confiscated and placed under the administration of a central office of Dutch cattle raisers.

Also in the occupied districts of France, German economic efforts are being concentrated on assuring the future provisioning of the population of these districts. In the occupied French districts the well known French automobile plants are resuming operations again.

In leading circles of the German industry much attention is being paid to an imminent revolutionary change in motor traffic by the introduction of gas generators. With the permission of the Reichsforestmaster Reichsmarshal Herman Goering a new stock company was founded during this week for exploiting wood waste and for providing tank wood for gas generating motors. The new company will establish wood service stations all over the Reich for the refuelling of the gas motor cars. The Reichsminister of economics decreed that after this only one standard type of steam locomotives would be built in Germany. These standard locomotives will also be exported.

Horse-Riding Park

A horse-riding park, 240,000 square meters in area and with 60 ponies for primary school children, 60 horses for middle school students and 60 other horses for experienced riders will be opened late in September in front of the Setagaya Army Motor-Car School. The institution will be completed shortly at a cost of ¥1,000,000. The park will be used also for equestrian games and horse-shows. Major-General Hiroshi Yamamoto is director of the park.

Seal Island

The small Azarashi (seal) island, 10 miles off Kitashiridoko peninsula, South Saghalien, is now occupied by more than 30,000 seals and hundreds of thousands of "Roppen," a variety of Arctic migratory bird. A score of experts from the Saghalien Government are butchering seals on the island.

The island is only 600 meters in length and 60 meters wide. Its only inhabitant is Ichitaro Shimamura, a policeman. The July climate on Azarashi Island is like that of March or April in Japan.

Eating Booths Control

Booths selling foods are enjoying a business boom since the enforcement of the regulations closing restaurants early. Because the number of eating booth stores with unsanitary equipments has increased, authorities of the Metropolitan Police will conduct an examination of those shops shortly.

ALSACE PEOPLE CLAIMED HAPPY BACK IN REICH

Youths on Highways Are Saluting German Soldiers; Railway Service Resumed

Transocean

BERLIN, July 26—"Alsace is pushing back toward her natural living space—the German Reich", writes the "Essener Nationalzeitung" in an article which is headed "Liberated Alsace."

In this article it is announced that the Gau Leader of Badenia, Robert Wagner, has been appointed Chief of Civil Administration in Alsace.

The special correspondent of the paper, who is close to Field Marshal Goering, writes:

"The soldier from the World War will find it easy to readapt himself. This also holds good for the Alsatian youth, who already on all highways and byways is saluting the German soldiers with the Hitler salute. But also the intermediate generation, which the Third Republic tried with all her might to convert into Frenchmen, are German as to blood and bearing. The active elements of this generation have expressed their determination unequivocally on July 14. All monuments which French Imperialism erected in Strassburg were toppled over on the anniversary of the storming of the Bastille. A banner from the monument of the author of the Marseillaise, Rouget de Lisle, was smashed at the base of the monument of the French Revolution.

France's policy in Europe which was based on the conquest of the Meuse frontier, the robbery of Alsace-Lorraine and the gaining of the Rhine banks, has been definitely buried."

RAILWAY RESUMED

The special correspondent of the "Essener Nationalzeitung" reports further that reconstruction work in Alsace is being conducted in close cooperation with the military authorities of the occupational forces. The railroad from Muelhausen to Belfort has already resumed operations and on July 22, direct train connections were resumed with the Reich. All Reich departments have established branch offices in Strassburg in order to set going the life of Alsace without friction.

The representatives of the Reich are often confronted with tasks for which Alsatians are not available at present. This is for instance the case with the municipal apparatus of Strassburg as all the Strassburg municipal functionaries are still at Perigueux. The leaders of the Alsatians who are so direly needed for reconstruction work in Alsace are still being held by the French. Nothing is known about the fate of the heads of the Alsatian autonomist movement, who also during the time that Alsace belonged to France were advocating the maintenance of the German character of Alsace.

ALSATIANS HELD

The number of Alsatian autonomists still held by the French is estimated at 6,000 to 8,000. Although the armistice conditions contained pertinent stipulations with regard to these, none of them has returned yet and no news is available as to their whereabouts. None of these elements are available yet for the necessary reconstruction work in Alsace and consequently men from the nearby Badenia must do this work which does not permit any delay.

An auxiliary Alsatian service is about to be created, which in many aspects is similar to the German Front which at that time was created in the Saar District.

MEDICAL RULES REVISION IS FINALLY AGREED

Practitioners Withdraw Objections to Law for Reforming Associations

The two-year-old stumbling block in the way of revising the Medical Law was finally cleared Tuesday at a committee meeting to discuss proposed reorganization of medical men's associations in the official residence of the Welfare Minister, reports the Hochi.

Three years ago the Government, with the aim of revising the Medical Law so that its provisions might be adapted to needs of the times, established the Medical and Medicinal Institution Investigation Commission. The commission was intended for the realization of three items of renovation in the medical world, i.e. the readjustment of distribution of medical practitioners throughout the country, the lowering of medical treatment cost and the advancement of medical art.

GROUP AGREED

Last autumn, the commission agreed on nearly 20 innovations, including one which provides "Medical practitioners are bound to issue prescriptions for their clients, and the clients may get the prescribed medicines either from the practitioners' office or from apothecaries."

These items for renovation formed by the commission and reported to the then Welfare Minister soon afterwards could not be so arranged as to be submitted to the last session of the Diet, principally because the enactment of these items were rigorously opposed by the medical men's associations scattered throughout the country. It was mainly for the purpose of winning agreement by the associations, that a committee recently was inaugurated within the commission in order to persuade the practitioners to accept the revisions.

FINALLY APPROVE

The committee, in which the practitioners are represented, met Tuesday with Nozomi Nakagawa presiding and the practitioners made a wholesale concession, under a new ideology: "medical practitioners shall help the Government execute its needs," as learned by the Kokumin.

The agreement, says the Kokumin, includes:

1 Medical men shall faithfully follow what is wanted by the Government.

2 Medical men shall direct their effort toward preventing the spread of diseases as well as their cure.

ALL MUST JOIN

3 Control shall be placed on the activities of local practitioners' associations.

4 All medical men, even those not practicing, shall join practitioners' associations.

These agreements will be submitted to a full meeting of the Medical and Medicinal Institution Investigation Commission around September. Subsequent on approval by the commission, arrangements will be made for presentation of the draft to the next session of the Diet.

Hainan Telegraph Service Is Opened

Domei Tsushin

HANKOW, July 31—Telegraphic and telephonic services were installed between Ai-hsien and Samah, southern Hainan Island from July 21 by the International Telegraphic Communications Company. Similar services between Nodoa and Haikow; Pehlieh, Haikow and Samah, will be commenced from tomorrow and telegraphic messages will be accepted from the public. The company expects to open wireless offices at Wencheong and Kachek, Hainan Island by March of next year. Also telegraphic and telephonic wires to Lengshui from Chiungshan and Haikow via Samah is expected to be finished by then.

The Haikow telegraphic communication facilities were begun in April of last year by the International Telegraphic Communication Company, after the landing of Japanese troops in February. Services were commenced this month because peace had been restored in the northern and southern regions of Hainan Island as a result of the clean up campaign begun by the Japanese forces in March.

MECHANIZED MARINE CORPS IS STUDIED

U.S. Navy Is Developing Special Naval Battalions

United Press

WASHINGTON, July 23—The United States Navy is developing six highly mechanized Marine corps battalions which could be quickly transported to any spot in the Western Hemisphere which might be invaded, it was announced here yesterday.

The battalions will comprise 750 men each and will be equipped with tanks and artillery. A destroyer will be assigned to each battalion and tanks and armament will be maintained aboard at all times.

Experimental work with four battalions has been under way for several months and has proved so successful that two new battalions are being formed.

The destroyers are specially fitted to facilitate landings. In addition, the Navy has purchased four steamship auxiliary liners—the former Dollar Liners, the President Grant and the President Jackson, and the former Grace Liners, the Santa Barbara and Santa Maria—to be used as transports.

DEFENSE BILL IS AMENDED

No Death Sentence Seen In Britain Until Question Of Reprieve Is Considered

Reuter

LONDON, July 25—After considerable debate, the House of Commons last night agreed to an amendment to the Emergency Powers Defence (No. 2) Bill, which provides powers for the trial of offences by special courts in certain areas.

Under the amendment, no death sentence will be carried out until the question of a reprieve has been fully considered.

As the Bill stands at present, it is laid down that proceedings of such special courts shall be subject to no review.

Criticism had been advanced in this respect, and yesterday Sir John Anderson, the Home Secretary, declared it was never in the mind of the Government to exclude a review in the case of a prerogative of mercy. In cases of capital or lesser sentences, everyone had a right to appeal to the clemency of the Crown, and in the case of a death sentence, before it could be carried out, a review was made by the Home Secretary as a matter of course, irrespective of any appeal.

He suggested that the insertion of amendments on the report stage would go a long way to meet misgivings.

Sir John Anderson added that he was quite willing to propose an insertion of words to make quite clear that provision must be made by regulation for securing that no death sentence shall be carried out until the question of a reprieve has been duly considered.

After the debate had proceeded for some time, the Attorney-General, Sir Donald Somervell, appealed to the House to make progress with the Bill. He said: "We want the Bill to pass through the House tonight. It is impossible to get a form of words this evening to meet the desire expressed, but the Home Secretary will be prepared to consider whether a form of words could be inserted in the Bill in the House of Lords."

Here there were cries of "No! No!"

The Attorney-General said that acceptance of an amendment submitted by T. E. Harvey, Independent Progressive member for the Combined English Universities, might be taken as indication that, in the opinion of the Government, a review ought to operate over every case. "So long as it is clear that this is not demanded, I am prepared to accept the amendment."

The amendment was then agreed to.

MUSSOLINI WINS TENNIS MATCHES TO DEMONSTRATE PHYSICAL FITNESS

Domei Tsushin

ROME, July 27—Premier Benito Mussolini today demonstrated to the world his physical fitness by walking off the tennis courts as victor of an exhibition doubles set before 71 foreign and Italian correspondents here.

With his partner, Lucio Savorgnon, former university champion of Italy, Il Duce beat Mario Pelardinelli and Eraldo Monzeglio, well-known Italian tennis players, seven games to five.

The set, which was hard fought, was Premier Mussolini's way of denying foreign reports that he has been sick and is not physically fit to run Italy's war machine.

CORRESPONDENTS SEE

Forty-five correspondents also saw Il Duce earlier in the day demonstrate his physical fitness when he took 19 hurdles on horseback as part of his daily morning exercise.

Il Duce wore tan shorts, white shirt and socks and tan tennis shoes during the tennis set. He arrived at the tennis court on a bicycle.

Premier Mussolini mounted the bicycle at the back door of his private residence in Rome and pedalled over his hilly wooded estate to the Villa Torlonia. On arriving at the tennis court he immediately started warming up.

PLAYS HARD

Five minutes later, with the Minister of the Press, Allensandro Pavolini, acting as umpire, the match started. On its conclusion Il Duce remounted his bicycle and rode off to take a shower and to dress before receiving the Rumanian Premier and Foreign Ministers at the Venice Palace.

The Duce, who took up tennis only a year and half ago, showed a preference for playing the net and for fast volleying. He seldom was drawn into the back court. He exhibited a smashing forehand drive.

Playing like any other man of affairs, he smiled when he made a good stroke and frowned openly when he missed or hit a ball too hard.

BRITISH BUDGET CRITICIZED AS BEING TOO MILD

First Dose Pretty Weak, So Far As Majority Are Concerned, Says Times

Reuter

LONDON, July 24—Without exception, British newspapers criticize the Budget (which was introduced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Kingsley Wood, in the House of Commons last night) as being too orthodox and too mild to meet the situation.

The Times says on the whole the Chancellor, having laid down the principle that heavy doses of new taxation for all classes will be necessary, has made the first dose a pretty mild one, so far as the great majority of the people are concerned. . . . There is a good augury for the future in the fact that the audience (the House of Commons) were clearly ready to applaud something much more imaginative and drastic.

The Daily Telegraph states: "No one will deny the extreme difficulty of the problem confronting the Chancellor. . . . The country will look next time for bolder, more imaginative measures of good, honest taxation."

The Daily Mail is of the opinion that "we must expect more burdens. The country will not complain so long as money is spent to the best advantage and burdens are justly spread."

The Daily Express says: "Sir Kingsley Wood produces an orthodox Budget to pay for an unorthdox war. There is plenty of fat on the body corporate which can be stripped off during the next two or three years."

The News-Chronicle describes the Budget as "timid and tinkering," and adds that almost the only redeeming feature is that all direct taxes will be collected at the source.

The Daily Herald declares compared with Lord Simon's Budget three months ago, yesterday's Budget was an improvement, "but only a small improvement. And we needed a very big improvement."

The Manchester Guardian says Sir Kingsley Wood is the first Chancellor since the war to show admirable grasp of the real problem of war finance, but "excellently as he presented the problem, has remedies fall disappointingly short."

The Financial Times says the Budget is well adjusted to obtain increasing response from a community solidly united to pledge all its resources for victory.

"After an over-prolonged spell of fiscal confusion and uncertainty, the City and nation will welcome the clarity with which the Chancellor has endowed his Budget in two essential respects: firstly, alterations of the existing tax structure are as straightforward as they are drastic; and secondly, insistence on the necessity of the maximum saving and lending to the nation of increasing proceeds of the intensive national effort is the clearest possible warning that only in that way can the heavier taxation be avoided."

The Financial News says: "There is only too good reason to conclude that if this is all the Treasury can do by way of emergency financing, we shall certainly have inflation by the front door, the Chancellor himself is to blame if his critics mistakenly read his first effort as an omen that 'he may intend to do more next time . . . . But the time to set about his task in grim earnest is now. Wars are not financed by tomorrows and might-have-beens."

CHICAGO SOX BEAT BOSTON FOR 3RD TIME

New York Yankees Turn on Heat, Wiping Out St. Louis Browns

United Press

NEW YORK, July 25—The amazing Chicago White Sox, equipped in the main with nothing but the unquenchable fire of Jimmy Dykes' driving spirit as manager, today soared into the first division at the expense of the Boston Red Sox by defeating the Beantown crew for the third straight time.

Handicapped by lack of pitchers, equipped with only one topflight star in Shortstop Luke Appling and two lesser stars in Taft Wright and Mike Kreevich, the White Sox nevertheless continue to pile up victories and preserve the first division tradition brought to the club by the former Mack third baseman. Today's triumph marked the 13th Hose victory in their last 15 starts.

RED SOX FALL

The Red Sox fell before an 11-hit Chisox attack that netted a 6-4 victory when Joe Kuhel, hero of the current victory drive, blasted out another of his increasingly frequent home runs in the fifth inning with two mates aboard.

Pitchers Knott and Brown, meanwhile, kept eight Boston hits well scattered.

The New York Yankees also turned on the heat today, wiping out the St. Louis Browns by a score of 13-8 on a 16-hit attack, nine of which went for extra bases including two home runs by Joe Gordon, his 15th and 16th of the year, and homers by Joe DiMaggio, Red Rolfe and Bill Dickey.

Many baseball experts are beginning to declare that the final stages of the race in the American League will be fought out between the Yankees and the White Sox, basing their calculations on the performances of the two teams since July 4 and utterly disregarding current standings.

STRETCH LEAD

The Detroit Tigers stretched their lead to 1½ games by defeating the Washington Senators, 5-2. Setting the batting pace were Hank Greenberg, Rudy York and Barny McCosky, with a triple and doubles respectively.

The Cleveland Indians continued to falter, losing to the Philadelphia Athletics, 7-6. Chapman's home run in the first with one aboard gave the Macks a lead they never relinquished, though the Tribe pressed in several innings.

In the National League, the Boston Bees lost an 8-4 game to the Chicago Cubs, but pulled off the first triple play of the year in the National League in the eighth inning, the ball rifling from Hassett to Miller to Rowell. Six doubles by the Cubs proved too much for the Bees, however.

Pitcher Truett Sewell's long fly in the ninth with the bases loaded scored Fletcher with the winning run as the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the New York Giants, 2-1. The St. Louis Cardinals and Philadelphia Phillies were rained out. Cincinnati and Brooklyn were not scheduled.

German Finance

as for workers' homes and settlements.

WORK STOPS

When war began the continuation of all this public work was either stopped or largely reduced, so that funds which had been allotted for these purposes, were now available for armaments. At the same time taxes all round were increased by 50 per cent, extra payment for overtime work was abolished, and the money thus saved had to be turned over to the state. Besides, the regulations applying to tax exemption for amortizations of industrial enterprises were modified.

Up to the autumn of 1939 all industries in Germany had been that much strengthened financially, that the old established method of financing industrial extensions out of earnings, was no longer necessary, but instead such growing concerns were referred to the capital market, which therefore in an ever increasing extent was resorted to for industry loans. Industrial taxation could be increased accordingly with the result that from many enterprises the tax revenue jumped by 50 per cent and more. Thereby the Reich circumvented the other alternative as in 1938, to skim these capital increases through Reich Loans, in order to defray war expenditures.

MIRACLE EXPLAINED

And last but not least, the counties, communities and public bodies were saddled with contributions to the war chest. All expenses which were not of vital importance were abolished, and the money thus saved was also made available for war finance.

Thus Germany in her financial economics succeeded in financing the present war through increased taxation, and avoided war loans as in England, or inflationary measures and increased note circulation that France had to resort to.

The much talked about German "Financial Miracle" consists therefore only in the fact that National Socialist Economics through a correct distribution of capital succeeded in harnessing all of Germany's productive forces into the German economic process, in strengthening individual enterprises, and in obtaining from this improved financial background the funds to pay for the war.

Canada Restricting U.S. Pleasure Trips

Domei Tsushin

OTTAWA, July 28—The Canadian Government has decided to restrict pleasure traveling by Canadians in the United States.

It is officially explained that this action will mean that $75,000,000 or more will be diverted for more important uses, such as purchase of war materials.

Canadian expenditure on travel has amounted annually to about $125,000,000.

The only travel now allowed is that which is absolutely necessary for business or other such purposes, opinion inside the committee.

ITALY, REICH SUSPICIOUS OF SOVIET ACTS

Ciano's Arrival in Berlin Of Serious Importance; Accord with Britain Looms

By J. W. T. MASON
United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, July 21—The arrival in Berlin of Count Galeazzo Ciano, the Italian Foreign Minister, yesterday for the renewal of secret conferences with Chancellor Adolf Hitler coincided with Italian press warnings to Joseph Stalin that if the Kremlin accepts British offers for conciliation and cooperation, Russia's fate will be the same as Poland's.

Hitherto Italo-German press comments on Russia's war time forwardness has been worded cautiously. Open suspicion of Russian treachery now voiced in the Fascist-controlled press of Italy implies that a Slav situation may be developing which Il Duce considers dangerous.

SUSPICIONS GROW

Only a matter of serious importance seems to justify a second visit of Count Ciano to Berlin so soon after his earlier conference with Herr Hitler this month at Munich.

Italian suspicions of Russia are more sensitive than Germany's because of Mussolini's claim to paramount interests in the Balkans and the Mediterranean.

At the same time, there can be no doubt that Germany must be much concerned over this week's overwhelming pro-Soviet prebiscites in Latvia, Esthonia and Lithuania, which, in effect, give Stalin complete control of the armies of these three Baltic nations.

CIRCLE BROKEN

Germany has broken the French encirclement of the Reich, but a new Slav encirclement is now being strengthened. Russia's concessions from Finland and the Balkans gives the Soviet Union control of the eastern Baltic. Her control of Esthonia, Latvia and Lithuania, her occupation of part of Poland and the acquisition of Bucovina and Bessarabia from Rumania, gives Russia a continuous frontier with Germany almost 1,000 miles long.

At the same time, Russia is not only pressing Turkey for joint control of the Dardanelles, but also is trying to stimulate a new wave of Communism in the eastern Balkans from her vantage ground in Bessarabia.

MORE FEARS

Coupled with these developments—so adverse to Italo-German interests—the Italian press now reveals Italian fears that Russia is moving toward some form of rapproachment with Britain.

The British Government has associated its closing of the Burma-Yunnan Highway with suggestions that Japan and China reach a settlement of the Asiatic conflict. Here is a possible opportunity for Britain and Russia to work together in the Orient out of which might come a mutual pact for coordination of their efforts in Europe. Such are the intricacies of European diplomacy.

Certainly Russia has become the European war's enigma for Germany and Italy. Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini are looking askance at Stalin and uneasily trying to calculate the direction his next ambitions will move.

DISUNITY RUMORED

Especially must Germany and Italy keep close observation of Russia at present when the two belligerents are considering how to deliver what they hope will be a crushing blow against Great Britain. Reports have been circulating in Europe that the German High Command lacks unanimity regarding the outcome of an invasion of the British Isles and Herr Hitler is said to have been advised by some of his leading generals that failure must be anticipated.

If that were to happen and, if at the same time Russia were to seek further territorial expansion, the whole complexion of the war might go into reverse almost overnight. The uncertainties of war were never more apparent than today in Europe.

U.S. Election Fight

expressed in the party platform adopted at Chicago.

PLATFORM FAILS

The New York Times, which supports President Roosevelt, pointed out in an editorial yesterday that the platform failed to support the President's foreign policy.

"The Democrats," the Times observed, "ridiculed the super-cautious foreign affairs plank in the Republican platform but could think of nothing better than to imitate it."

While opponents of the President are making themselves heard at the moment, most political observers appear to feel that this is merely a case of the opponents having their innings first. Democratic Party leaders, counting heavily on Mr. Roosevelt's great personal popularity and on the efficiency of the party machine, obviously are unworried by the present trend.

The majority opinion appears to be that European events, overshadowed now by the third-term debate, will exercise an important effect on the campaign later and that these point in general to the President's re-election. If the European war is still raging in November, a leading strategist of the party said yesterday, or if a totalarian peace has been established by then, either development could be expected to convince many voters that President Roosevelt should remain in the White House another four years.

NAVY CONTRACTS APPROVED BY CONGRESS GROUP

Army Officers Outline U.S. Military Needs and Costs; 'M-Day' Plan Gets Criticism

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, July 25—The House Naval Affairs Committee last night approved contract authorizations totaling $298,351,000 for general construction and improvement of United States Navy establishments, including naval bases in the Pacific.

The House committee approved the authorizations, which included $1,365,000 for Hawaii, $154,000 for Guam and $180,000 for Tutuila, as Army and Navy chiefs continued to draft a gigantic plan to harness and control the vast resources of the United States and the energies of its 130,000,000 inhabitants in preparation for war.

PROGRAM EXPENSIVE

High Army officers were understood to have told the House Military Affairs Committee yesterday that the total Army program of preparing for war will cost $6,000,000,000 annually, thereby exceeding the $4,818,000,000 defense bill now pending before Congress by $2,200,000,000. The $6,000,000,000 would include the cost of compulsory military registration which may begin in the United States within five weeks.

The Secretary of War, Colonel Henry L. Stimson, and the Under-Secretary of War, Louis Johnson, testified before the committee yesterday. They requested that the committee immediately approve the tentative recommendation of the Army Chief of Staff, General George C. Marshall, for the registration in September of all American males between the ages of 21 and 31.

They said the Army was anxious to begin registration on September 1 provided that Congress in the meanwhile approves the pending conscription bill which would call up 400,000 conscripts and mobilize the National Guard by October 1.

MILLION MEN

The Army program at present envisages the training of fully equipped initial defense forces numbering 1,000,000 men with 500,000 equally well trained reserves. Such an Army would be maintained constantly, according to one version of the plan.

The registration and conscription plan is only a small part of the full "M-Day" plan intended to prepare the nation as quickly as possible for "total war" by coordinating labor, industry and financial resources with the fighting machine.

"War is no longer simply a battle between armed forces in the field—it is a struggle in which each side strives to bring to bear against the enemy the coordinated power of every individual and every material resource at its command. The conflict extends from the soldier in the front line to the citizen in the remotest hamlet in the rear," a document explaining the plan, issued jointly by the War and Navy Departments, said today.

AGENCIES PROVIDED

The plan calls for the setting up of a number of special government agencies, under the control of the President, to direct the nation's war effort. These agencies would have the power to fix prices, control transportation and raw materials and regulate the distribution of labor to various industries, among other things.

The key agency in this set up would be the war resources administration. One of the main functions of this agency would be to regulate the supply of war materials to the various services. The administration membership would include outstanding business leaders with a thorough understanding of the nation's resources. Such a group already is functioning.

The industrial mobilization plan has been under constant study by the War and Navy departments and was first published in 1931. It was revised in the summer and autumn of 1939 to meet new conditions, and undoubtedly will be further modified according to lessons revealed by the European struggle.

LIBERTIES UNJEOPARDIZED

Much criticism has been directed against the plan by some quarters on the grounds that individual liberties would be ignored to a large extent. The War and Navy Departments insist the plan does not propose to modify "any of our constitutional processes" and, in fact, is intended to preserve them.

"The surrender of all individual rights in wartime is undesirable, if it can be avoided, but the assumption of additional individual responsibilities will be essential to the efficient coordination of a national industrial effort," the document states.

Existing government departments, such as Treasury, Commerce and Labor, would continue their normal tasks in wartime, but would also undertake any special war missions for which they might be well adapted.

OTHER AGENCIES

Other special wartime agencies which would be created under the plan, include the Public Relations Administration, Selective Service Administration, War Labor Administration, Price-Control Authority and War Service Committees.

The Public Relations Administration probably would correspond closely to the propaganda and information ministries of the various European belligerents.

Private enterprise would be encouraged to the utmost under the plan to supply the nation's war needs, but in cases where the risk might be too great, special government corporations would be established.

STOCKS ON HAND

The War Department already has extensive information on the nation's productive capacity and plans to switch certain industries to the manufacture of materials not produced in sufficient quantities in peacetime. Stocks of critical and strategic materials not obtainable in this country also are being stored up constantly.

Sine the Great War, the lesson has been coming home to United States experts with increasing force that whole nations, not just parts of them, fight modern wars.

"To make arrangements for the effective use of material resources in war, the plans evolved must consider the problems of the Army, the Navy, the civilian population and industry," the plan states.

Picture for Navy

A large Japanese painting, eight feet square, representing eagles and angry billows, was presented the navy Thursday by Michinori Sakaida, a painter in Miyazaki Prefecture. The eagles symbolize the Naval air arm.

Gift of Butterflies

The city of Rio de Janeiro recently sent to Tokyo a collection of beautiful Brazilian butterfly specimens. Tokyo will reciprocate by sending some Japanese specimens.

Bird Whistlers

Suyekichi Tanaka, 35-year-old resident at Gotemba at the foot of Mt. Fuji, and his seven-year-old nephew and disciple, Hiroshi Tanaka of Tokyo, succeeded in enticing 50 birds of eight kinds when they imitated those birds vocally for 30 minutes in the Meiji Shrine garden Thursday. Mr. Tanaka soon will meet G. C. Caldwell, American expert, in a whistling contest.

Shark Kills Man

Rokusuke Tsutsui, a fisherman from Sakujima village in Hazu district of Aichi Prefecture, was seized by a shark while fishing with two other men near Shiratani beach in Atsumi district August 1, according to Domei. They made a plunge into the sea and a shark carried Tsutsui down. His body was later found by the local guards.

Ship Runs Aground

The Soya Maru, 692 tons, a freighter of the Fujiyama Kaiun Company ran aground in Suribachi Bay, Horomushiro, Hokkaido, at a point two miles from ashore, early Friday morning when its crew mistook the light of another ship for that of the Suribachi Lighthouse.

GERMANS GIVE FRENCH PEOPLE BRITISH FOOD

National Socialist Group Establishes Many Relief Stations in Taken Areas

D.N.B.

LE HAVRE, July 31—The relief, rendered French refugees by the National Socialist German welfare organization in the districts of Amiens, Cambrai and Le Havre, was described by the special Transocean correspondent Rudolf Schmidt, who had just concluded an extensive trip through this area.

The correspondent writes: "The Germans have succeeded in convincing the French refugees that they have to work more hours than usual. At first the French showed little confidence in the German victors, who established welfare organizations with the same precision with which a few days before they had handled the German war machine.

"We met the French population having pork and beans, which was given them by members of the German organization and with blushing faces they admitted that it was very difficult for them to be thankful to the German victors.

"The National Socialist Welfare organization has established 85 relief stations in Northern France, where 576 German relief officials, nurses, assistants chauffeurs and typists cared for 4,000,000 evacuated people during the last month. It seems to be paradoxical the 2,600,000 tons of foodstuffs, which served for 21,466,000 meals, originated almost exclusively from the huge supplies, which the British expeditionary forces had left behind at Le Havre. The B.E.F. brought along sufficient cigarets, cotton preserves and canned food as well as other staple goods, which could have lasted them for more than five years.

"In addition, there was some 1,600 frozen half oxen, 2,000 tons of coffee, 30,000 tons of flour and many other supplies which fell into the German hands. In Le Havre alone, seven distributing centers for these goods have been established and in addition these valuable British supplies are being shipped to seven other distributing centers by vessels of about 600 tons and numerous trucks.

"These other centers are scattered all over Northern France and from here the supplies are handed out to the French population. Trucks of the National Socialist Welfare organization have so far covered a distance of thousands of miles and besides the transportation of foodstuffs they also gave free lifts to thousands of refugees on their way home. During these trips the trucks of this organization consumed 85,000 gallons of gasoline and in addition to this many hundreds of gallons were given to the refugees in order to enable them to reach their homes again in their own motor vehicles."

TRAINING BILL FACES STORMY U.S. CONGRESS

Conscription Law Evokes Bitter Opposition; Army Ready to Use on Passage

By ARTHUR F. DE GREVE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, July 26—Congress yesterday rushed action on the compulsory military training program coincident with the revelation that the War Department is ready to begin drafting an army of 1,400,000 men within 24 hours after the conscription law is enacted.

Despite the apparent approval of some form of conscription in the House of Representatives, the conscription bill will travel a hard road in the Senate where debate will not be limited, political observers believed.

WHEELER, NORRIS OPPOSE

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Democrat of Montana, and Senator George Norris, Independent Republican of Nebraska, are leading the anti-conscription bloc in the Senate.

Senator Wheeler yesterday denounced both the conscription bill and its author, Senator Edward R. Burke, Democrat of Nebraska. Senator Burke was criticized for bolting the Democratic Party.

Senator Norris yesterday announced his opposition to compulsory military training.

IDEA ABHORRENT

"To compel young men to serve in the army in time of peace is to me abhorrent," Senator Norris said. "I do not see the necessity for it. It is not only unnecessary but its enormous annual expense would be so great that our people would not sustain such a move."

The majority of members of the House of Representatives, however, are known to favor conscription and the actual strength of the anti-conscription bloc in the Senate has not yet been determined. Some quarters believe that this faction could not defeat a conscription bill, although they might delay its enactment by prolonged debate.

The joint Army and Navy Selective Service Committee yesterday completed preliminary plans to register all American males between the ages of 18 and 65 under the provisions of the pending bill.

SAMPLES PREPARED

Sample registration and identification cards, and a sample eight page questionnaire which will be sent to all men for registration, have already been prepared.

The committee would use the present election machinery as far as possible. Approximately 6,500 local selection boards would be established throughout the nation.

The proposed cards and questionnaire are patterned after documents used during the Great War. They were printed several years ago to provide training for Army officers who will be charged with setting up the registration machinery.

CHINA CALLS BACK LUTHERAN WOMAN, MISSIONARY IN ASIA FOR 25 YEARS

United Press

PASADENA, California—Mrs. Juline R. Kilen, missionary in China for 38 years, who faced a Chinese firing squad three times in the same day, was kidnaped for 23 days and who was bombed and machine gunned for two years is going back.

Mrs. Kilen admits that she is not going back because she has become accustomed to danger, but because she believes she is needed.

She admits that even in peaceful America, the drone of an airplane makes her hands clutch nervously.

TAKES 25 DAYS

It took her 25 days to reach Shanghai from Tsaoyang, which is her missionary district, to sail for her furlough home.

"The first two days of the journey," she said, "was made in native-hauled wheelbarrows. Then came a flat, springless cart that carried us 300 miles from our Lutheran mission. The rest of the trip was by train and boat, which was a little faster."

Mrs. Kilen was kidnaped by Lao Yang Ren, a Chinese chief who raided Tsaoyang with an army of 18000 looters.

As she and a newly married American couple tried to escape, the young man, who was also a missionary, was shot down and his wife wounded.

When the bandits tried to drag the wounded woman away, Mrs. Kilen offered to go in her place. She was taken without even being given time to administer to the wounded woman.

She was put on a horse and rode with a bandit for 23 days and nights. Sometimes she had no reins or stirrups. Often she was without food or water. For two days she had nothing to drink.

WU'S SOLDIERS SENT

The American legation sought the Chinese Government's aid in rescuing her, Marshal Wu Pei-fu and soldiers were sent for her.

Blaming her for the army attack, the bandits decided to shoot her and she was taken before a firing squad.

Asking that she might be allowed to write a letter to her daughter in the United States before she died, the bandits asked her what she would say in her letter.

"Til say I was shot by bandits," she replied.

They thought it over and decided not to shoot her just then. Two more times during the day, however, she was placed before the firing squad, but each time she was able to give them serious food for reflection, and finally they delivered her to Marshal Wu Pei-fu's army.

For the past two years she has been under almost constant bombing and machine gunning from airplanes at Tsaoyang.

Despite the constant bombing of Tsaoyang for the two years, Mrs Kilen never left the city but for one day.

Panama Army Officials Disown Stimson View

Domei Tsushin

PANAMA, Aug. 1—United States army intelligence officers here today disclaimed any knowledge of the statement made by the Secretary of War, Colonel Henry L. Stimson, in Washington, that 81 foreign agents illegally present in the Canal Zone, are being held in custody.

Colonel Stimson made the statement in the course of a meeting with newspapermen in which he strongly denied a report that 265 Nazi agents had been found among workers on American projects in the Panama Canal Zone.

The army officers declared that the only group of foreigners approaching the figure of 81 in the Canal Zone is a group being detained at the Balboa immigration station—refugees and other aliens who have been there over a year awaiting permission to enter some American country.

Robot Rocket, Torpedo To Be Demonstrated

United Press

SPRINGFIELD, Massachusetts, July 26—J. Robert Fish, research engineer, announced here yesterday that within three weeks he expects to demonstrate his robot rocket and robot torpedo—explosive projectiles directed by sound to halt an invasion by land or sea.

The rocket, Mr. Fish declared, would be fast enough to overtake any plane. United States Government engineers, who are already testing his new type of carburetor for military planes and mosquito fighting boats, have agreed to witness his robot rockets, he said.

OIL PLAYS VITAL WAR ROLE, CALLS SIGNALS

Petroleum Fields Dictate Actions of Warriors; Nations Eye All Reserves

Editor's note: The following article was written before France's capitulation to Germany, however, that surrender does not change the oil picture production picture, but only complicates it.

By PERDIX

McClure Syndicate

NEW YORK—The lifeblood of Europe's military and naval machines is oil. Its production, sale and transportation are, therefore, of permanent importance in this war. Let's see how the major oil companies fit into this picture.

It probably is no coincidence that a large allied fleet is now concentrated in the eastern Mediterranean, because the near east contains one of the richest supplies of oil in the world. Up to the present, this territory has furnished the bulk of allied fuel requirements at the rate of about 5000 to 6000 barrels monthly. This is one of the reasons why oil purchases from the United States so far have been very disappointing.

In addition to the fleet, the allies keep about 60,000 troops in Egypt, of whom 6000 are New Zealanders. Then there is a large contingent of soldiery in Syria and Palestine. Estimates have placed their number at some 1,500,000 men, but experts say that these Anglo-French protectorates cannot support more than 200,000 armed men, considering economic resources, normal populations and the necessary line of supplies.

SAFEGUARDS FUEL SUPPLIES

This elaborate protective force constitutes the safeguard of Anglo-French fuel supply. After the destructive power of the airplane became so obvious in Norway, additional defensive measures were taken. Should it come to a free-for-all in this ancient sea, the combined Russian and Italian air forces might concentrate immediately on the bombardment and destruction of the valuable wells and pipelines.

So a close examination indicates that what is known today of Mediterranean and near eastern strategy boils down almost exclusively to the demoninator of oil.

From a practical standpoint, the totos seem to have the initial advantage which goes with black mailing. They would not hesitate to destroy the laborious handiwork of private engineering and private investment owned by the "plutocracies." The allies, on the other hand, would be most careful in attacking any such territory, because they would want to take the assets over later with as little damage as possible.

LOOK TOWARD BAKU AREA

French and British interests have had their eyes on the rich deposits of the Russian Baku area ever since the World war and haven't forgotten that the soviets refused to give them any concessions. It was the first clash between the ideologies of state socialism and private capitalism.

Closing of the Mediterranean to British merchant shipping has increased the average tanker trip from the Gulf of Iran to the allied countries from 20 to about 40 days. Hence Venezuelan oil, which is about 1000 miles nearer to the British isles than Texas gulf ports, most likely will be heavily drawn upon.

As in several other parts of the world, production in Venezuela is in the hands of Standard Oil and British Shell through subsidiary companies. Friendly competitors among themselves, as an international group they represent one of the strongest existent monopolies. They control refineries, tanker fleets, and everything that goes with the business.

CONTROL VENEZUELA RESERVES

The two companies account for over 90 per cent of Venezuela's foreign exchange reserves. They can thus make and break her whole economic life. Any agitation among the people, inspired by fifth columnists or otherwise, can use these indisputable facts to stir up a first class revolution.

The Anglo-Iranian Oil company, it has been definitely established, has been selling oil to Japan—after expiration of the American-Japanese agreement. The company is controlled by the British Government and long maintained a flourishing affiliate in Germany.

The Texas corporation is one of the favored suppliers of fascist Spain. The British Shell group at one time all but controlled the German market.

During the first few months of the war, American observers still reported seeing Shell oil deliveries functioning smoothly in several parts of the Reich. The story of Standard Oil's swap of oil products against the Buna artificial rubber patents of Germany broke recently.

Enterprising Frenchmen are speculating in Russian oil stocks recently.

Enterprising Frenchmen are speculating in Russian oil stocks on the Paris bourse.

So, if the shooting in the near east and Balkans should start, we shall be wise to forget the "integrity of free peoples" and should look upon the marching armies as necessary to the solution of hard-boiled material problems.

Duke Kahanamoku Weds Stage Dancer In Honolulu

Domei Tsushin

HONOLULU, Aug. 2—Duke Kahanamoku, former Olympic swimming champion, who is now Sheriff of Honolulu, today married Miss Norma Allen, a stage dancer.

The Duke, known as the father of swimming in Hawaii, first came into prominence in 1912 at the Olympic Games held in Stockholm, when he startled the world by easily outclassing a fast field to win the 100-meter freestyle championship.

After postponement of the 1916 Olympics due to the World War, Duke Kahanamoku competed in the 1920 and 1924 meets. His last appearance was at the 1932 Olympic swimming meet at Los Angeles when he appeared in an exhibition water polo game.

RUSSO-GERMAN BALKAN FRICTION SEEN GROWING

Reich Troops Shipped Gradually from West To New East Frontier

United Press

BUCHAREST, July 28—Growing friction between Germany and Russia in the Balkans was seen in informed circles here yesterday as reliable reports were received confirming that German troops are being gradually shipped from the west to Germany's new eastern frontier with Russia.

A decree published in the official gazette yesterday announced that the former Foreign Minister Grigore Gafencu, has been appointed Rumanian Minister to Moscow and will arrive in the Soviet capital August 10. The delay in M. Gafencu's departure was considered significant in the light of the Balkan conferences now being carried out at Salzburg and Rome, since M. Gafencu will proceed to Moscow with full details of Chancellor Adolf Hitler's plans for southeastern economic and political reorganization.

The United Press was informed in Soviet quarters here that the final change in Russo-Rumanian frontiers would probably be completed before a full diplomatic exchange had been carried out between Berlin, Rome, Moscow and Bucharest.

German quarters here, commenting on reports of German troop movements, said the shipment of troops to Germany's eastern borders had not yet reached the proportions of a concentration. They minimized the movements, stating that new barracks must be found for troops utilized in the campaigns against Belgium and France.

Meanwhile, reports from reliable sources said the Minister of the interior has given Jews who fled from Bessarabia to Rumania proper because of the Soviet occupation of that province, five days in which to return to Bessarabia. It was pointed out that this chiefly affects rich Jews who fled by automobile.

The Government, it was understood, has decided, for the security of the State, to place 200 Jews and Communists in the concentration camp at Mercureaciuc, where, it was recalled, the leaders of the Iron Guards were fomerly imprisoned.

WILLKIE GOES TO DIXIELAND

G.O.P. Will Make First Serious Challenge to Democrat Supremacy Since '28

United Press

ATLANTA, July 28—The announcement by the Republican Presidential Candidate, Wendell Willkie, yesterday that he intends to wage "an aggressive campaign" in the south, indicates that the Republican Party will make its first serious challenge to Democratic supremacy in Dixie since 1928.

The rapid appearance of "Willkie for President" clubs throughout the south preceded the Republican nominee's announcement that he will make a stump tour of the area.

Willkie clubs appeared suddenly after the Democratic convention ended. From Virginia to Louisiana club leaders appealed particularly to dissenting Democrats.

The spread of Willkie groups confronts Democratic leaders with the necessity of carrying on an active campaign in their traditional stronghold to offset the G.O.P. bid for votes that are usually Democratic. Southern Republican leaders used a variety of approaches to get the Willkie ball rolling. To conservative anti-New Dealers they said, "Support Willkie and get even with Roosevelt."

They used the Democratic Vice-Presidential candidate, Henry A. Wallace, as a red flag for farmers opposed to the Secretary of Agriculture's crop limitation policies.

Mr. Willkie plans a trip through the south this fall to make addresses at only those localities where he believes his election stands the best chance.

484 REFUGEES FROM HONGKONG QUIT MANILA

En Route to Australia; Three More Dutch Liners Taking 1,000 Evacuees

By ROBERT P. MARTIN

United Press

MANILA, July 29—A Dutch liner of 16,000 tons left Manila last night en route to Australia with 484 women and children evacuees from Hongkong aboard.

Three more Dutch liners will arrive here July 31 to take an additional 1,000 Hongkong evacuees to Australia. Two Australian ships will arrive the first week of August to pick up the remaining evacuees from Hongkong.

The embarkation last night was carried out smoothly, according to the British Consul-General C. Wyatt-Smith who was on hand to inspect the ship.

He said the evacuees were "overjoyed" when they saw their accommodations on the Dutch luxury liner which formerly sailed between Batavia and Holland.

Every person, he said, had an ordinary berth and there was no "doubling up." Future sailings also will look after the personal comfort of the refugees from Hongkong, he said.

The Hongkong evacuees, he added, will be divided up between Sydney, Brisbane an Melbourne where preparations have been made to receive them.

Meanwhile, a move to draft a petition asking the Hongkong authorities to abandon the evacuation scheme, was reported to have been started among evacuees still in Manila.

The petition, it was understood, would be sent to Hongkong through the British Consul General.

The majority of Hongkong refugees in Manila are known to object to being sent to Australia. They pointed out that while Manila is only 36 hours from Hongkong by boat and six hours by air, Australia would be too far away from husbands and fathers in Hongkong in case of a family emergency.

Many of the Hongkong refugees who sailed from here for Australia last night were weeping.

NEW YORK, July 29—The Brooklyn Dodgers, who snapped a six-game losing streak by winning a double header against the St. Louis Cardinals yesterday, today cut down the margin of the Cincinnati Reds to seven games by taking their third victory in a row while the R...s were bowing to the New York Giants.

The Dodgers took a wild and woolly game from the Pittsburgh Pirates, 7-6, winning when Pete Coscarart singled home the triumphing tally in the ninth after two men had walked. Arky Vaughan and Base Phelps were both ejected in the eighth inning of the game as a result of a fist fight.

OUTHIT REDS

The Giants were forced to outhit the Reds by 14-7 to take a 4-3 decision, winning in the ninth when Young doubled to drive in Harry Danning with the winning run.

Johnny Mize clouted a single, double and triple to drive in four runs and score two himself to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to an 8-3 victory over the Boston Bees, while Billy Herman paced the Chicago Cubs to a 7-3 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies by driving in two runs on a home run in the first inning.

In the only game scheduled in the American League, the Philadelphia Athletics again defeated the Detroit Tigers, this time by a 9.7 score. The Macks sewed up the game in the sixth Chapman tripled, Potter doubled, Brancato, Johnson and McCoy singled to score five runs before the carnage could be halted. Rudy York and Hank Greenberg managed to keep the Tigers in the game with home runs.

No other contests were scheduled, so that six of the eight teams gained.

Invasion Peril Unpassed, Churchill Warns Country

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, Aug. 4—The daily postponement of the Nazi Blitzkrieg by sea and land today prompted Prime Minister Winston Churchill to issue a special message to the country warning Britons not to relax their alertness and stressing that the peril is by no means past.

"The Prime Minister wishes it to be known," says the message, "that the possibility of German attempts at invasion by no means has passed away. The fact that the Germans are now putting about rumors that they do not intend to attempt the invasion should be regarded with a double dose of suspicion which attaches to all their utterances. Our sense of growing strength and preparedness must not lead to the slightest relaxation of our vigilance or moral alertness."

Baltic, Black Sea Finally Connected

Domei Tsushin

MOSCOW, Aug. 3—Another link in the Soviet-German transportation system has been added with the completion of the 125-mile Dnieper-Bug canal in eastern Poland and Ukraine, which opens an all-water route between the Black Sea and the Baltic, facilitating the exchange of goods between the Soviet Union and Germany, according to the Krassnflot, organ of the Soviet navy. The formal opening of the canal by the Government Commission is expected to take place shortly.

The hitherto unusable Oginsky canal system is also reported to have been rebuilt and reorganized.

The Dnieper-Bug canal, for the completion of which 220,000 workers have been employed, has brought Kiev, in Ukraine, in direct connection with Brest Litovsk, the demarcation point between the Soviet Union and Germany in former Poland.

HITLER SEEN EYEING SWISS; FORTS CLOSED

Report That Germany Is Seeking Food Supply Not Adequate Explanation

By J. W. T. MASON

United Press

NEW YORK, July 30—Sudden orders by the Swiss high command for Swiss soldiers to resist invasion accompanied by reports of German representations to Switzerland concerning Swiss food reserves and other materials, indicated today that Chancellor Adolf Hitler may have started a movement to bring Switzerland within Germany's economic control.

Switzerland is the only remaining free center of Democracy on the European continent. It would be well within Herr Hitler's ambitions to force the Swiss to take orders from Berlin. Germany's desire to control the European continent in the interest of Totalitarianism can ill afford to allow Switzerland to remain an island of freedom and a center of propaganda against the Hitler-Mussolini codes. It would not be surprising, then, if Herr Hitler decided to try to force the Swiss to accept some form of suzerain control.

EXPLANATION NOT CLEAR

The report that Germany wishes to obtain possession of Swiss food supplies is not an adequate explanation for such a move. The Swiss are dependent upon large importations of wheat and other cereals. They have been storing reserves this year, but since the French collapse, they have had no further means of securing these imports.

It is improbable that Switzerland has more than sufficient food to feed its people over a year. Therefore, seizure of Switzerland would not contribute considerably to Germany's needs. There is no evidence currently that Germany is so hard pressed for food as to necessitate action against Switzerland on such a ground. The food representations appear to be an excuse for more serious action.

Significantly, the Germans have closed the fortifications of the Maginot Line fortifications near the Swiss frontier as a preliminary military movement.

A large number of French soldiers fled into Switzerland when French resistance collapsed. They have been interned, but at the same time, the Swiss have much sympathy for them and do not want to see a permanent Fascist state established in France.

CENTER FOR SPIES

Switzerland also is the most important European center of espionage. Despite the Swiss Government's statement that it would preserve strict neutrality it borders both Germany and Italy. Hence it is not difficult for secret agents to cross the frontiers. With Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium and France in German hands, Switzerland alone offers a comparatively easy entrance and exit for espionage operatives seeking information in Italy and Germany.

But the principal purpose of any German movement against Switzerland would be to suppress the propaganda center of freedom in middle Europe and force the Swiss people to acknowledge Germany's economic supremacy. If Herr Hitler could obtain control of Swiss food supplies, Switzerland would be in a difficult position. Germany then could place Switzerland on rations and thus squeeze the people into a tight corner. This might leave the Swiss Government no other alternative than to accept Chancellor Hitler's economic domination, at least for the duration of the war.

No Waved Hair for Men

The barbers' association in Ogaki city, Gifu Prefecture, have decided to stop the use of electric hair-irons for men. They consider that waved hair of men is incongruous with the wartime period.

New Type of Houses

A compromise between an apartment-house and an independent dwelling house is becoming popular in Osaka where efforts are being made to cope with the housing and building materials shortage. The new type of houses are two-story with six-mat and three-mat rooms downstairs and four-and-a-half-mat and three-mat rooms upstairs. They are designed for two families. There are separate entrances and kitchens. Already more than 100 such houses have been built at Matsudacho, Sumiyoshi-ku.

List of Nicknames

The 75 families living in Shakamachi street, in the town of Makaminato, Ibaraki Prefecture, are so well known by their nicknames that their true names are almost forgotten. When a list of those households was compiled recently by their true names, it was almost useless because no residents knew their neighbors' true names. Another list using nicknames, had to be compiled.

Bascule Bridge

Crowds of spectators assemble at 5:30 a.m., 8 a.m., noon, 3 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. daily at the two ends of Kachidoki bascule bridge when it is lifted to allow ships to pass. The bridge was opened for traffic in June. There were 9,970 passengers, 6,413 bicycles, 1,386 motorcars, 1,260 trucks and 477 vehicles of other kinds who crossed the bridge in one day recently. From three to 10 ships pass under the bridge daily.

Noodle Shortage

Tokyo's about 7,000 noodle-shops are threatened with a shortage of flour because of the regulations prohibiting the sending of flour from the prefecture. Noodle men want authorities to secure a smooth supply of flour since noodles are becoming popular as a substitute for rice.

Tourists Injured

Some twenty persons were injured, three of them seriously, when a tourist bus went over precipice at Sado, Niigata Prefecture Sunday. An inexperienced driver was blamed for the accident which occurred at Hamomura village. Mrs. Tome Miura, 71, and Kanichi Suyetake, employe of a beer company, both Tokyo people, were seriously injured.

Germans Sending Thousands Refugees Back to Homes

Domei Tsushin

VICHY, Aug. 4—German military authorities, encouraging the growing movement of Belgian and French evacuees back to their homes, are placing 30 special trains a day at the refugees' disposal, sending as many as 40,000 Belgian and Farench civilians to Belgium and Nazi-occupied France from the crowded centers in unoccupied French territory, the Petit Parisien reported today.

The population of Paris is swelling back to normalcy as a result of the refugees' movement. Already more than 900,000 inhabitants, who fled before the Nazi advance early in June, have returned to the old French capital and the city's population, the paper said, now totals 2,900,000. Paris before the evacuation had 4,750,000 inhabitants.

Senator Lundeen Raps Willkie, Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1—Senator Ernest Lundeen, Farmer-Laborite of Minnesota, today sent out a call for third party convention in Chicago to draw up a platform opposing the "interventionist policies" of the two established parties.

Senator Lundeen said the Republican Presidential nominee, Wendell Willkie, and the Democratic candidate, President Roosevelt, advocate aiding Britain to the limit of our capacity."

The conscription bill now before Congress is bringing the United States to the last cross road before plunging it into an international war, he said.

"This is nothing short of slavery," he asserted. "I condemn it as European-minded, foreign-minded and British-minded."

CONSCRIPTION NECESSARY FOR U.S. DEFENSE

Roosevelt and Marshall Express Need for Building up Strength

United Press

WASHINGTON, July 31—President Roosevelt yesterday reiterated his belief in compulsory, universal military service as the Senate Military Affairs Committee unanimously approved of his request for the authority to mobilize the National Guard Reserve Corps for a year of intensive training.

The President said the situation today is not analogous to 1917 when the United States sent troops abroad and trained them there.

"The security of the country now depends on having trained, seasoned soldiers in adequate numbers when needed."

CONSCRIPTION IMPERATIVE

The Chief of Staff of the United States Army, General George C. Marshall, told the Senate Military Affairs Committee that it is imperative to conscript civilians if the United States Army is to be built up to the needed strength. It is impossible, he said, to depend upon voluntary enlistments.

"Despite the fact that this is a time of peace," he declared, "it is my belief that it is a time of peril. It would be a crime to send our men out unprepared."

U.S. CHANCES CONJECTURAL

United Press

NORFOLK, July 30—President Roosevelt, after inspecting United States defenses on Chesapeake Bay yesterday, said the chances of the United States repelling an invader is still conjectural, despite the intense preparedness drive.

Holding an impromptu press conference aand a ship building dry dock works, the President said whether an invader reached Washington as the British did in 1812 depends on the time of attack and the identity of the invader. He added, however, that the country will feel much safer a year from now when the Administration's $10,000,000,000 rearmament program has had an opportunity to develop.

The press meeting followed a day's inspection of the Newport News shipyards, the Portsmouth, Virginia, navy yard, the Atlantic fleet operations base here, coast artillery and anti-aircraft batteries at Monroe Fortress and the general headquarters at Langley Field.

NATIONAL GUARD

WASHINGTON, July 30—President Roosevelt yesterday asked Congressional authority to call up the National Guard for an extended training period.

Mr. Roosevelt previously proposed to call up four infantry divisions of the National Guard and coast artillery regiments for extensive training. Yesterday's request took the form of a letter read to the Senate in which the President stressed that he desired the proposed legislation to apply also to organized reserves.

The President's requested legislation would permit calling up the National Guard and the organized reserves for use within the limits of the Western Hemisphere and the possessions of the United States.

The first reaction came from the Republican leader, Senator Warren Smith, of Vermont, who said the President's move was "a necessary component" of the conscription program.

The President, in peace time, is empowered to call out the National Guard for only two weeks of training. Meanwhile, the militiamen are under the disciplinary authority of the governors of the various states. Under the present statutes the National Guard comes unden full Federal authority only in time of war.

SERIOUSNESS INCREASES

"The increasing seriousness of the international situation demands that every element of our national defense structure be brought as rapidly as possible to the highest state of efficiency in training as well as in equipment and material," the President's letter said. "The National Guard of the United States is an integral, vital part of the Army. It comprises a body of men who voluntarily assumed the obligation to serve the nation in time of any crisis....

"The developments of modern warfare are such, however, that only seasoned, highly trained troops can hope for success in combat. Our citizen soldiery ... cannot possibly attain the necessary degree of efficiency through normal training activities. Even professional soldiers require months of intensive training to bring them to their satisfactory state ...

"I have deferred until now any request for immediate action in their respect. I cannot longer postpone this vitally essential step in our progress toward adequate preparedness..

"Of equal importance is the Officers Reserve Corps ...If ordered to active duty they can acquire the desired efficiency and, at the same time, supply increased needs for officers in our expanded army."

Mr. Roosevelt's letter concluded by asking for prompt Congressional approval.

AUSTRALIA CONFUSED OVER EVACUEES

Cables Sent Hongkong On Details Unanswered

United Press

SYDNEY, July 30—Confusion continued in Australian official quarters yesterday regarding the probable numbers and date of arrival in Australia of Hongkong evacuees.

Several cables sent the Hongkong Government asking for information regarding the evacuees have remained unanswered. The Minister of the Interior, H. S. Foll; said arrangements will be made to provide for evacuees arriving in Sydney. But preparation has been hampered by the lack of information regarding the movements, numbers, and assistance expected by the evacuees.

"It is almost impossible to make provision unless adequate notice of their arrival is received," Mr. Foll declared.

Nearly 100 evacuees have already arrived in Australia without notice. The number expected to arrive varies from 50 to 1,000; of which 40 per cent will be distributed in Victoria and the remainder in other states.

Various Australian public bodies, including the Overseas Children Citizens Committee, have signified their willingness to assist the evacuees. But they pointed out they had not been approached by the Government, since details for necessary preparations for their reception are not available owing to the failure of the Hongkong Government to announce plans or reply to official queries.

GERMANS STAGE FAIRS, SHOW MONEY POWER

Exhibits Slated Within Own Territory and Throughout Southeastern Europe in Fall

D.N.B.

BERLIN, Aug. 5—Germany's economic strength, which every day is giving fresh proofs of its efficiency, has not been affected by the war at all. One fact is especially noteworthy. In the coming weeks Germany will not only organize many fairs of her own but she will also be represented at many fairs in Southeastern Europe. These exhibitions are to demonstrate to what an extent people in Germany are planning and working and how it is possible for Germany in times of war to display her production activity and to maintain her export trade to such an extent.

The confidence, in the fair at Leipzig this autumn becomes evident from the fact that no less than 6,000 firms will exhibit. Under these circumstances one may reckon with one of the biggest fairs ever held. Not only German manufacturers and firms will participate but also a great number of foreign firms will exhibit at Leipzig this year. Also the Soviet Union, after an interval of many years, will take part in this exhibition.

RESULTS SHOWN

Another noteworthy event was the exhibition of raw materials and chemistry in Breslau, which had proved that the research work on various fields had given magnificent results.

Company reports, issued during the last week, practically all show good and satisfactory results. A number of factories of synthetic wool stressed the necessity of extending their works in order to be able to meet increasing demands. Financially, these companies have also gained in strength. The Rheinisch Synthetic Wool Company reported that it had been able to pay debentures amounting to 350,000 marks and to pay out a dividend of 5 per cent on the remaining profits. The Frankfort Machine works reported a considerable increase of business. These examples could be carried on if necessary as many more important works show very satisfactory business reports.

MARKET FLUID

The money market was very fluid showing strong demands for 4½ and 4 per cent treasury bonds at the bourse. But also emissions of the private industry met with strong demands. Boehler Brothers, for instance, in Vienna, issued a loan amounting to 20 million marks during the last week. The Rudaer Coal Mining Company issued a loan of 15 million marks. Both loans totaling together 35 million marks were fully subscribed during the first day. The German Company for public works, which was organized at the outbreak of the war in order to grant credits for the first change over from peace time to wartime work it was reported during the last week that only credits amounting to 45 million marks had been asked for. This relatively small amount proved again to what an extent the German business was able to master all difficulties, which may have arisen, without resorting to help by the Reich. The reconstruction work in those territories occupied by Germany also showed rapid progress during the last week. Noteworthy in this connection is the introduction of price regulations in Holland and Belgium. By the creation of a control system price increases in certain categories of commodity articles could be checked.

FUTABAYAMA PLANS TRAINING CAMPS FOR AMATEUR SUMO WRESTLING FANS

Grand Champion Sadaji Futabayama of the Japan professional wrestlers' association, who recently underwent 21-day religious austerities at a Kyushu temple, plans to open training camps for amateurs of the national sport, says the Asahi.

In the grand champion's opinion, the game of sumo should be practiced not only by professionals but by amateurs of all classes. To enable amateurs to practice it, he thinks it desirable to open a chain of training camps for amateurs.

Futabayama is expected to negotiate with the circles concerned to open amateur wrestlers' training-halls in November, after participating in the championship tournament of the Meiji Shrine games. Children, salaried men, shop apprentices and persons of all walks of life will be able to practice sumo at the proposed training halls under instruction of professional wrestlers.

The grand champion conceived the idea while undergoing religious austerities at Kyushu. Interviewed by the Asahi, he said:

"Wrestling is based on a deep human instinct. You know when a child becomes able to stand it likes to romp. I think wrestling originated from this instinct. I think this healthy sport should be practiced more generally and under proper guidance."

MELTING POT TO INFLUENCE U.S. ELECTIONS

Racial and National Stocks Expected to Play Vital Role in Contests

By JULIUS C. EDELSTEIN
United Press

WASHINGTON, July 22—A tremendous yet incalculable influence will be exerted on the congressional and political elections this year by the varied European racial stocks which have comingled here to form a nation, political experts believed here today.

For the first time since 1916, racial and national origins, keenly accented by the emotional repercussions of the European war, will play an important national role in the election contests, experts predicted. It is estimated that 30,000,000 United States citizens are naturalized aliens or first generation descendants of immigrants.

The powerful foreign language press of the United States, appealing to strategic and concentrated blocs of voters in urban centers, is being regarded with increasing respect as a political factor.

EXPRESSING SYMPATHY

Voters who usually follow affiliations of their particular neighborhoods, have begun to think of the elections as a means of expressing their sympathy with one or the other of the European belligerents.

Support of peace, and support of foreign policy must this year be reckoned with in terms of bloc sympathy or antipathy in the raging European conflict. Experts believe, moreover, that international ideologies will cut across factors of pure national descent, and that a problem of unprecedented complexity faces political leaders.

In Nebraska recently incumbent Senator Edward Burke, Democrat, was defeated for renomination in an election in which international issues played a prominent part. Senator Burke has attributed his defeat to the strong German sector of the state population which resented his open advocacy of the Allied cause.

Although often at odds with President Roosevelt on domestic policies, Senator Burke strongly supported the neutrality amendments last year on the grounds that such measures would be of assistance to the Allies; Her's defeat, Senator Burke publicly declared, was essential to the welfare of democracy in the United States.

Political observers, carefully studying the Nebraska, vote, agree that the predominant German population base of the state was an important factor in Senator Burke's defeat.

Candidates in other states, and national political leaders are now studying the complex national make-up of the country to aid in mapping out campaign strategy for the all-important political contests ahead.

Experts pointed out that the United States was settled, and its population expanded, by successive European immigration waves from the very beginning of colonial history.

SPANISH IN FLORIDA

Spanish adventurers colonized and settled in Florida in the sixteenth century, following the explorations of Ponce de Leon.

Later groups of Spanish settlers, many of them political exiles, settled in Florida and Louisiana; both states today have important Spanish population factions which wield considerable political influence.

The states of the great southwest, Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Oklahoma and California, have many citizens of Mexican and Spanish descent who were either incorporated into the United States by land acquisitions from Mexico, or came to join relatives there.

Large numbers of comparatively recent immigrants from Mexico have filtered through the Southwest in response to the demand for agricultural labor. Many thousands today work in the beet and vegetable fields of California, Colorado, and Utah.

The Great Southern state of Louisiana is, predominantly French in culture, and national descent. Owned and colonized by France in the eighteenth century, Napoleon sold the Louisiana territory to the United States in 1803; its legal structure remains today based on the Code of Napoleon. Its sympathies are predominantly with the Allies.

The Great Southeastern bloc of states, beginning with Georgia and including the Carolinas, Alabama, Mississippi, Kentucky, Virginia, Maryland, and Deleware are predominantly Anglo-Saxon.

The original stock was composed of religious minorities from Britain, from Scotland, and northern Ireland. Local settlements of Swedes, French, and Dutch have leavened the Anglo-Saxon mass. In some of the southern states, however, the white population is as high as 95 per cent Anglo-Saxon descent.

The huge industrial state of Pennsylvania was colonized by Dutch and English Quakers and Protestants. To supply the labor requirements of the growing steel mills, Poles and Italians flocked to the state in the nineteenth century. They form compact and powerful population units in Pittsburgh, Harrisburg, and other industrial centers.

DUTCH IN NEW YORK

In colonial days, New York was Dutch and English but these stocks were overwhelmed by the greatest flood of immigration the world has ever known; they came from every country in Europe during the nineteenth and early twentieth century, first the Irish, then Russians, Rumanians, Germans, Poles, Swedes, Norwegians; Italians and Greeks.

These later waves of European immigrants swept into New York, and went on into the interior of the nation, to work on the railroads, in the iron mines, in the beet fields, in the textile and shoe factories.

Swedes, Danes and Norwegians settled in northern Wisconsin, and in Minnesota. Germans, driven first by the suppressions of Meeternich in 1848, and later by the sharper forces of hunger, swarmed into Missouri, Ohio, and Wisconsin, Nebraska, North Dakota, and South Dakota.

Scandinavians and Germans made good farmers, good factory workers, brewers, and craftsmen. They were followed into the great mid-west by Poles, Germans, and Italians to work the great fruit orchards and beet fields.

Nebraska is peopled with relatively recent German descendents. Wisconsin, however, with an even larger German population, was settled by German refugees from the 1848 revolutions, and they are inclined to be unsympathetic to the Hitler regime. That state, moreover, has imporant Scandinavian components which, during the last World War, were anti-war and somewhat pro-German.

Isolationism, once a bedrock of policy in the mid-west, is no longer certain of support. Yet in some states opposition to war will be a political necessity. In others outspoken sympathy for Britain may be the key to political victory. The War, in all its aspects, will play a major role in the coming elections.

MAKIHARA WELL TREATED IN LONDON PRISON, NOT QUESTIONED, HE SAID

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, Aug. 5—Satoru Makihara's first act upon returning home tonight from four days of confinement in Brixton prison was to cable the happy news of his release to his wife and 11-year-old son, Minoru, who are spending the summer at their home in Ushigome, Tokyo.

Although Mr. Makihara was not immediately available for a statement late tonight, Sutejiro Yamakawa, manager of the Mitsubishi Bank in London, informed the press that the freed man was not disposed to make any comment on his detention beyond the fact that he was well treated.

Mr. Makihara is quite well, Mr. Yamakawa said, adding that he was released unconditionally. "As far as I gather, Mr. Makihara intends to remain in London to continue his business," he declared.

PARTY HELD

A happy gathering consisting of the entire staff of the Mitsubishi Company here as well as his many friends met at Mr. Makihara's Brixton residence to celebrate the release. Once safely back at home, the story of his imprisonment was pieced together.

Mr. Makihara said that while eating what was his last supper of prison fare, at 4:30 p.m. today, he was unaware of his impending freedom.

"After finishing the meal, I sat down to read Miyamoto Musashi, a recent Japanese best-seller," he added.

He said he was interrupted once before his release when the warden came in with some fruits, a gift of Shunosuke Tanabe, who was imprisoned in a neighboring cell. Mr. Tanabe, acting manager of the Mitsui Bussan Kaisha, was placed in custody at the same time as Mr. Makihara and on identical charges.

CHANGED CLOTHES

Continuing, he said: "It was when I was debating whether to read some more or go to bed that the warden came in with the simple announcement: 'You are free.'

"I hurriedly changed into my business clothes and packed. The warden came into my cell and escorted me out. As the warden passed by Mr. Tanabe's cell, I tapped on the wall to let him know that I was leaving, and received a quick reprimand from the warden.

"I then asked why Mr. Tanabe was not being released also. The warden intimated then that he might be set free tomorrow morning.

"When I stepped out of prison, it was 8:10 o'clock. Once alone, I hailed a cab and returned home."

Over a glass of champagne, he tried to answer the endless string of questions that were hurled at him.

EVADES CHARGES

Because of his position, he studiously evaded any references to the charges against him. Mr. Makihara did reassure the group time and again that the prison officials had treated him well. He said he was never subjected to questioning, and added that any food that the prison kitchen could furnish was his for the asking.

"Better rooms are provided at five shillings a day," he laughed, "but they were all taken." Even Sir Oswald Mosley, leader of the British Fascist party, is living in an ordinary cell," he added as a clincher.

It was not until an hour later that Mr. Makihara was able to break away to indulge in his first request upon arriving home—to be permitted to take a bath. Baths, he said, are permitted only once a week in the Brixton prison.

Happiest of the whole gathering however, was Mrs. Grant, Mr. Makihara's housekeeper, whose belief in his innocence was at last justified.

LLOYD GEORGE TAKES BRITAIN TO TASK FOR GESTAPO TACTICS

Warns That English Democracy Threatened By Totalitarian Methods of Government

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE
(Copyright by United Press)

LONDON, Aug. 4—The Governments that direct the destinies of nations during a period of emergency are apt to be more intolerant of criticism than administrations that govern the land in periods of tranquility.

But that natural tendency calls for special vigilance in a period of crisis, lest something be left behind in our system of Government that will permanently impair, if not destroy a free constitution which it has taken centuries to build up.

ATTACKS INCREASE

The war has only lasted 11 months and we are already threatened in every direction with the most alarming encroachments on the freedom of the people and the press of the country. A minority of independent members of Parliament are resisting these attacks on our fundamental rights and are rendering a service to the cause of true Democracy which will justify the cost to those who are proud to believe that we are the only free country in Europe.

But the danger is great and it is growing. The menace of invasion by the Nazi legions has not yet materialized. The attempt may begin any day or night. But the most dangerous Nazi invasion of Britain had already begun. The germs of the deadly epidemic which has destroyed liberty on the continent of Europe have already crossed the English Channel and threatened to spread their plague through this Democratic country. Unless the contagion is checked in time our free institutions will be prostrated by its ravages.

PROPOSALS DEADLY

A series of proposals, for which Sir John Anderson, the Home Secretary, is responsible, would place powers in the hands of the executive which would make us as completely subservient to the executive as Germany, Italy and unoccupied France are at the present moment.

Special courts are to be set up which will have the power of life or death over the inhabitants of the realm. Long terms of imprisonment and the death penalty itself can be inflicted by these courts without the intervention of a Jury. It is thus enacted that, by Ministerial decree issued in a panic, the Magna Charta, the Habaeus Corpus Act and the time honored bulwarks of the lives and liberties of every subject, however humble he may be, can be suspended.

FREEDOM IMPERILED

It is not contended that there have arisen any conditions of anarchy, lawlessness and rebellion which would justify these revolutionary changes. Still there have been already indications that a project was in contemplation for interfering with the legitimate criticism of the executive by the press. Even the right of Parliament to voice the sentiments of the people who returned them to Westminster to urge redress for their grievances and to check maladministration on and inaptitude is being imperiled by the constant suppression of public debate.

The system of irregular spying by irresponsible persons upon the very words used in private conversation, is becoming as established an institution as the transactions of the Gestapo in Germany. The obvious practices of Titus Oates are to be revived in every town and village.

NO JUSTIFICATION

There is nothing in the attitude of the public, in the action of the press or in the proceedings of any recognizable group of persons in this land, which justifies this policy of suppression, espionage and persecution. In the Great War there were powerful and well organized sections of opinion in this country that agitated for peace and even created difficulties in the prosecution of the war. There were no prosecutions for the expression of pacifist opinion. Ramsay MacDonald, Philip Snowden, and George Lansbury were never subjected to any police interference when they advocated peace in public.

There is no symptom today in any quarter of the kingdom of the appearance of any obstruction of the tasks of the executive in the conduct of the war. There is no movement comparable to the shop steward organizations that interfere so viciously in the last war with the output of munitions. There are no great meetings, such as there were in 1917 and 1918, demanding an immediate peace.

RANKS CONSOLIDATED

The mere threat of invasion has consolidated all ranks into a unity of purpose such as has never been seen in any previous war. All these decrees and intrigues by fussy, impatient ministers for putting us into byves and shackles if we dare utter a single word which is inconsistent with those which are put in our mouths by our rulers, are entirely unjustifiable. There is nothing which is more likely to effect a permanent injury upon the morale of the nation than the introduction of these totalitarian methods into the government of a country which proudly boasts it is the freest on earth.

I have only just returned from a tour of that part of the country with which I am associated. I found there all classes and parties united with the Government in the determination to do all in their power—in fact everything they were asked to do—to assist in repelling any invader in his attempt to land on our shores.

DO THEIR BEST

Workmen in their factories laboring with energy and zeal to assist in increasing the output of our means of defense. Farmers carrying out without grudge or grouse all the exceptional obligations which the Ministry of Agriculture have imposed upon them, with the view to increasing the production of food from our own soil. They often do what they are told with inadequate means at their disposal—but they do it.

The local defense volunteers are coming forward in numbers which exceed the demand and far beyond our immediate powers for equipment and training. They are ready and eager to risk their lives in the defense of their native land. There is no group sulking or holding aloof from these activities.

CRITICISM PLENTIFUL

It would be idle to pretend there is no criticism of the Government. There is a good deal of criticism about the organization of our local defense.

And of course there is a great deal to be said about the lack of adequate equipment.

But surely all these are legitimate criticisms on the part of a people who are still prepared to do their best with all the weapons at their command at the risk of their lives.

All these threats of punishment and persecution are therefore an insult to this patriotic people.

The British Government has an overwhelming majority in the House of Commons. Let them not use their Parliamentary strength to invent and impose measures which will weaken the fighting spirit of the nation and create that doubt, which was so fatal in France, as to the sincerity of that inspiring appeal to do and dare once more for the cause of human freedom.

Lloyd George Warns People of Blitzkrieg; Confident of Victory

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, Aug. 7—When the anticipated German "blitzkrieg" against the British Isles comes, it will bring a "tempest such as Britain never before has encountered," but the British nation in their determination to fight aggression should emerge victorious, Lloyd George, Premier during the last World War, told the Welsh people tonight.

Broadcasting to his own people in a voice vibrant with feeling, the fighting Welsh statesman emphasized Great Britain's confidence and will to win. "We shall emerge more powerful than ever," he declared, adding that every day that the Nazi campaign is delayed British chances are rising.

Great Britain's fighting forces are ready for the Nazis' approaching attempt to conquer the isles by invasion. "We will fight for every inch of ground and drive the invaders back into the sea," he asserted, concluding, "we shall come out of the rage and tempest as winner."

Burma Road Closure Said No Hindrance

Domei Tsushin

MOSCOW, Aug. 7—Minimizing the effects of the British closure of the Burma route, Chinese officials claim that imports are still continuing to flow into Chungking, the Tass news agency reported from interior China today.

Chungking officials also declare, Tass said, that even if the Burma frontier is closed, Chinese imports of vital war supplies will continue because the temporary prohibition has helped to liquidate large Chinese stocks awaiting transportation to China.

Contrary to foreign allegations, the "good condition" of the Burma road makes goods transportation possible even during the rainy season, Chinese officials claim.

TALKS EXPECTED SOON

Domei Tsushin

BUCHAREST, Aug. 7—Formal negotiations between Rumania and Hungary over the disposition of the Transylvania minorities problem are expected to get underway at Budapest today with the departure of Raoul Bossy, the Rumanian Minister to Rome, on a special mission to Hungary on behalf of the King Carol Government.

Final instructions were given Minister Bossy last night by Foreign Minister Michael Manoilescu, who received the envoy at length immediately after his arrival here from the Italian capital by plane.

Despite open Hungarian predictions of a delayed settlement, the Rumanian press voiced optimism regarding the fate of the parleys. Local journals said that Mr. Bossy has been given wide powers to eliminate all pending questions between the two Governments.

At the same time, Foreign Minister Manoilescu received the Rumanian envoy to Belgrade, Victor Cadere, who has returned to Bucharest following conferences with Bulgarian officials at Sofia on the Dobrudja territorial transfer.

With the preliminary negotiations between Rumania and Bulgaria completed, rumors are current that final, fulldress parleys will begin at Craiova, southwestern Rumania, this week. The basis for the negotiations was laid down by Mr. Cadere at Sofia yesterday.

Turtles powerful enough to carry four men, have been nightly laying eggs along the shore in the Umbe district, Tokushima Prefecture, Shikoku. Their appearance is interpreted by local fishermen as indicative of large catches this year.

Badger Business Good

Badger raising has become popular the past few years in Toha district, Toyama Prefecture, where there are now 768 badgers of varied sizes. A pair of badgers sell at ¥200 and a baby pair at ¥100. The furs are exported or used for winter clothing for Japanese soldiers.

Strange Patient

A farmer in Tottori Prefecture is under treatment at the Osaka University Hospital for numbness of the legs, suffered when struck June 26 by a thunderbolt, while working on the field. The bolt burned his left hand, and stunned him. When the man regained consciousness he found himself extremely weak in his lower limbs. Neurological experts of the hospital are examining this unprecedented case carefully.

Canada Won't Take Part In Pan-American Conference

Domei Tsushin

OTTAWA, Aug. 7—Prime Minister William Mackenzie King, addressing the Canadian Parliament, today asserted that it would now be inopportune to discuss proposals that Canada join the Pan-American Union and sign a mutual defense treaty with the United States, because any such attempts would be construed as a sign of weakness and disintegration of the British Empire.

Cripps Sees Molotov On Trade Reopening

Domei Tsushin

MOSCOW, Aug. 7—Another British effort to break the somnolent Anglo-Soviet trade negotiations initiated late last year was reportedly made today by Sir Stafford Cripps, the British Ambassador to the Soviet Union, during a lengthy conference with Premier and Foreign Commissar Viacheslav M. Molotov.

Their meeting was the first in three weeks and was believed by well-informed quarters to reflect British anxiety over the recent speech of Mr. Molotov in which he expressed the Kremlin's dissatisfaction with the trend of Soviet-British relations.

Sir Stafford, it was revealed today, held a long conversation last night with the Foreign Trade Commissar Anastas Mikiyan, presumably regarding the subject of reopening formally all trade connections.

AUTHORIZATION SEEN FOR GUAM FORTIFICATIONS

U.S. Congressman Says Full Support Promised For Strategic Defenses

By OTTO JANSSEN
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4—Melvin J. Maas, Republican Representative of Minnesota, revealed yesterday that the Chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee, Carl Vinson, has promised full support to the complete fortification of Guam Island, at an estimated cost of between $80,000,000 and $250,000,000.

In an exclusive interview with the United Press, Mr. Maas, who is a member of the Naval Affairs Committee, disclosed that the committee last week rejected the Guam fortification proposal, but Mr. Vinson assured him he would support it next January.

HAVE SOME FUNDS

Several days ago the House of Representatives voted several hundred thousands of dollars for noncombatant improvements on Guam, but did not provide any funds for the strategic island's defenses.

"I am confident Congress is ready to fortify the island," Mr. Maas said. "As a matter of fact, I am convinced if the proposal was considered next Monday, Congress would provide funds. I believe the fortification of Guam is most essential for the defense of the United States and her possessions."

Mr. Maas also contended that the defense of the Philippines would be impossible unless Guam were fortified. He said it would take $250,000,000 to convert the island into a full naval base.

POLICY CHANGE BLAMED

Japan's recent re-orientation in foreign and domestic policy and also the rapid development of world events is largely responsible for the current change in Congressional attitude toward strengthening United States island defenses, Mr. Maas said. Previous proposals for the fortification of Guam have been rejected by Congress mainly to avoid offending Japan, he declared. The Japanese have clearly indicated their opposition to the fortification of the island because of its nearness to Japan.

Other Congressional officials have reported an increasing sentiment in Washington in favor of the fortification of Guam, including the California Democratic Representative, Ed. V. Izac, who said recently he understood the move for the fortification of Guam had gained favor in Washington.

IZAC FAVORS MOVE

United Press

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2—Japan's latest pronouncements on foreign policy probably will increase United States Congressional sentiment in favor of the fortification of Guam Island, Ed V. Izac, Democratic Representative of California, told the United Press last night.

Mr. Izac, a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said he believed the reorientation of Japan's foreign and domestic policies had convinced the United States Congress and the American people of the "futility of appeasement toward the Japanese."

STRONGER ATTITUDE SEEN

Congress hereafter will take a stronger attitude toward Japan, he said. Already there is a move in Congress to strengthen the defenses of Guam Island this autumn or early next year, Mr. Izac recalled.

Tokyo's latest announcements concerning Japan's vision of a "greater East Asia" under Japanese domination, Mr. Izac said, will induce Congress to approve the necessary appropriations for the fortification of Guam.

"Every time there is trouble in Europe," Mr. Izac said, "Japan starts movements in the Orient. Japan thinks that if the British Fleet falls, we will be forced to withdraw from the Pacific. However, I do not believe we are planning on taking any such action, at least not for the present."

ROOSEVELT BLAMED

Hamilton Fish, Republican Representative of New York, said he believed that the Roosevelt Administration's "interference in the Far East is an important factor in the present Japanese changes."

"I have been convinced for a long time," he said, "that if the Administration continued to meddle in the Asiatic situation, and denounce the Japanese on every occasion, it would only result in driving Tokyo closer to Germany and Italy, and even Russia. The present situation in the Orient is to be regretted, but we are at least partly to blame."

Guam Island Population Increases

Domei Tsushin

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3—The population of Guam is now 22,290, which is an increase of over 20 per cent, compared with 18,509 in the census of 1930, the Census Bureau announced here yesterday.

Details of the population increase were not given, except that naval personnel on the island has increased by 213 persons.

De Gaulle Adopts Emblem for Fight

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, Aug. 7—The Red Cross of Lorraine, which was the emblem carried by Joan of Arc, has been adopted by General Charles de Gaulle, head of the French National Committee here, as the emblem for his forces, in addition to the French flag.

Vice-Admiral Emile Muselier, who commands the free French Navy and Air Force, has ordered warships under his command to fly the Tricolor at the stern and the bow.

French aircraft, in addition to the French markings, will have a blue ring containing the Cross of Lorraine.

One reason why this cross has been selected is that the Germans are making strong efforts to Germanize Lorraine.

Indian Viceroy Calls Economic Conference

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, Aug. 7—The Indian Viceroy, Lord Linlithgow, has decided to summon countries of the British Empire east of the Suez to a special economic conference at New Delhi sometime in October for the purpose of bolstering Britain's war efforts, it was reliably learned today.

The immediate purpose of the conference reportedly will be to organize much-needed assistance to hard-pressed British troops in the Near East and Africa. Further efforts, moreover, are expected to be made to prepare the way for developments after the war, as well as for cementing the economic unity of the Empire.

Countries which will take part in the discussions, it is understood, will include Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, India, East Africa, the Straits Settlements and other minor colonies.

CORRESPONDENT DESCRIBES DULL LIFE AT VICHY

Water Succeeds Paris Wine; Jews Said Being Beaten, Shop Windows Are Smashed

D.N.B.

VICHY, Aug. 5—A vivid description of present life in Vichy, the actual seat of the government, is given by a correspondent, as follows:

"The wives of Parliamentarians, who in view of the daily attacks by the press, have after this political cure adapted themselves to the typical Vichy cure, are still the attraction of the writers of the Parliamentarian journalists and of the diplomatic attaches. Since their husbands are no longer allowed to speak in the Hotel Bourbon, since the bureau of chambers is no longer sitting and since even the smallest casino has become a desolated place, because there are no resolutions to be passed any longer, these women are doing the talking. Many a weighty expression may be heard in the drawing rooms about the political past of some well-known Parliamentarians and until recently Madam Paul Boncour proved to her visitors there existed no difference of opinion between her husband and that of Marshal Petain. Madam Ybarnegarey being reminded of some sharp words of her husband addressed toward Germany coldbloodedly replied to such accusations that politics, too, were a sort of propaganda.

"Since as much Vichy water is being taken in Vichy as wine was drank in Paris formerly, the main subject of the conversations is now whether it will soon be possible to return to Paris or not. The ministerial offices are not polite to Parliamentarians. They never have a reply to their inquiries and if one government official went to Paris without the knowledge of the society, a whole afternoon will be filled with angry words, because the official might have done this or the other thing for them while in Paris. Now, that neither the Parliamentarians nor their wives have any decisive word to say any more in politics, every measure of the government is being criticized during long talks in the drawing rooms.

BRING NEW IDEAS

"Occasionally a diplomatic or 'Parliamentarian' correspondent of one of the formerly big Parisian papers come over from Clermont Ferrand bringing some 'new ideas.' Henri Bidou, reporter in chief of the 'Paris Soir,' talks of himself as being the best military correspondent of the world. In the drawing room of Madam Bergery in the Hotel Britannique, where he likes to go, Bidou presents to his incredulous audience the German tactics of the imminent attack on England.

"Now, after he had said 'no' to the crisis in Austria as he had said 'no' in the course of the Sudeten German affair, after he had called to the arms, when Germany had started the Polish campaign, after he had addressed in numerous articles the Italians putting emphasis to Daladier's 'no, no, never' in the latter's speech in Tunis, he now makes himself center of a circle, who has nothing else to do than to wonder, why Germany in view of those incredible successes does not receive the order of the Fuehrer to attack England.

SEE SAME FACES

"It certainly has not been difficult to create this drawing room atmosphere in Vichy, because the world in this room knows each other only too well. One does not see new faces nor does one hear new ideas. You can see the bent figure of the director of the 'Action Francaise' strolling around on the avenues of Vichy and trying to explain to a Boy Scout that the new ideas in fact were only the same as the old ones, that he should not read Marcel Deat's article in the 'Oeuvre' but the 'Action Francaise' and that all would be well again if the French politics remained French politics and would not be made by Jews or by these men, who believe that they must think as Europeans' although it would be better to make known France's demands in view of this new Europe. Charles Maurrat, Charles Maurice, Henri Bidou, Colonel de la Rocque, General Duval, who for ten months prophesied to his readers in the paper 'Journal des Bebats' the victory of France and who now tries to prove that one should have read between the lines of his articles that he in reality announced in advance the catastrophe of France, Fernand Laurent Lucien Romier, Sainbrice,—they all now want to prove in their newspapers that the new France was the France they were fighting for. They only abandon their own old ideas as far as this is necessary. They are shouting for the culprits of the French catastrophe and they are only too glad that some French journalists have fled abroad. These are to be held responsible in order to make forget those Frenchmen, who are no less guilty but who are still writing in the French press.

"In Bordeaux Jewish butchers are being beaten up. Jewish department stores and in Marseilles Jewish antique shops are being smashed. In Grenoble Jewish shops are being earmarked. The French people are in a state of revolt, its Parliamentarians are taking the waters of Vichy, while old Marshal Petain dictates decrees, which are to be the foundations of the new France."

Will Go to Fight Over Colonies in West, Thinks Fascist Scribe

United Press

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1—Germany may already have "made some arrangement with the Petain Government regarding the disposition of French Western Hemisphere possessions," Senator Alexander Wiley, Republican of Wisconsin, asserted here yesterday.

Referring to the Act of Havana forming a Pan-American trusteeship over European possessions in the Western Hemisphere, Senator Wiley said, "We could have made such a declaration if we were prepared to enforce it, but we do not yet possess the planes or men to wave a big stick."

It was recalled, the Acting Secretary of State, Sumner Welles, at a press conference last Tuesday admitted that if France should become a Fascist dependent of Germany a situation might be created such as the Act of Havana foresaw.

At that time, however, Mr. Welles declined to comment on the present status of the Petain regime in France. His reply indicated the delicacy of the problems faced by the Western Hemisphere in determining the sovereignty of European possessions in America.

U.S. WILL FIGHT

United Press

ROME, July 31—The United States is ready to go to war if any European Power should take action against French and Dutch possessions in the Western Hemisphere, according to Amerigo Ruggiero, the New York correspondent of the Turin newspaper, La Stampa.

Mr. Ruggiro said both President Roosevelt and the Republican Presidential candidate, Wendell Willkie, have similar intentions regarding the European conflict, intervention and Europe in general.

Neither Roosevelt or Willkie favor intervention in the European war, the correspondent said. But they are ready to move if the Dutch French possessions in America should be endangered by any other powers, he claimed.

Large Bonito Catches

Catches of bonito totaling ¥546,562 have been landed at Choshi port, Chiba Prefecture, since the opening of the bonito fishing season in May. The unprecedentedly large catches are enlivening the local fishermen. It has been said in the locality from old days that bonito catches increase when there is a war going on.

Women's Luxury Discouraged

A considerable number of women with permanent-waved hair or in luxurious dress were advised to observe sobriety in their clothes and toilet recently when the Kobe gendarmerie branch inspected the passers-by on Kobe's thoroughfares to see to what extent the anti-luxury regulations were observed.

Albino Badgers

An albino badger gave birth to a white badger in the Osaka municipal zoo recently. An albino badger occurs in every 100,000 and it had been believed that it was barren.

Riceless Day

The town of Nikko observed their first weekly riceless day last Monday, no rice having been served at all its restaurants the whole day. All the townsfolk will refrain from eating rice on riceless days in the near future.

Ancient Masterpiece

An ancient painting depicting peony flowers and paulownia leaves which adorns the ceiling of a room in the Ganseiji Temple in Kitakoma district, Yamanashi Prefecture, is recently believed by experts to have been executed by Eitoku Kano, a great painter of the 16th century.

Spain Owes Italy, Germany Big Debts

Domei Tsushin

MADRID, Aug. 5—The Nationalist Government of Spain owes the Italian Government 5,000,000,000 lire ($250,000,000) and a heavy but unspecified debt to Germany for aid extended to Generalissimo Francisco Franco's armies during the three-year Spanish civil war, it was officially announced last night.

Part of the principal owed to Germany was repaid by the export of Spanish products while the Spanish civil war was still on.

Payment of the debt to Italy will take 25 years under the provisions of an Italo-Spanish agreement signed yesterday.

In addition to these debts, the Spanish Government also owes almost $2,000,000 in other loans and credits obtained in the early days of the Spanish civil war.

FELLER PICKS YANKS AS HIS 18TH VICTIM

Puts Cleveland Within Half Game of League Leading Club; Cincinnati Holds National Lead

United Press

NEW YORK, Aug. 5—Blazing Bob Feller picked the world champion New York Yankees for his eighteenth victim of the season in a thrilling 3 to 1 victory, which advanced the Cleveland Indians to within half a game of the Detroit Tigers in the dizzy American League race. The Tigers lost a full lap when the ancient Lefty Grove scored a 7 to 3 win over them for the third place Boston Red Sox.

Incidentally it was "Old Mose's" eighth victory in the current campaign and his 292nd lifetime mark. He has been in the pitching trade since 1920 and in the majors since 1925. Lefty Grove was aided by his old time pal Jimmy Foxx who connected for his 24th homer of the season in the second inning.

Big Hank Greenberg, remodelled Detroit outfielder, tried in vain to put the league leaders in the running by smacking his 21st circuit smash of the season.

SENATORS' WIN

At Chicago, the Washington Senators spanked the fourth place White Sox in both ends of a double header, 4 to 3, and 1 to 0. The Chicago lads tied up the count at three-all in the eighth inning of the opener when Taft Wright connected for a homer but the determined Senators pulled the game out of the fire in the tenth inning when Joe Louis, Washington infielder, banged a double which drove the winning tally across the platter.

The nightcap was a thrilling mound duel with Ken Chase finally emerging victorious as he held the Dykes' boys to three hits and no runs. Jake Early drove in the only run of the game with a triple in the third inning.

The St. Louis Browns kicked Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics deeper down the cellar by taking both ends of a bargain bill at St. Louis, 5 to 4 and 6 to 4.

Vern Kennedy won his ninth win in the opener aided by homers propelled by Joe Bernardino, Clift Harlond and Don Heffner. Three runs in the fifth and two in the seventh clinched the nightcap for the Browns.

The National League situation remained virtually unchanged as both the leading Cincinnati Reds and the second place Brooklyn Dodgers divided their respective double headers. The Reds dropped the opener at Boston, 5-3, when Max West, slugging outfielder, propelled a three bagger with two men aboard to break a three to three tie. The Reds came back strong in the nightcap, trimming the cellarites, 12-9, mostly on the strength of Frank McCormick's two doubles and two singles and Bill Werber's tenth homer of the season. Chicago trimmed the Brooklyn Dodgers in the first game at Flatbursh, 11 to 3, with a 21-hit assault which included a homer by catcher Al Todd. The Dodgers snatched the second game in eleven innings, 7 to 6.

DIVIDE TWIN BILL

At the Polo Grounds, the Giants and the St. Louis Cardinals divided their twin bill, The New Yorkers taking the opener, 3-2, but dropping the second, 6 to 3.

Ernie Koy did his best to give the Cardinals a win by getting homers in the second and eighth innings but they were unable to muster further scoring strength.

In the twilight game, Bill McGee held the Giants to nine scattered hits.

The Pittsburgh Pirates took both ends of a double header from the Philadelphia Phillies, 6 to 1, and 6 to 4. The Pirates particularly enjoyed their win in the first game because it ended Philly pitcher Hugh Mulcahy's winning streak at four, while in the nightcap, Charles Frye a dollar US$17,500 rookie, yielded nine hits and five runs in seven innings including a homer by Debs Garms.

Marble Beats Jacobs To Win 4th Eastern Grass Tennis Crown

Domei Tsushin

RYE, New York, Aug. 10—Capturing her fourth Eastern Grass Court tennis championship in the last five years, Miss Alice Marble, outstanding woman net star, today overwhelmed Miss Helen Jacobs in 35 minutes in the final, 6-1, 6-0.

Miss Marble, the only woman player ever to hold three American and three British titles simultaneously, displayed superb form. She repeatedly forced Miss Jacobs out of position and then smashed home killing placements.

M. Ellerton—Officer of the Day.

Laffin's Shamrock was first over the finishing line in the August Cup race of the Yokohama Yacht club on Sunday, with Harden's Vinga second. But neither could beat Abegg's Albis on corrected time. Actually Laffin was slightly more than eight minutes ahead of the fleet, but he is a plus 4 per cent man. Abegg was minus five per cent and thus had an advantage of nearly 13 minutes. Vinga was scratch. The commodore's green boat has shown no talent this season, but a new set of sails in yesterday's contest made some difference.

When handicaps were adjusted Abegg was first, winner of the cup; Laffin second and Harden, third. Sailing was not too bad as far as wind was concerned, with a steady air from the northerly half, but a Scotch mist reduced the status of crews to that of west hens. Mist obscured the outer marks, and there wasn't much fun for the gallery sailors.

The start was jammy, more than one boat getting into M. Vigne's way when he had the rights of things but he made no protest despite loss of distance in paying off. The course was a reach to the Honmoku buoy, a run to Juniten, a beat back to Honmoku, full-and-by to the starting buoy, double around to Honmoku again and home via Juniten. It was noticed by some of the shore crews that more than one boat kept sheets too tightly inboard on the reaches and didn't give the wind a chance to drive. Albis should have had second place on elapsed time but seemed to fall into a pocket just before the finish. The failure of Pestalozzi's Daphne and Woodbridge's Chinook, skippered by Davis, was surprising considering their good start. None of the grownup ladies went out, but they would stoutly deny that the permanent wave prevailed over the restless wave with wet in it.

Russians Arrested in London

United Press

LONDON, Aug. 6—Rear Admiral Nicholas Wolkoff, 70-year-old former Russian naval attache in London, and his 40-year-old daughter, Miss Anna Wolkoff, were interned here yesterday under the defense regulations.

Admiral Wolkoff, one of the best known members of the Russian colony in London, arrived in England in 1913, when he was Rear Admiral in the Imperial Russian Navy. At that time he was appointed naval attache to the Russian legation here.

ROME THINKS JAPAN VEERING TOWARD AXIS

Anglo-Japanese Tension May Lead to Rupture Of Relations with London

By REYNOLDS PACKARD

United Press

ROME, Aug. 5—Recent Anglo-Japanese incidents were generally regarded here last night in political circles as likely to have grave repercussions on future relations between Britain and Japan, probably bringing Japan closer to the Rome-Berlin Axis.

Japan may even taken advantage of the incidents to break off diplomatic relations with Britain, usually well-informed Italian quarters said last night.

Italian quarters also feel that London has lost all hope of patching up her relations with Japan in the Far East where the British have such vital Empire interests as Singapore and Hongkong.

The majority of Italian observers here foresee a definite stiffening in Japan's attitude toward Britain and a still more friendly Japanese attitude toward the Rome-Berlin Axis.

Observers recalled reports that the Totalitarian Powers, Germany, Russia, Italy and Japan, are agreeing to quadrilateral economic cooperation in the hope of crushing Britain economically. Recent Anglo-Japanese incidents, Italian quarters said, will contribute to bringing Japan into such a scheme in which Russia might replace Britain as a consumer of Japanese manufactured goods.

The Japanese, it was also suggested, might make an effort to improve Russo-Japanese relations in the Far East on the basis of a mutual anti-British policy which would fit in with the stand of the Rome-Berlin Axis.

Tokyo dispatches published in Rome newspapers, including the influential "Popolo d'Italia," hinted yesterday that Japan may take definite reprisals for the arrest of nine Japanese nationals by the British Government.

Such reprisals, these reports said, might include a naval land blockade of Hongkong, isolating this British Crown Colony completely.

Reports also were current here that the arrest incidents might supply Japan with the necessary excuse for taking strong action against British commercial interests in China.

Some quarters feel the incidents may even be a prelude to Japan's breaking off diplomatic relations with Britain in order that Tokyo might have greater liberty in handling Anglo-Japanese problems in the Far East through "direct methods."

Italian observers, including Sig. Virginio Gayda, mouthpiece of Premier Mussolini, see these incidents resulting in still further isolation of Britain from the rest of the world and the Italian press in general yesterday referred sarcastically to Britain's "splendid isolationism."

"The British Government," the 'Popolo di Roma' said, "is taking revenge against Japan by ordering the arrest of eminent Japanese subjects. Undoubtedly the British Government has only one objective—that of having all the world against England.

"Didn't her priceless Minister of Information, Alfred Duff-Cooper, say that Britain never fought so well as when fighting alone? We are sure that England will attain blissful solitude, but we are not equally sure that Britain will like it so much."

QUICK VICTORY SAID ABANDONED

J.W.T. Mason Predicts Long War As Italians Prepare for Slow Action

By J. W. T. MASON

United Press

NEW YORK, Aug. 6—Further indications that the Totalitarian Powers have abandoned the expectation of a quick blitzkrieg victory this summer was contained in reports from Rome yesterday that Italy is preparing for a long term war.

Italian commentators said that Italy intends to invade Palestine next year. They also asserted that major Italian military operations in Africa will not begin until cooler weather. Premier Benito Mussolini, in this way appears to be preparing the Italian people for the continuation of unimportant, minor activities, instead of the combined German-Italian putch which had been promised to annihilate Britain before the first anniversary of the European war's start.

There have also been reports from Berlin regarding the perplexity among the German people at the apparent condition of stalemate into which the war is drifting.

The Totalitarian leaders are thus gradually being worked up to face the questioning attitude among their followers as the war approaches the commencement of its second year. This fact makes possible a desperate attempt by Chancellor Adolf Hitler to invade the British Isles before September when rough weather increases the difficulties of carrying an army across the Channel and the North Sea.

All the rules of military strategy are against the success of an invasion now that the British people have had time to prepare for it.

But Herr Hitler's trust in his stars has been absolute since his successful invasion of the Rhineland against German military advice when he first came to power.

Brewers Turn Fishermen

Sake brewers of Kanto and Kinosaki villages in Fukui Prefecture, rendered jobless recently due to limitation of sake output, have decided to make a living by turning fishermen in Ibaraki Prefecture. About 180 former brewers will depart shortly for Ibaraki, where they will fish sardines with nets.

5TH COLUMN ACTIVITIES IN HAWAII ALLEGED

Delegate from Islands, Sam King, Denies Charges By Representative Schulte

By JULIUS EDELSTEIN

United Press

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6—Democratic Representative Karl Schulte announced last night that he had received evidence from Hawaii "concerning the existence of active Fifth Column elements there."

He said he would present his data to the House of Representatives when he has it fully assembled. The Congressman clearly specified that the Fifth Column elements he referred to were Japanese.

HAS MANY LETTERS

He said he had received numerous letters from Hawaiian residents and officials substantiating charges he had made previously regarding the existence of a Fifth Column in Hawaii. He said the Fifth Column involved a large number of residents of Hawaii who had served in the Japanese Army.

Mr. Schulte disclosed that he had advised the Hawaiian delegate to Washington, Sam King, that he would soon address the House on the Hawaii Fifth Column question. He said he had challenged the Hawaii delegate to disprove his charges.

"I am very glad to give the delegate from Hawaii every chance to show me that my information is wrong," he said. "I want to get to the bottom of this situation. There is a considerable element in Hawaii engaged in various activities absolutely detrimental to the best interests and welfare of the United States.

"Unimpeachable sources have disclosed to me the existence of a considerable number of Fifth Columnists there. Unquestionably they are associated with a foreign power, and owe allegiance to that power.

HATE U.S. SYSTEM

"I have proof that they hate the American system. They hold frequent meetings to intensify and spread that hate. Good American citizens are not permitted to attend such meetings."

Mr. King, the delegate from Hawaii, told the press later that he had not been informed of the exact nature of Mr. Schulte's charges, but that he was convinced there was no basis for them.

He pointed out the recent announcement of the Works Progress Administration that no W.P.A. workers in Hawaii had refused to sign statements that they were not members of Communist, Nazi or other subversive organizations. He recalled that a large number of such refusals were made in most states.

"There are no subversive activities going on in Hawaii," he said.

TIGERS REGAIN LEAGUE LEAD FROM INDIANS

Cleveland Divides Double Header; Hudson Pitches One Hit Game for Senators

United Press

NEW YORK, Aug. 6—Detroit continued its hide and seek with Cleveland today in the most hectic American League race in many years. The Tigers are back on top of the heap, knocking the Indians out of the lead after a reign of 24 hours. The Tigers captured a night offering at St. Louis, trimming the Browns, 6 to 2, while the best the Indians could do was divide a double-header with the fourth place Chicago White Sox.

Lanky Thornton Lee, veteran Chicago pitcher, subjected the Indians to a miserable afternoon in the opener, permitting no enemy to kiss the initial bag in six innings. He allowed only three and should have had an easy shutout except that one of these hits was a single by Lou Boudreau which followed a base on balls. The final count was 5 to 1. Lee made two hits himself.

INDIANS WIN

In the nightcap, the Indians bounced back on the Dykesmen, pulling a close 3 to 2 game out of the fire. Cleveland's ten-hit attack was paced by pitcher Johnny Allen, Boudreau and Roy Weatherly who collected two safeties each.

The day's pitching gem was performed at Washington by young Sidney Hudson who turned in his second one-hitter in his first year in the majors to blank the Philadelphia Athletics, 11 to 1. On top of it, Sidney helped his own cause by banging a triple which he did not have to do since his mates were hot at bat. Included in Washington's thirteen-hit barrage were homers each by Gee Walker and Jimmy Bloodworth and a triple by George Case.

Joe Cronin's gold-plated Boston Red Sox resorted to extra base hits at Boston in subduing the champion New York Yankees, 8 to 3. The Sox collected fourteen hits, half of them two base smashes. Joe Dimaggio tried to show his mates how to snap out of their slump by walloping his 27th homer of the season but the Broadway crew simply would not catch on.

GROUNDS TOO WET

Second division National League teams had the day to themselves when wet grounds brought about postponement of the Chicago-Cincinnati workout and the Brooklyn Dodgers and New York Giants were idle.

The seventh place Boston Bees trimmed the Philadelphia Phillies, cellar occupants, in a double header winning the first game, 3 to 0, and the second, 12 to 2.

Ed Miller was the big gun in the opener, getting a home run in the second inning with one man aboard to give the Bees two of their three runs.

Manuel Salvo went the full route for Boston, holding the Phillies to four hits and white-washing them on the scoring end.

A five-run spree in the seventh inning sent Kirby Higbe, Phillie Pitcher, to the showers in the seventh inning, giving the Bees a lead which they carried on through the rest of the game. Miller added another home run to his tally in the ninth inning to lead the fifteen-hit Bee attack. Joe Sullivan pitched a seven hit ball for Boston.

The Pittsburgh Pirates moved into a tie with the St. Louis Cardinals for fifth place today by blasting out a 3 to 1 decision over the Cards. Elburt Fletcher broke the deadlock in the sixth inning, crossing the home plate on an error by Don Gutteridge, Cardinal first baseman Kenny Heintzelman gave up nine hits to the Cardinals but kept them well scattered, while the Pirates collected seven hits off Morty Cooper.

The nightcap was called in the third inning because of darkness.

EDGE OUT DETROIT

United Press

NEW YORK, Aug. 5—Lou Boudreau paced the Cleveland Indians into first place in the American League race today by clouting out three hits and driving in two runs to lead the Tribe to a 10-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

In games won and lost the Indians are tied with the Tigers, but the percentage tables give the Tribe a two-point edge.

The Boston Red Sox, meanwhile, assumed undisputed possession of third place in the standings by defeating the New York Yankees, 4-1, when Jimmy Foxx blasted out his 25th homer of the season in the fifth with one aboard to clinch the game.

Playing a double header with the St. Louis Browns, the Detroit Tigers divided honors with the Brownies by winning the first game, 9-2, and dropping an abbreviated five inning nightcap, 4-0.

Rudy York and Dick Bartell paced the attack in the first game with home runs, while Judnich's homer with one aboard in the third won the nightcap for the Browns.

Washington and Philadelphia were not scheduled.

BRITISH FASCISTS IN JAIL HAPPY

Sir Oswald Mosley Said Holding Champagne And Bridge Parties Daily

By WALLACE CARROLL

United Press

LONDON, Aug. 5—The British Government faces embarrassing questions in the House of Commons this week following the disclosure last night that special liberties have been afforded to hundreds of Fascist prisoners in Brixton and Halloway prisons.

Sir Oswald Mosley, British Fascist leader, and his followers, who were arrested soon after the outbreak of war, are alleged to be holding frequent bridge and champagne parties in the two prisons. They greet each other with the Fascist salute without interference by prison authorities.

One British report said that Lady Mosley is permitted to don her bathing suit every day and have a sun bath on the prison lawn.

Sir Oswald and his followers, according to a "Sunday Pictorial" report, utilize part of their time in prison planning to convert Britain into a Fascist state.

The Fascist prisoners, many of whom are quite wealthy, are permitted to draw upon their private funds to provide themselves with special foods and wines and regularly order silk shirts and silk underclothes from merchants who call on them at the prisons, the paper alleged.

Sir Oswald, the paper said, spend £4 weekly on special meals. He still takes great pride in his personal appearance and spends great sums on expensive clothing, the paper reported.

Another report said Sir Oswald was holding himself "rather aloof" from the other imprisoned Fascists and from prison guards because he regards himself as the British "Fuehrer."

Sir Oswald and 300 other Fascists were interned in Brixton shortly after the outbreak of the European War. His wife and other women Fascists were detained at Halloway.

One report said Lady Mosley and other Fascist women housed at Halloway were frequently visited by wealthy Mayfair friends who drove up to the prison in sleek limousines with hampers filled with table delicacies.

Lady Mosley, the report added, retains an account at a West End department store which regularly delivers goods for her at the prison.

Prison authorities were quoted by the British press as having said that other prisoners, most of them without private funds, must be content with the ordinary prison food. They said these prisoners resent the intrusion of the wealthy socialities of the Fascist group.

U.S. ATTITUDE TOWARD BRITAIN HIT BY ROME

Cardinal Hinsley Praises Roosevelt's Declaration On European Conflict

By ELEANOR PACKARD

United Press

ROME, Aug. 5—The Italian Ministry of War today accused the United States of attempting to "divide up the skin of the British Lion....before the body is dead."

The War Ministry's official organ, "Le Forze Armate," said the United States organized the Havana Conference of the 21 American Republics last month for the purpose of gaining control over Britain's territorial possessions in the Western Hemisphere.

"England received a bitter surprise from the United States," the official organ said. "Lord Lothian, especially following his statement that England is America's Maginot Line, counted on aid from the Anglophiles in the Americas. He never expected to see Britain regarded as a dying person by responsible overseas governments which even took up the division of their inheritance before the death.

"This is in fact what happened at the Havana Conference where the best way of dividing up the skin of the British Lion was discussed in advance. This discussion of the fate of European possessions in the Western Hemisphere was very significant inasmuch as the United States organized the conference for the purpose of warning the Totalitarian Powers and to establish a barrier against the victories of Fascism and Nazism.

"But there was also a secret goal of United States Imperialism aimed at placing British and French possessions in the New World under the collective mandate of the American nations. This was designed as a springboard to the attainment of complete domination over these possessions in the future.

"As a matter of fact, it has already been foreseen that the United States intends to occupy the West Indies—even with force if necessary."

SPEAKS TO U.S.

United Press

LONDON, Aug. 5—Cardinal Hinsley, Archbishop of Westminster, told the United States by radio last night that the British people were prepared to live or die together "regardless of what may assail us."

He praised President Roosevelt for his declarations on the European War and ridiculed those writers who have criticized Britain for her policies in past years.

"Without in any way intruding into politics," he said over the National Broadcasting Company network, "I may be allowed to express my admiration for the pronouncements of President Roosevelt who has shown himself to be a fearless, Christian statesman worthily discharging his duties as the head of a great North American commonwealth.

"Now I want to say a word in defense of my country. I believe in patriotism. My faith teaches me that patriotism is part of virtue and part of charity. For charity requires that we love all men in God, according to our kinship with them.

"I can tell you quite decidedly that in this island we are all united in our determination to live or die together, regardless of what may assail us.

"Some writers dwell on the iniquities of England in ages past, on her aggressions and on the conquests. It is quite right—England is not immaculate. Neither are all those who malign her. But worthy or unworthy, Britain is on the side of Truth."

Ancient Relics

A large blue-colored tile, more than 1,000 years old, and many more than 400 years old architectural implements and documents were recently unearthed in the Gokokuji Temple, Kyoto Prefecture, an ancient Buddhist institution. The tile is believed to have been used when the temple was constructed in the Heian period more than 1,000 years ago. The other finds are traced back to when the temple was rebuilt after a fire.

Mangoes for Japan

People in Japan will soon be able to taste mangoes raised in Formosa, since the authorities there have permitted shipment of mangoes to Japan Proper. Fruit-raisers at Nisui, Formosa, have been raising mango plants, imported from the South Seas, on an experimental basis for about 10 years.

Lame Heroes Climb Alps

Thirty-six wounded soldiers in Aichi Prefecture, all crippled in the China Affair, will climb peaks of the North Japan Alps this summer, leaving Nagoya August 16.

Longshorewomen

More than 200 women are working at Hosojima harbor, Miyazaki Prefecture, Kyushu, as longshoremen because of shortage of manpower. They earn from ¥1.50 to ¥1.80 a day.

To Prevent Suicides

Shimanouchi police in Osaka city have instructed owners of more than four-story buildings in the city to see that would be suicides do not leap from those structures. Windows and roofs from which they are likely to leap are expected to be guarded with wire nets and other devices and a watchman is also required, according to the instructions.

Tea Ceremony Popular

The tea ceremony is becoming popular among white-colared men in Tokyo. Men in European clothes are often seen practicing the art of tea drinking at a back-Ginza tea ceremony teacher's, place which was formerly monopolized by women.

SOVIET PRESS SEES GRIEF FOR BRITISH

India Independence Movement Claimed Nearly Out of Control

Domei Tsushin

MOSCOW, Aug. 11—Its eyes turned to the East, the Soviet press today discussed at length developments in China and India. While the Izvestia prominently reported the withdrawal of British garrisons from China, the Pravda, the official Communist organ, discussed Great Britain's troubles over India.

The situation is most alarming for Britain, the Pravda said. It is now difficult for the British to reach a compromise with even the most moderate Indian political circles, it asserted.

Even Mahatma Mohandas K. Gandhi, the paper declared, "who is practically a British agent," is unable to stem the current of the Indian independence movement. Despite national antagonism between the Moslems and the Hindus, which is the weakest point of the liberation movement and carefully instigated by Britain, the request for immediate independence becomes louder and louder, the Pravda said.

Subhas Chandra Bose was hailed as the real leader in the struggle for Indian freedom by the Pravda. No mention was made by the paper of another prominent Indian leader, Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru.

AL SMITH SEES END OF DEMOCRATS

1928 Candidate to Support Willkie, Hits New Deal

United Press

NEW YORK, July 31—Alfred E. Smith, 1928 Democratic Presidential candidate, yesterday declared that President Roosevelt's renomination to a third term sounded the "death knell of the Democratic Party."

Mr. Smith said he would support the candidacy of the Republican choice, Wendell Willkie and bitterly denounced the New Deal. The fundamentals laid down by Jefferson have been "torn to ribbons," Mr. Smith charged.

Praising the platform the Democrats adopted in 1932 as "the best ever adopted by any party," Mr. Smith said he supported it "and the nominees because I endorsed it 100 per cent.

"Then the New Dealers came along," he continued. "Within six months after the first inauguration of Roosevelt they had taken over the Democratic Party lock, stock and barrel. In the march away from Jefferson, the Democratic convention of 1940 piled the last straw on the camel's back by the nomination of Roosevelt for a third term."

Soviet-German Talks Slated on Trade With Baltic States

Domei Tsushin

BERLIN, Aug. 10—Soviet Russia and Germany will begin negotiations this month to readjust Germany's commercial relations with the three Baltic States—Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania, arising from the recent Soviet absorption of the Baltic region. Delegates to the forthcoming parleys have already been named. The Germans will be led by Dr. Schnurre, special trade expert.

Observers declared that negotiations will be difficult but predicted that an understanding would be reached. Germany, they added, has many products which the Baltic nations need but which the Soviet Union cannot supply owing to the latter's own deficiencies.

Germany on the other hand needs foodstuffs, nickel and other products which the Baltic States supplied in large quantities before the Soviet Union's influence was extended over these nations.

PEACE AT ONCE WITH JAPANESE URGED BY WANG

Says on 3rd Anniversary of Shanghai Fighting That Only Reds Favor Continuing Fight

Domei Tsushin

NANKING, Aug. 12—Wang Ching-wei, Acting President of the Republic of China, in a statement commemorating the third anniversary of the Shanghai fighting which falls on August 13, said the following:

"Some one asked me as to when the faction advocating continued war against Japan and group for peace will join hands, and also as to when general peace will be established between Japan and China. In reply to these questions, I said that there is no faction in China, that exist in China is a single State, one family and one joint opinion aspiring for independent existence, and that only a small number of communists are excluded from this joint opinion.

GOOD PEACE TERMS

"The joint opinion naturally calls for good peace terms, which are beneficial to Japan, China and the whole of East Asia. When these terms are acquired there can be no recurrence of a war in China. On the other hand, should such good peace terms be unobtainable it means a failure of the peace negotiations, but even such a failure would be ephemeral and not permanent. For Japan and China are destined to advance hand in hand sooner or later on the one broad road leading to the reconstruction of East Asia.

"Sooner the acquirement of the good peace terms sooner the realization of general peace between Japan and China. How then can the good peace terms be obtained? Two methods are advocated in certain sections. Some argue that good peace terms cannot easily be obtained through unilateral negotiations with Japan and therefore peace negotiations should be conducted through the medium of third Powers. However, such a scheme is the worst of all methods.

WANG SINCERE

"In negotiating peace we must realize that 'the reconstruction of East Asia' is not advocated merely in words but as sincere conviction, not a trickery but a thing embodying absolute truth.

"Others contend that China should attempt to prolong the warfare, taking advantage of the fact that Japan is trying to terminate the war speedily, in order to obtain more favorable peace terms. This ideal is still worse. The more prolonged the war the greater will be exhaustion, and naturally an amount of indemnity that may be asked by Japan would swell.

"The foregoing two ideas are shallow and irrational, but in spite of this fact, they are often entertained in Chungking. Why? One of the reasons is that they doubt as to whether good peace terms will be obtainable. Another reason is that they fear that good peace terms may not be acquired.

COOPERATION URGED

"This suspicion and fear result from the failure to realize the true significance of the Sino-Japanese co-operation for the reconstruction of East Asia. They should know that that there are very few of countries which are able to maintain their existence in isolation of other parts of the world. It is impossible not only for weaker nations but also stronger ones to maintain their positions isolated from other parts of the world. It is necessary for several countries which are closely related geographically and racially or in moral concents and economic conditions, to form a group for their mutual security.

"Peace terms based upon the basis of the reconstruction of East Asia cannot be bad, for they would be good not only for China but for Japan and the whole of East Asia."

U.S. SAID SEEKING PROLONGED CONFLICT

Pravda Says Americans Seeking Japanese Goodwill

Domei Tsushin

MOSCOW, Aug. 12—Charging that American imperialists are interested in prolonging the European war, the Pravda, organ of the Communist Party, today warned that the intense warfare between Germany and Britain are but a prelude to more serious events.

The air and sea battles developing between the British Empire, on one side, and the Rome-Berlin axis, on the other will not materially consume the military power of either side, the Pravda declared.

American imperialists figure in this gigantic struggle for world domination because they hope that Great Britain's resistance against Germany will enable the United States to strengthen its economic and military position in the Western Hemisphere as well as in the Pacific, the journal said, adding that one task of the United States' monied interests is assertedly to prevent Japan from utilizing the European chaos to improve its position in the western Pacific area.

The importance which the Americans place on Japan's activities, the Pravda continued, can be gathered from the way the American public reacted to rumors of possible Japanese thrusts against the Dutch East Indies.

Japan, on the other hand, the journal concluded, is at present directing its activities toward solving its problems with French Indo-China, hoping at the same time that there will be no worsening of Japanese-American relations.

'WE THREE' UNDER BIG HATS

AMERICAN PAPER RAPS BRITISH AID PROPOSALS

German News Service Quotes Editorial Criticizing U.S. Officials for Their Actions

D.N.B.

BERLIN, Aug. 8—The American newspaper "Baltimore Sun" of August 5 published an article, in which the war policy of certain circles in Washington was sharply criticized.

Following highlights of the article: "There is not the slightest evidence that the totalitarian powers, whether in Europe or in Asia, have been planning any attack on America. On the contrary, they have been trying hard, even against their own interests sometimes since the beginning of this war, to treat the American people with utmost politeness. All actual threats to American rights have been performed by England and not by Germany, Italy or Japan. In so far that the U.S. is now at odds with any of the totalitarian states, it is simply and solely due to the fact that the government circles of the U.S. have always supported the enemies of these countries in violations not only of the international law and the statutes of Congress but also of common honesty and common decency.

"In Washington, long before the war began, England had been accorded every support and indeed it is perfectly reasonable to argue that the English would have hesitated to plunge themselves into such an adventure if they had not been sure of the whole hearted support of the American Government in advance. If it were true, as it is alleged, that the totalitarian powers are planning to attack the Americans, then it certainly would be elemental prudenec to adhere to such defense materials as the country has in reserve.

HAVE AIDED ENGLAND

"This, however, precisely has not been done. On the contrary, hundreds of airplanes needed in America, have been shipped abroad and this very minute the Anglo maniacs are trying to devise some means to send American destroyers after them, although this is strictly forbidden by law. To what this folly may come to at the end, has already been indicated by a painful example.

"In the days before the French plunged down to disaster by obeying England, American planes were sent to France in large quantities. Many of these planes have been captured by the Germans and are now being used to bomb England. If now England also blows up and the totalitarian powers are in the position to ask the U.S. for an accounting, thousands of American planes will be available to help them in their negotiations.

RAP DESTROYERS PLAN

"The plan to send American destroyers after the planes is based on the theory that the British navy is a philanthropical organization consecrated to save America from Hitler and the Japanese. That theory, however, is sheer madness.

"The one and the only aim of the British navy is to protect England and the English trade and to achieve that aim she is quite willing to sacrifice the lives and the property of any other nation. Here again the poor French proved an example. England's French friends suddenly became enemies the very moment they could no longer help England. And the heroic English navy proceeded to massacre brave French sailors, who only a few weeks ago had risked their lives to save the British army at Dunkerque."

INDIANS CREEP UP SLIGHTLY ON TIGER NINE

Split Double Bill with Browns While Detroiters Rest; Reds Defeat Cubs

United Press

NEW YORK, Aug. 9—The Cleveland Indians crept up on the Detroit Tigers yesterday by splitting a twinbill with the St. Louis Browns while the American League leaders were idle.

A double victory would have placed the Tribe in the lead, but not even the great Bob Feller himself could turn back the savage hitting Browns in the opener, 7-4. The Indians, however, came back in the nightcap with a close 2-1 win.

Both leading teams in the National League won and thus there were no changes. The Cincinnati Reds whipped the Chicago Cubs, 3-1, and the Brooklyn Dodgers trounced the New York Giants, 6-3.

DODGERS BEAT GIANTS

United Press

NEW YORK, Aug. 8—A boisterous horde of Flatbush fans invaded uptown last night and had a rollicking good time at the expense of high hat Manhattan partisans, as the Brooklyn Dodgers scored their second straight win over Colonel Bill Terry's New York Giants, 8 to 4, and quietly chopped a full game off the margin of the league leading Cincinnati Reds.

Cincinnati's lead dwindled down to five games by virtue of a 10 inning trimming they received at the hands of Gabby Hartnett's Chicago Cubs, whose extra base wallops enabled them to snatch the long end of a 5 to 3 count, although the League champions matched their hitting at 11 apiece.

Two Chicago rookies, Bill Nicholson and Jimmy Glesson, led the Bruin attack by connecting for circuit smashes each.

PIRATES DOWN CARDS

Frankie Frisch's frisky Pirates took undisputed control of the fifth position by slapping the St. Louis Cardinals in both ends of a double bill, 10 to 9 and 2 to 6.

Although badly outhit in the opener, the Pirates bunched their bingles and managed to clinch the game in the eighth canto, when rookie pinch-hitter Spuds came through with a single good for a pair of markers.

In the nightcap, Al Butcher, Pittsburgh hurler, helped slug his team to a 12 to 6 victory by driving in four runs with a double and a single.

At Philadelphia, the Phillies polished their batting eyes in a desperate effort to crawl out of the cellar but the Boston Bees did most of the socking in the pinches and won handily, 6-3, although outhit by two safeties.

TIGERS HOLD LEAD

In the American League, Del Baker's Detroit Tigers held their half-game lead over the Cleveland Indians by the narrowest of margins with a 7 to 5 win over the St. Louis Browns while the Indians were blasting out a 9 to 3 victory against the Chicago White Sox. Lou Boudreau was the big gun of the Clevelnnd attack, driving a single and two homers during the game. The Indians blasted out 12 hits off Johnny Rigney, White Sox hurler, while the Chicago club came through with the hits off Harry Eisenstat and Al Smith. Four errors by the White Sox also contributed to their defeat.

The Tigers won their game in the fifth inning, when George Tebbets, Detroit catcher, drove out a stinging double with the bases loaded, giving Detroit a two run lead they never lost.

George McQuinn connected for a four bagger for the Browns, leading the twelve-hit attack. The Tigers drew fourteen safeties.

SOX-YANKS DIVIDE

The third place Boston Red Sox split a double-header with the fifth place New York Yankees, winning the first game 10 to 7 and dropping the nightcap, 6 to 3.

The Red Sox drove out sixteen hits in the first game, including homes by Bobby Doerr and Joe Cronin. Joe DiMaggio connected for a home run to lead the eleven-hit Yankee attack. In the nightcap, Joe Gordon paced the Yankees to a 6 to 3 win by connecting for three hits. Joe DiMaggio drove out a single and a double, driving in two runs. The Yankees blasted out ten hits against the Red Sox while Marius Russo was holding Boston to eight safeties. Jimmy Tabor and Joe Cronin, however, made three hits count for four-baggers. The Philadelphia-Washington game was rained out.

'Phoney' Detective Steals Bicycle, 21-Year-Old Girl

A spurious detective who allegedly stole a bicycle and kidnapped a 21-year-old girl was sought by police today. The culprit, police think, is one, Masaichi Takahara, who pretended he was Masaharu Fujioka of the Nishi-Arai police station and presumably made off with Setsui Ozawa, 21, of 2-Chome, 1716 Motoki-cho, Adachi ward.

Vernaculars report a man answering Takahara's description called at the Ozawa home August 9, saying he wanted Setsui as a witness in a round-up of young roisterers. He appeared again Monday, learned the girl was not yet home from work, borrowed Mr. Ozawa's bicycle on the pretense he had to ride to the police station, and disappeared.

When Setsui did not return home from her factory job as usual, police listened to the Ozawa family story, remembered Takahara's previous escapades, summoned the suspect's father to the police station and learned the detective pretender last year garnered numerous presents and some cash by pretending he was a soldier called to the front. He also served time for involuntary manslaughter and larceny, police learned.

They concluded, since the descriptions fit, and Setsui still is missing, he must have kidnapped her.

U.S. WITHDRAWAL OF TROOPS ALSO URGED BY TANG

Nanking Publicity Chief Points Out Illegality Of Stationing Soldiers

Domei-Tsushin

NANKING, Aug. 14—America also should follow the footsteps of Britain and withdraw her troops from China, it was declared yesterday in a verbal statement by Tang Liang-li, chief of the National Government Publicity Bureau.

Asserting the illegality of the stationing of foregin troops in Shanghai, Mr. Tang said.

NO TREATY BASIS

"With the withdrawal of the British garrisons from China the irrational conditions existing in Shanghai and the cause of unnecessary frictions have been partially removed. From the first the stationing of British garrisons in Shanghai had no treaty basis. In her recent official communication addressed to the Japanese Foreign Office Britain stated that she would reserve all treaty rights based upon the North China Protocol of September 7, 1901, but in Article VI of the said protocol, where the names of the cities in which British garrisons are to be stationed are listed, Shanghai is not specified. It follows, therefore, that Britain, by withdrawing her troops there. In the event of America becoming a watchdog for Anglo-American imperialism after the evacuation of the British troops from Shanghai, the stationing of American troops in that city would also become illegal.

SHOULD WITHDRAW

"Some little time ago the National Government declared a denial of the legitimacy of any clandestine transfer of any and all treaty rights in China between belligerent nations. In conformity with the spirit of this declaration and for the sake of peace on the Pacific, America should follow the suit of Britain and withdraw her troops stationed in Shanghai, which is not only unlawful but is also against the will of the people of the Chinese Republic. The National Government can by no means afford to admit any action which is calculated to infringe upon the sovereignty of the Republic of China, such as secret transfer of treaty rights after the evacuation of British troops."

ARAI APPEARS STAR OF MEIJI SHRINE RACES

Japanese Swimming Aces Will Gather August 17; Veterans See Competition

The outstanding performance of the three-day acquatic meet of the Meiji Shrine is expected to be supplied by Shigeo Arai of the St. Paul's University when Japanese swimming stars gather here on August 17, according to Domei.

How the veteran swimmers will defend their acquatic title at the forthcoming meet at the Meiji Shrine Swimming Stadium is a subject of wide speculation in athletic circles.

For the first time in the history of Japanese swimming, it is said, the veteran swimmers will compete in the swimming contest after their graduation from colleges as swimming stars of yesterday retired from the active competition as soon as they graduated from schools.

For instance Yusa, graduate of the Nippon University, will appear in the 100-meter event, while Shibahara, Nippon University graduate and Koyanagi, graduate of the Waseda University will defend their titles in the diving events.

Tetsuo Hamuro, world's record holder in the breast stroke, who recently returned from his exhibition tour in South American countries, will not appear in the 100-meter event but will compete in the 200-meter breast stroke race. Whether Hamuro is fully recuperated from his extended trip in South America will be the deciding factor in the 200-meter contest. He was recently defeated by Yoshimura of the Nippon University at the Fukuoka meet.

In the diving events, it is believed that veteran Shibata and Koyanagi will likely defend their titles although everything will depend upon their condition as they are no longer students with enough time to practice.

National Park Stamps Will Appear August 21

The fifth national park issue of four new stamps will be out on sale beginning August 21 following the Oyama, Inland Sea, Mt. Aso, and Mt. Daisetsu-series, it was announced today.

The new stamps of the National park will be the Kirishima in Kyushu with two sen in brown showing the new crater and Mt. Kankoku; four sen in green, showing Mt. Takachiho; ten sen in scarlet showing the Kirishima Shrine and 20 sen in blue showing Lake Roku-Kannon.

Japanese Mop Up Bandits Near Tungning in Kirin

Domei Tsushin

MUTANCHIANG, Aug. 13—Japanese army and police units on August 1, shot to death 11 bandits including Chang Tien-po, the leader, and captured more than 10 prisoners, chasing them toward a point 20 kilometers west of Erhpataohotzu, Tungning, Eastern Kirin Province.

Making attacks three times since July 29, the bandits carried away 19 Manchoukuo coolies working in the forest at Erhpataohotzu and captured a large quantity of provisions.

250,000 ENUMERATORS NEEDED FOR FIFTH NATIONAL CENSUS

The Fifth National Census, which will be started November 1, will be the most detailed in the Japan's history, according to the Asahi.

The census will cost Japan approximately ¥10,000,000 and 250,000 persons will be employed to gather the vital information.

Detailed reports will be made concerning the types of work which men and women are capable of performing. Particularly will the census enumerators get full reports on technicians and industrial workers.

The census proper is not expected to be completed until March of 1943. The Government Bureau of Statistics will employ 4,000 additional workers to compile and classify the information.

"The necessity of a complete census increases as the standards of a civilized nation grows higher," Takahiko Kawashima, chief of the statistics bureau of the cabinet, told the Asahi. "Only those directly engaged in taking the census can know the difficulty of gathering and disposing of the countless cards. Many important investigations will be undertaken and we want the people to cooperate and supply us correct information."

KOREAN AVIATOR'S BODY RECOVERED

Remains of Officer Killed At Nomonhan Going to Keijo

Domei Tsushin

KEIJO, Aug. 13—Remains of the first Korean officer and aviator in the Japanese Army are expected to be brought back here tomorrow following recovery of the body of the flier who was killed last July at Nomonhan Height.

The Korean officer, the late Captain Chi Rin Tai was engaged in a scouting flight over the Soviet forces during the Nomonhan incident in July 1939. He penetrated deep into the Soviet territory with his plane and he was never heard of again.

Following conclusion of a truce between the Japanese and Soviet forces, an energetic search was made for his remains.

From what was learned after the recovery of the Korean officer's remains, it appeared that Captain Chi gallantly fought against some 70 enemy planes and his plane caught fire during the battle.

Churchill Expresses Grief Over Crash

Domei Tsushin

LONDON, Aug. 13—In a voice heavy with sorrow, Prime Minister Winston Churchill today expressed his grief before the House of Commons at the Australian air disaster which took the lives of three members of Australia's War Cabinet and of a number of other high Government officials.

He said: "We have been all shocked and grieved by the news of the loss the Commonwealth of Australia has had, in common with the whole Empire and its cause, sustained in the deaths of these eminent Australians in the air accident this morning. It inflicts an injury on us which I am not at pains to conceal.

"The House will wish to extend their sympathy to their families and friends and to the Prime Minister, Mr. Menzies. We shall give voice to the sorrow felt by so many lands to which the cause of freedom is dear."

The Prime Minister's words were echoed by Lord Caldecots, Dominion's Secretary, in a message of sympathy addressed to Australia.

JOHNNY MIZE COLLECTS 32 FOUR BAGGERS

Extends Lead Over Foxx; Newsom and Fitzsimmons Lead Hurlers of Majors

United Press

NEW YORK, Aug. 10—By clouting out two additional homers during the past week, Johnny Mize of the St. Louis Cardinals brought his home run total to 32 for this season, sufficient to keep him at the lead of four-bagger list, according to the statistics as of yesterday. Jimmy Foxx of the Boston Red Sox who has trailed Mize grimly this season cut down by one homer the lead held by Cardinals' star. Foxx banged out three home runs to bring his total to 26.

Fat Freddie Fitzsimmons of the Brooklyn Dodgers, who recently pitched his 200th victory, tops the list of winning pitchers in the National League, having won 11 and lost two. Truett Sewell of the Cardinals is second with nine won and two lost.

NEWSOM HEADS PITCHERS

Buck Newsom, pacemaker of the Detroit Tigers' mound staff, heads American League pitchers. His 14 games won and two lost puts him in front of Schoolboy Rowe, who is four games behind. Bob Feller Cleveland Indians' fireball, is third with 19 won and six lost.

Although his percentage slumped from last week, Ray Radcliff continues to lead American League batting averages. In the National League, Harry Danning, catcher for the Giants, has yet to be headed from the leading position.

SAFE AT TOP

United Press

NEW YORK, Aug. 10—Del Baker's Detroit Tigers drew their first full breath in more than two weeks of campaigning today when they saw their lead in the white hot American League race stretched to a full game.

It was no great triumph, however, for they merely managed to beat the Chicago White Sox five to two in a short five inning game called on account of rain, while the second place Cleveland Indians were completely washed out by floods in St. Louis. Lynn "Schoolboy" Rowe took the credit for the game, although the White Sox clubbed him for eight hits, compared to the seven Detroit clouted off Thornton Lee. Cheerless rain-soaked fans got their only thrill of the game when Hank Greenberg drove out a home run in the fifth inning.

The rainstorm forced cancellation of the second scheduled Detroit-Chicago game.

The rampaging New York Yankees went on a wild batting spree to club out a 13-0 win over the Philadelphia Athletics.

Charlie Keller, Joe Gordon, Babe Dahlgren, Bob "Red" Rolfe and Joe DiMaggio each connected for four baggers, to give New York fans a taste of what they once knew as Broadway bombing. Ernie Bonham went the route for the Yankees, putting the Athletics under the blankets with a white washing five-hit performance.

WENT TO TOWN

The Yankees pulled off their blankets and went to town with a 13-hit performance, sending two Athletic pitchers to the showers, until Bill Beckman was able to stem the tide.

In the only other American League game of the day the third place Boston Red Sox moved up to within 5½ games of the Indians by white washing the Washington Senators, 3-0.

The Senators out-hit Boston nine safeties to five, but the Red Sox bunched theirs in the third inning for the tallies that win games. An error by Cecil Travis, a free pass to first base for Jimmy Foxx, a double by Jimmy Tabor and a beautiful single by Lou Finney sent three runs scampering across the platter.

The double header between Cleveland and St. Louis was postponed by rain.

The Cincinnati Reds stretched their lead in the National League to 5½ games with a smashing 5-0 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals, while the second place Brooklyn Dodgers were dropping a heart breaker to the Boston Bees, 4-3.

Brooklyn had the game in the bag, 3-0, until a cyclone in the form of young Chet Ross came up to the plate in the sixth inning. With the bases full, Ross came through with a four bagger, which sent Leo Durocher's club out of the running. That mighty four-run blow took all the heart out of the Dodgers, although they had an advantage in the hitting, 11 blows to 8.

The Reds went about their chores today with the business like atmosphere of any club bound for the pennant and easily disposed of the Cardinals, 5-0. Frank McCormick hit his 15th rome run of the year in the second inning, for the only real show of the day.

It was just another game for Lloyd Moore of the Cincinnati hurling staff. He not only white washed the Cardinals, but held them to four measly blows. The Reds jumped on Bob Bowman and Carl Doyle for nine hits.

CUBS MOVE BACK

The Chicago Cubs moved back into fourth place over the Pittsburgh Pirates by trimming Pittsburgh, 1-0, in a bitter pitchers' duel. Dominick Dallesander, Cub outfielder, won the game in the fourth inning when he tripled and then came home on a long sacrifice fly by Al Todd, Chicago catcher.

Vern Olsen went the route for Chicago, holding Pittsburgh to seven hits, while his mates were collecting eight blows off three Pittsburgh hurlers.

The New York Giants also had a close shave, pulling one out of the fire against the Philadelphia Phillies, 1-0. Harry Gumbert was the Giant who broke up this ball game. Gumbert landed on second base with the sweetest blow of the day, advanced to third on a sacrifice by Surgess Whitehead and raced across the platter with the only and winning run of the day, when Joe Moore poled a fly into deep outfield.

Harry also took the credit on the mound, holding the Phillies to five hits, while Silas Johnson and L. Brown split the dubious honor of having held the Giants to five hits between them.

New Woman Tennis Star Defeats Helen Jacobs

MANCHESTER, Massachusettes, Aug. 14—Displaying championship form, Miss Pauline Betz, of Los Angeles, today defeated Miss Helen Jacobs, last year's No. 2 ranking U.S. woman tennis star, in the 16th annual invitation tournament of the Essex Country Club.

Miss Jacobs was no match for Miss Betz whose flashing racket has pushed her suddenly into national prominence. Miss Jacobs was beaten, 6-1 and 6-4.

Miss Betz gained national recognition when she made a strong bid for the National Women's Indoor Championships. Playing in the finals at Madison Square Garden on March 2 this year, she was defeated by Miss Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, No. 3 ranking woman player of 1939.

KING ALLEGES SPOILS ACCORD

U.S. Solon Declares Japan Assured of 'Hegemony over Asia'

By JULIUS EDELSTEIN

United Press

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8—Senator William H. King, Democrat of Utah, yesterday charged that Japan, Italy, Russia and Germany have a "working agreement" providing for the disposal of the "spoils of war" when Britain and China are defeated in the European and Asiatic conflicts.

Interviewed by the United Press, Senator King, said Japan has been assured of "hegemony over all of Asia, with the exception of India, Afghanistan and, naturally, Siberia."

The understanding between Japan and Russia, Senator King said, includes an agreement that India and Afghanistan would pass under Soviet control, while China, the Netherlands East Indies, French Indo-China and possibly Australia would be controlled by Japan.

In Europe, Senator King continued, Germany would control the western continent, including Scandinavia, Central Europe and northern Spain. Italy would "inherit Turkey and North Africa," he said.

"Southern Africa will be divided between Italy and Germany. . . . Italy will control the Mediterranean, Hitler the Atlantic and Japan the Pacific."

Senator King said that at the beginning of the current phase of world affairs the Axis partners worked ceaselessly in the direction of this totalitarian combination.

"Their harmony has been based on this agreement," he declared. "All four dictatorships were inevitably brought together by the common objective of dividing the world among them."

Senator King urged the United States to arm to repeal attacks against United States interests by the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo-Moscow combination.

FAR REACHING HAWAII DEFENSES DESCRIBED BY NEW YORK TIMES

Islands Protected by 25,000 Soldiers, Bulk of Fleet and Powerful Air Force

Domei Tsushin

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—A detailed description of the United States' formidable air, naval and military defense facilities on the Hawaiian Islands, which form the vital apex of America's theoretical line of defense stretching from the Aleutians to the Panama Canal, today is reported to the New York Times by the paper's special correspondent in Honolulu.

According to the article, America's chief Pacific outpost currently is being guarded by a naval unit, composed of approximately 10 battleships, two aircraft carriers, 15 cruisers, about 50 destroyers and many submarines. The fleet is said to be riding at anchor near the entrance of the Pearl Harbor naval base ready to steam out at a moment's notice to meet any possible threats to the American mainland.

HAVE 25,000 SOLDIERS

The main military fortifications of the Hawaiian Islands are concentrated on Oahu, where there are stationed 25,000 men, including those of the coast artillery and air units. Heavy fixed defenses concentrated between Pearl Harbor and the southend of the island are said to command all approaches to the island.

Cahu Island, the article continues, has the chief airports, Whealer and Hickman airfields, besides three other auxiliary fields, while there are other emergency airports two on Maui, one at Molokai and one on Kauai. Preparations reportedly are being made to construct another on Lanai.

Hickman Field is said to be the chief headquarters of the 18th air unit under the command of Brigadier-General Walter Frank and to comprise two bombardment units and a pursuit group. On the spacious concrete runways of Hickman Field, one can see many bombers glistening under the rays of the tropical sun and members of the air force going about their duties, waiting for orders to begin bombing practice.

REBUILD PLANES

Mechanics of the Hawaiian air force, who have undergone rigorous technical training, are capable of making all kinds of repairs and even rebuilding planes. In roomy lecture halls, 300 men currently are said to be diligently learning flying technique under the guidance of experienced instructors.

One of the striking features of Hawaiian defenses, the article continues, is the coastal batteries. The coastal units are said to include gigantic 12-inch disappearing guns and others of a similar caliber mounted on turrets. These big-guns, having tremendous striking power, are said to have a range of 30,000 yards. The defense batteries also boasts numerous eight-inch guns mounted on railway cars.

Japanese Fliers Inflicting Heavy Damage on Chungking

Domei Tsushin

UNDISCLOSED BASE, Aug. 15—Since May 18, Chungking, capital of the Chiang Kai-shek's regime was attacked 27 times by Japanese naval planes.

MAJOR LEAGUES PENNANT RACES BOTH THRILLERS

Tigers and Indians Tied; Dodgers Climbing Fast; 4½ Games Behind Cincinnati

United Press

NEW YORK, Aug. 11—Fight hungry American baseball fans chortled with glee today as the two Major League circuits tightened up into one of the rip roaringest battles in recent years, with the Detroit Tigers and Cleveland Indians tied for the American League leadership and the Brooklyn Dodgers moving up to within 4½ games of the Cincinnati Reds in the senior circuit.

The Dodgers split a double header with the Boston Bees, losing the first game, 3-0 and then taking the nightcap, 3-0. But the Reds went down to dismal defeat at the hands of the St. Louis Cardinals, 3-2 and 3-1.

Cleveland sent the American race into a dead heat by splitting with the St. Louis Browns, capturing the opener, 12-4, and dropping the nightcap, 7-6, while the Chicago White Sox took a bargain bill from Detroit by identical scores of 4-3.

TEDDY LYONS HURLS

Teddy Lyons, the big White Sox hurler, not only kept the Tigers under the blankets in that first game, holding them to eleven hits and three runs, but doubled in the eighth inning to win his own game. Both clubs scored their first tally in the second inning, while the tigers went ahead by adding another run in the third inning. Chicago evened the count in the fourth and went ahead in the seventh, when Joe Kuhel connected for his twentieth homer of the season.

Lyons added his counter in the eigth inning to give Chicago a one-run lead, after the Tigers had whittled the score down to a 3-3 tie in their half of the eighth.

The two clubs fought bitterly for the nightcap win after the White Sox took an early one-run lead in the second and added another tally in the sixth. The Tigers came through in the seventh inning when Hank Greenberg and Rudy York poled out home runs, giving Detroit a 3-2 edge. Taft Wright, however, pounded one off Tommy Bridges' offering for a two bagger in the eighth inning with two men aboard. The two runs clinched the game for Chicago.

The Cleveland Indians pulled up into a tie for the league leadership by taking the first game of a double header at St. Louis 12-4. The Indians clubbed five Brown hurlers unmercifully for 18 hits, while Albert Milnar limited St. Louis to 11 blows. It was Milnar's fifteenth win of the season. The five St. Louis errors did not help matters any, especially when combined with the fact that every Indian hit safely at least once.

The Indians took a 1-0 lead in the second inning of the nightcap, but St. Louis tied it up in the fourth. Each team added two more tallies in the fifth, but St. Louis took a big lead by sending two runs across in the sixth and two more in the seventh. The Indians continued working away, adding one run in the eighth and two more in the ninth, but were one tally shy at the end of the game.

YANKS MOVE BACK

The New York Yankees moved back into a tie with the White Sox for fourth place by blasting out a 7-6 win over the Athletics in a bitter ten inning duel in the Yankee Stadium.

It was a day of home runs with a total of five round trippers showing up as New York connected for twelve hits and the Athletics pounded out thirteen.

Frank Hayes, Athletic catcher, started the parade with a homer in the fifth inning. Joe Gantenbein and Sam Chapman each added four baggers in the ninth inning. George Selkirk, who came to bat as a pinch hitter to save the game in the Yankee half of the final canto, also came through with a homer.

Young Joe Gordon, the Yankee second baseman, gave fans their final thrill when he homered in the eleventh inning, clinching the game for the Broadway Bombers.

The Washington Senators trimmed the Boston Red Sox in the final American League game of the day by a score of 2-1, with Sydney Hudson getting the best of the mound duel with the aging Lefty Grove. Hudson held Boston to five measly hits, while the Senators pounded Grove for eleven safeties. Hudson also set the stage for his win when he singled in the second inning to drive in the first run.

RED SOX TIE

The Red Sox tied up the game in their half of the ninth inning, 1-1, but Ol' Moses let down the barriers and the Senators crowded the winning run across in their half of the same inning.

Twenty-three thousand raving fans, the largest crowd of the season in Boston, watched the Bees shade the Dodgers in a tight pitching duel. The Bees scored first in the second, but the Dodgers tied up the game in the seventh until Boston came back in their half of the frame with two more tallies.

Leo Durocher's boys made a gallant effort in the eighth inning to overtake the Bee lead, but succeeded in pushing only one run across the platter. The Bees pounded out nine hits, while Brooklyn collected eight.

The blood thirsty Dodgers came back in the nightcap to whitewash Boston, 3-0, as only one Bee reached third base off the seven-hit pitching of Vito Tamulis. The Dodgers also collected only seven hits, but managed to bunch theirs for tallies.

The Cincinnati Reds dropped two close ones to the Cardinals, losing the opener 3-2 and dropping the nightcap 3-1. In the first tilt, the Reds took an early lead with a two-run attack in the fourth inning. The Cardinals came back in the sixth to force one tally across home plate, added another in the eighth and capped the rally with a home run by Slaughter in the same inning to break the tie and give the Cards the decision.

14TH HOME RUN

It was Slaughter's fourteenth homer of the season. St. Louis gathered in six hits, while Morty Cooper limited the Reds to two safeties.

In the nightcap, the Cardinals jumped into a 2-0 lead in the first inning, which they held until the fourth, when the Reds jammed one across the platter. With the game virtually in the bag, St. Louis added another counter in the ninth to ensure there was no slip up.

The Pittsburgh Pirates moved into fourth place ahead of the Chicago Cubs by trouncing Chicago 7-3 and 5-1 in a double header on the Pirates' home lot. The wins also put them within two and one half games of the third-place New York Giants, who split a double header with the lowly Philadelphia Phillies, losing the first game 2-0 and then winning the second 8-2.

Pittsburgh won the first game with four unearned runs in the eight inning on three cub errors. The Chicago club was wobbly in the field throughout the game, making six errors. Pittsburgh, however, collected 12 hits to eight for Chicago.

In the nightcap, the Pirates pulled four double plays out of the hat to stem potential Cub rallies, going on to win 5-1. Dick Lanahan was the spark of the Pittsburgh club, holding the Cubs to four hits, while his mates were collecting nine off Vance Page and Claude Passeau.

Kirby Higbe hurled a tight game for the Phillies in the opening tilt, which Philadelphia won from the Giants, 2-0. Joe Marty led the six-hit Phillie offensive, with Philadelphia collecting one run in the first and second innings and then settling down to purely defensive ball against the Giants.

New York had an easy time of it in the nightcap, trimming Philadelphia 8-2 behind a blistering eleven-hit attack. Norman Young led the drive, getting a four bagger in the first inning with the bases loaded and then picking up his twelfth homer of the season in the seventh canto. The Phillies failed even to score until the ninth inning when they chased two runs across as Hal Schumacher let the bars down slightly.

U.S. SEEKING ARMY OF 750,000 MEN

100,000 Claimed Necessary To Protect Overseas Departments Adequately

United Press

CAMBRIDGE, Massachusetts, Aug. 8—Harvard University's American Defense Group issued a statement yesterday describing the War Department's protective mobilization plan as containing a breakdown of man power placement under the scheme to obtain an Army of 750,000 men with 450,000 replacements.

The statement was attributed to an unnamed, but "very highly placed army officer," who, it was asserted, gave the "War Department's considered views."

"We must maintain in the overseas departments—Puerto Rico, Panama, Alaska, Hawaii and the Philippines— a minimum of 100,000 men if we are to assign adequate initial defense," the statement said. The present numbers are about 40 per cent less than required.

212,000 NECESSARY

"We need to have instantly available for the defense of points in this hemisphere not less than 212,000 men and, in addition, we must have available in the United States a reasonable number of men who can be moved promptly to any threatened position."

The statement said the mobilization plan could be accomplished by ordering the National Guard into active service and inducting 400,000 men into training by a selective system in October of this year and an additional 400,000 in April ,1941. The required number of reserve officers could be ordered into active duty for training purposes.

BEGINS WAR GAMES

United Press

OGDENSBURG, New York, Aug. 7—Over 80,000 regulars and National Guardsmen were concentrating here today to engage in a mock "Battle of the St. Lawrence" during maneuvers in this upper New York State area.

By last night over 66,000 officers and men had arrived within a 1,300 square mile zone, and 20,000 more—chiefly aircraft and anti-aircraft units—will have arrived by Saturday.

For the first time, the new anti-aircraft defense of the ground force will be formed under the command of Brigadier-General J. E. Chaney, Chief of the newly created Air Defense Command.

At the Army's request, the American Legion has enrolled nearly 2,800 civilians in a 1,680 square mile area to man 347 volunteer "warning stations" and the personnel of 46 state forestry fire towers will act as lookouts for "enemy planes" during the "battle."

Whenever an "enemy" plane is sighted, the volunteer watcher will telephone the Air Command's headquarters in Watertown, New York, where operators will be stationed at a long row of telephones facing a map on which each observer station is noted. The watchers will attempt to give the types, numbers, speed, altitude and direction of the planes to enable the command to intercept them.

At least 162 planes will participate in the maneuvers, which will be for the possession of St. Lawrence Valley, the traditional gateway to the industrial centers of the United States.

The invading Army will land at Boston and drive across upper New York State to attempt the capture of the valley.

AMERICAN CORRESPONDENT TRAVELS PATH OF GERMAN WAR MACHINE IN FRANCE

By DANA SCHMIDT

United Press

LUXEMBOURG, Aug. 8—German officers yesterday explained to me how nine German Stuka bombers paralyzed one of the two largest forts in the Maginot Line with one attack and 18 bombs.

The German officers traced the course of the Battle of France by the deep scars it left in the countryside during a press inspection of the work of German bombs in France.

The fort was called the Hochwald Works. It had a crew of 1,100 men occupying underground passages stretching from Klimbach to Pfaffenbrinn, six kilometers from the Rhine at Weissenburg.

German Air Force officers said we were the first civilians to visit Hochwald since King George dined at officers' mess there 60 meters underground last winter.

I climbed over 18 craters, some big enough to hold a small bungalow, blasted out by 12 250 kilogram and six 50 kilogram bombs, all dropped with'n a radius of 300 meters around one of the most important gun turrets in the fort, in the attack June 20. The accuracy of the bombers was partly explainable by the fact that all French anti-aircraft guns had been sent north to stem the break through. The only anti-aircraft defense there waw a 10 cen'imeter cannon made in the year 1888 which was mounted on top of the fort!

Inside the turret, surprisingly enough, the only physical damage caused by the attack was to two 13.5 cannons which were jammed into the one meter thick concrete walls and were no longer useable. The walls were cracked in two places, so that light shone through.

The German officers said French prisoners told them the physical and phychological effects of the concussion from the huge bombs was so great that after the attack June 20, 200 men stationed near the turrets fled into the deepest underground passage and refused to return.

Thousand Homeless As Factory Fire Spreads

United Press

CAMDEN, New Jersey, July 31—A fire originating in a paint factory killed five persons, injured 200, caused damage estimated at $2,000,000 and left 1,000 homeless yesterday when the flames destroyed 53 houses before they were controlled.

A state of emergency was declared and 75 families in nearby homes were ordered removed. The New Jersey National Guard was summoned to maintain order.

The first of a series of from 20 to 25 explosions, which started the fire, occurred in the small room of the paint factory building where 150 men were working. They immediately rushed to fire escapes from the five story building. Some, finding the exist blocked, jumped from windows.

LA BELLE POULE COMES IN FIRST IN Y.Y.C. RACE

Weidenmann (Joan)	Disqualified.

Wind, light; sea, smooth. Officers of the day, G. Neville, M. Ellerton.

France triumphed at Sunday's racing of the Yokohama Yacht Club for the President's Cup, La Belle Poule skippered by Mr. Longy coming in first on corrected and elapsed time, with Ailsa, skippered by Mr. Vignes, taking second place on corrected time. Chinook, the Canadian sloop captained by Miss Vi Woodbridge was third on corrected time. Second across the line in elapsed time was Commodore Harden's Vinga, but as he is rated a scratchman he received fourth place.

Two unusual events enlivened the proceedings. Whatchful sailorman John Laffin, highest handicap man in the fleet, with plus four per cent whichever boat he is sailing, made an error which put him in last instead of first place.

TRUSTING TO MEMORY

He rounded the Junitan mark to port instead of to starboard as prescribed in the course for the day. He was trusting to memory instead of verifying by the written instructions. Not until he had noticed all the other boats rounding to starboard did he realize what had happened, and he had to go back to the buoy again, losing all his great lead.

This incident was the occasion for high glee amongst his competing colleagues who very rarely have a chance to catch him out, and Brother Bill Laffin and Alfie Agajan also came in for a share of the razzing, as they were the alert crew.

With fleet Shamrock out of the way the race settled down to a very good contest between La Belle Poule, Vinga and Ailsa. At the third mark Ailsa was way out in front, Mr. Vigne and the Misses Thiebaut, his crew apparently being booked for second place. But his boat seemed to lose distance on the runs, and for that reason it was a see-saw battle around the several triangles, alternately losing and gaining according to the lay of the wind.

The other incident, one which spoiled the day for the owner, was the fouling of the starting buoy by Dr. Weidemann (assisted by Mr. Parsons.) Their boat Joan had to go off its course to avoid running into another and it became entangled with the buoy's anchoring gear. So the racing pennant had to be hauled down. Joan being disqualified.

SWIMMING POOL

Visitors to the club house saw the commodious swimming pool being hurried to completion, and it is expected ready for use on August 30, with an opening ceremony on the following day. This will be one of the great attractions of Yokohama, with flood lighting for night bathing, and refreshments served al fresco.

The moonlight dinner dance organized by Hon. Secretary Pestalozzi was a quiet success. Members, sensible to the distress in Europe, attended because of the coolness, enjoying dinner put of doors under the most perfect conditions, with the traditional silver sea looking its most entrancing.

Soviet-Finnish Tension High Again

Domei Tsushin
